Crisp Wears One On Each Foot.

Donald Crisp has a pair of gorgeous Scotch plaid socks of a kind that are worth ten dollars a couple and will never fade or wear out, and all that sort of thing. There's an interesting story back of the socks; for they were made for the Paramount photoplay director by a fine old Scotch lady, Mother Crindak, back in the old country.

Mother Crindak is blind, and she and another old Scotch woman are supported in a Scottish Home for the Blind by Director Crisp. Each year the old ladies send him some gift from Scotland that they have made with their own hands, and this year Mother Crindak sent the hand-woven and hand-dyed socks. The hose are of black, gray and white plaid, and every stage of their making, from the time the wool left the sheep, was done by hand. In the stores they would retail for about $5 each.

Donald Crisp wears them proudly about the lot at the Lasky studio in Hollywood.

Camera Endangers Popular Pastime.

The clipping service has rendered the following account of itself in bringing to hand proof that the motion picture machine is becoming a Power (or Simplex) in frustrating the designs of tricky lawyers, engaged by coin-conjuring clients, to collect damages for fancied hurts and wrongs. Among other examples set forth in Popular Mechanics Magazine is this one.

A woman sued the street railway company for damages sustained while alighting from a car. She claimed to have been permanently injured so that she was no longer able to perform her usual household duties.

When the case came to trial the court room was darkened and a picture shown wherein the woman was washing, hanging out her clothes after having washed them, and splitting kindling wood. Evidence in this case, however, would have failed to convince the jury, as the defense contended the pictures had been taken before the accident occurred.

During the operation of the machine, however, while the operator was concealed in a position which enabled him to secure a good picture of the plaintiff, the machine turned so that it took in a portion of a neighboring billboard. On this was the advertisement of an operatic entertainment. It was easily proved that the advertising matter was placed on the billboard after the date of the accident, and the jury found for the defendant.

Praise from Petrova Praise Indeed.

"More is required of a director now than ever before," says Olga Petrova. Really, a director these days has to know a good deal of everything. He often has to have medical knowledge—frequently he is required to look up legal questions, and, in the staging of courtroom scenes, he may have to consult a lawyer. Often he has to call a minister of the church into conference, and he always has to have the Encyclopedia Britannica at his elbow. At all times he must be up to date on all topics of the day.

Josephus, who was the earliest and monumentarily best of all the Gordon Trents, has this to say:

"There is a breed of super-conceited, self opinionated, unmitigatedly nerved, abnormally swelled headed mock geniuses who are taking money from the newspapers and magazines of these United States . . . they are legion, they are as profuse as rabbits right here in our own Gotham town.

"They parade under the title of Columnist, Editor, Critic or what not . . . most of 'em should be wary of the Compulsory Labor Law . . . most of 'em should be swinging a pick, not slinging ink or pounding a typewriter.

"These polite burglars generally and generously accredit themselves with incomparable ability and unquestionable knowledge . . . they drivel and prattle incessantly . . . they display a dim ray of intelligence occasionally."

"Tarzan" and Real Apes Do Red Cross Work in Capital

FRONT page publicity was secured in the newspapers of Washington, D. C., for "Tarzan of the Apes," coincident with the presentation of the big First National attraction at Tom Moore's Strand theater last week.

This was brought about through the employment of the trained apes, Charles the Great, and his consort, in selling on the streets special copies of Red Cross editions of the daily papers that were issued during the last days of the recent drive. The apes were taken to Washington to participate in the opening of "Tarzan," and upon the suggestion of their trainer, V. P. Wormwood, their services were requisitioned by Red Cross officials, who gave the animals and the production they represented much valuable newspaper comment in return.

Charles the Great and his lady were driven about the city in an especially decorated car by Mrs. John B. Pitney, of the motor corps, and other Red Cross workers accompanied the cavalcade to check up accounts and keep the crowds in order.

The largest Sunday audiences in the history of the Strand packed themselves into the house at the opening of "Tarzan on Sunday, May 19. The film was preceded by a special prologue, staged ar a mass of tropical verdure, in which the apes were put through a series of stunts and tableaux, supported by several acrobats in jungle costume.

"It's the greatest adventure story that has ever been shown in any of my houses," said Tom Moore at the end of the performance. "A few more productions of this calibre would make the life of any exhibitor an enviable one. Judging from the crowds that passed through my stiles I guess we outdrew everything else in the capital two to one."

Tornado Shown in Screen Telegram.

The first pictures of the destruction caused by the great tornado which recently swept Iowa, killing ten persons, injuring scores of others and causing a loss of more than a half million dollars, feature Screen Telegram No. 27, released by Mutual June 2.

The recent fire at San Francisco, Cal., which destroyed several government plants, including the Fowler aeroplane factory, is also shown in this issue.

Other interesting subjects include President and Mrs. Wilson attending a benefit ball game at the capital, pictures from Chicago, showing the monster demonstration made in greeting the Belgium heroes of the battle of Liege, who are returning to the battle front in France; pictures of marines building a pontoon bridge across the Potomac in thirty-seven minutes; pictures from Philadelphia, showing 10,000 shipbuilders celebrating the success of the "ship-a-day" program by parading through the city; baseball fans presenting American soldiers and sailors with baseball outfits.

"The Heart of Mexico" (Educational).

"The Heart of Mexico," the first instalment of George D. Wright's series of pictures made for the Educational Films Corporation and entitled "Mexico Today," has achieved a decided hit at the New York Rivoli theater, and its release in June to American theaters generally is looked forward to with keen interest.

It begins with views of the busy life in the Central Plaza of Mexico City, then takes the visitor to the chief points of political or mercantile interest, spreads the wonderful panorama of the volcano-guarded Valley of Mexico, the beauty of the semi-tropical parks, the grandeur of Chapultepec, and the rich residences of the Paseo de la Reforma and the glory of the Independence Monument. The lively finish of the reel is the exhibition of a charactristic boy-and-dog circus, one of the Mexican street amusements by which the vagrant youngsters pick up coppers.

The scenes of "Mexico Today" are not mere travels, because Mr. Wright always brings out the characteristic activities of the people, i. e., he gets the Mexicans to do things instead of merely posing before the camera eye. Pictures of President Carranza's mansion, of the late President Madero's wrecked home, and of the citadel where Felix Diaz held out in 1913 are vivid reminders of the revolution.

Romance and Thrills in Ned Finley Play.

Ned Finley, the hero of many a screen battle, appears in another sympathetic role in "The Man from Nowhere," the current Blue Ridge Drama released by General Film. A number of thrilling situations and a delightful bit of romance have been woven into a story which is expected to prove of great interest. A dramatic touch has been given by the sawmill scene in which the hero is the central figure. Marion Henry and Harry Hamill provide strong support. The locations used present some most attractive mountain scenery, and add greatly to the attractiveness of the release.

Chadwick Returns from Visit to Kleine Offices

I. E. CHADWICK, the guiding head of Rialto-De Luxe Productions, has just returned from a flying trip to the Middle West. The purpose of this journey was to come in contact with the local managers of the George Kleine System, which is handling "The Unchastened Woman," and which will handle all of the De Luxe product until further notice. "The Unchastened Woman" will be released immediately, and advance bookings are said to be coming in fast.

"It is the purpose of Rialto-De Luxe to establish a higher quality of pictures under their trade mark. It has more than achieved its purpose," said an official of the company. "It is now up to us to keep up, if not transcend, the standard reached. Only recognized plays of merit or exceptional best sellers wil be found in the output of this concern."

Fully realizing the value of stars whose box office attraction has been proven, Mr. Chadwick says stars of high merit only will be employed. Negotiations are now in progress for stars and directors, and within a short time an announcement will be made regarding them.

Rialto Showing Keystone Reissues.

With a former Keystone comedy, "Ambrose's Cup of Woe," featuring Mack Swain, on the Rialto program for the week of June 2 comes the announcement that Manager Rothapfel is to present at this theater sixteen of the former Mack Sennett-Keystone comedies which have just been reissued by the Triangle.

Out-and-Out Dramatic Role Is Madge Kennedy's Latest

MADGE KENNEDY'S scope as a star in Goldwyn Pictures broadens with her successive productions, and the choice of her plays is a matter of keen importance to those who direct her professional destiny. Always it is aimed to present Madge Kennedy in a part as much as possible unlike any with which she has yet been identified, and in "The Service Star," by Charles A. Logue, in which Goldwyn presents her on June 30, Miss Kennedy is expected to show her admirers what she can do in her first out-and-out dramatic role.

"The Service Star" is, as its title indicates, a drama of today. While it is in no sense a war play, not one scene carrying a suggestion of the world conflict, the story is built around the emotions of half a dozen people who are deeply involved in the workings of the draft.

Miss Kennedy's role is that of Marilynn March, a girl of plain appearance and humdrum life, whose wealthy relatives keep her in the background. Thrilled by the war the girl envies the women doing war work, each with a sweetheart or a husband at the front. And when she announces that she is a war bride, as other fictional heroines have done, she is regarded almost as a heroine. In the result of her deception, however, audiences will find their great surprise.

Charles Miller directs, and the production is done in the characteristic Goldwyn manner, enlisting the admirable work of Hugo Ballin as art director, and a cast of finished players, including Clarence Oliver, a leading man new to Goldwyn Pictures; Tammany Young, Jules Cowles, and William Bechtel. The feminine interest is sustained by Maude Turner Gordon, Mabel Ballin, Victory Bateman, and Zula Ellsworth.

June 23 Is Next Pickford Day.

The cast of "How Could You, Jean?", the Arteraft picture released June 23, starring Mary Pickford, includes a round half dozen players of unusual skill in screen representations. First among these comes Casson Ferguson, who plays the juvenile lead.

Herbert Standing and Spottiswoode Aitken are screen players who are famous for their many characterizations of old-men types, and they have important parts. Fanny Midgely, Larry Peyton and Zazu Pitts round up the list.

In addition there are seven clever child actors, Emma Gerdes, Burwell Hamerick, Wesley Barry, Althea Worthley, Dorothy Rosher, Jack Herbert and Valeria Traxler.

Install Boiler for "Salome."

A special boiler, according to an announcement from the William Fox offices, was installed on the lot adjoining one of the huge stages where one of the scenes in the Theda Bara super-production, "Salome," was taken at Hollywood, Cal. The set was the apartment of Herod, and to give it the weird lighting effect desired steam was circulated through all the pillars of the apartment in which were apertures with electric fixtures. The combination of steam and the arc lights gave the effect of burning oil.

Pathe's Double Bill Gets Publicity.

Pathe's invasion of Broadway last week with "The Yellow Ticket" and "More Trouble" at the two Rothapfel houses was backed by a strong publicity campaign which resulted in the publication of four full pages, 32 columns of space, in New York and Brooklyn dailies.

Early in the week the Publicity Department issued a sheet reproducing the material available at that time. This sheet is printed on two sides with the heading "How Pathe Hit Broadway," page one giving what the newspapers say and page two what the trade papers say.

The sheet shows the actual clippings from the papers and not "extracts."

"Good Night Nurse" Is Next Arbuckle.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle is having the time of his young life up at Arrowhead Hot Springs producing his latest comedy, which has to do with revels in a sanitarium. The picture is called "Good Night, Nurse," and is said to give the rotund comedian splendid opportunities for funmaking. "Fatty" has laid in a special flock of gorgeous silk pajamas and bathrobes to be worn in the picture. He will be supported by those wiry comics, Al St. John and Buster Keaton. Alice Lake will be his leading woman.

Perret Picture Is Story of France and America

ALTHOUGH the first of the Perret Productions being produced by Leonce Perret is rapidly nearing completion the title is still withheld. Mr. Perret has a powerful and compelling title up his sleeve, and is not taking any chances until his production is completed.

That the production offers splendid opportunity for an extremely original and forceful title may be judged from the story, which carries its characters from America to England and France and back again, through love and war, mystery and intrigue, battlefronts and hospitals right on to happiness and home. Mr. Perret is sparing no expense and effort in turning out what he intends to be his crowning photodramatic achievement.

The production will present in an entirely unique and original way a most worthy and powerful propaganda. Mr. Perret will present on the screen a visualization of the growing bond of friendship and love between the people of the United States and the people of France.

Pictograph Submarine Clips in Demand.

The possibilities offered wideawake exhibitors when big news stories "break" were forcefully illustrated the other day when the American people stood amazed at the first announcement flashed over the press wires that German U-boats had invaded the waters of the western Atlantic and commenced their deadly warfare against American shipping. That many of the country's leading exhibitors were eager to grasp the opportunity to put over a "scoop" on this big story of the day's news was attested by the fact that numerous requests were received at the various exchanges of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation throughout the day the news was first flashed, and on the succeeding day calling for clips from Paramount-Bray Pictographs touching on the general subjects of submarine warfare and coast defense.

"Moral Suicide" to Go Out as Special.

Pathe will release "Moral Suicide" as a special seven-reel feature independent from the regular program the week of June 23, giving all exhibitors the opportunity of playing this successful Ivan picture that has already registered a real hit in 100 New York theaters. The subject is one of the feature plays to be released by Pathe under its policy of distributing "specials" that are of more than ordinary importance.

Ebony Discards Dialect Titles in its Negro Comedies

SINCE the Ebony comedy productions, with all colored casts, playing stories with characteristic situations and motives, have been played generally over the country comment of a favorable nature has been heard upon the subtitles and inserts. The fact is being commended that the inserts are not in negro dialect. This attitude toward the elimination of dialect bears out the judgment of President L. J. Pollard, of the Ebony Film Corporation, who decided at the outset not to attempt forcing the comedy by recourse to dialect.

"We had very good reasons for eliminating dialect," says Mr. Pollard. "First all dialect is hard to read and understand on the screen, where there is such limited time allowed for inspection by an audience. The simpler the wording of a subtitle or insert the easier it is to read and grasp. Second, dialect is not necessarily representative of the speech of the race, and has really no standard, since the cleverest of writers disagree as to its predominating peculiarities. Thirdly, the humor of the negro is mainly in his mannerisms and his actions, and he makes these inimitably humorous when he tries to be. This is demonstrated in the Ebony comedies, because nine-tenths of the spectators, after seeing one run off, are not able to say whether dialect was used or not. Those who have heard colored people talk are led by the screen action mentally to translate the words not into dialect, but into the habitual tone and inflection of the negro, which is really inimitable in cold type, and which is entirely apart from occasional mistakes in pronunciation and grammar."

Adda Gleason to Appear as Ruth in "The One Woman"

MISS ADDA GLEASON, who will be happily remembered for her sterling interpretation of the title role of "Ramona," has been selected to interpret the role of "Ruth," the leading feminine part in Thomas Dixon's "The One Woman," which is now being photodramatized at the Brunton Studios in Hollywood.

Miss Gleason is a Chicago girl, having been born in that city and educated in its public schools, after which she was graduated from Notre Dame Academy and the Chicago Musical College. She made her debut in the amusement world as a member of the Marlowe stock company, after which she toured the country with Julia Marlowe for a season. Among the plays of the spoken stage in which she is best remembered are "The Lion and the Mouse," "Mrs. Dane's Defense" and "The Three of Us." She started working in pictures about four years ago when she became a member of the Selig company, after which she appeared in productions of the Lubin and American companies.

Miss Gleason is an ideal type to interpret the role of Ruth Gordon, the persecuted wife of the socialistic clergyman. A diminutive girl, a trifle over five feet tall, with dark brown hair and large, appealing eyes, she is endowed with a sweet personality, together with exceptional histrionic ability, the combination of which made her interpretation of Ramona one of the long-to-be-remembered characterizations of the screen. And while the role of Ruth Gordon in "The One Woman" is nothing like that of Ramona, still it calls for the same kind of type which was responsible for Dr. Dixon's being especially desirous of securing Miss Gleason's services to interpret the part.

Hearst-Pathe Shows Raid Survivors.

Two more feats were scored last week by the Hearst-Pathe News organization in obtaining the first animated pictures of the results of the raid on the Atlantic Coast by German submarines. In the Hearst-Pathe News No. 46, which was released Wednesday, and exhibited in all leading theaters in New York, there is a vivid presentment of the first results of the sinking of American ships almost within sight of the shores of New York and New Jersey. A map showing the probable course of the U-boats in American waters adds much interest to these pictures.

In the Hearst-Pathe News No. 47, released Saturday, are many exclusive scenes of the American transport President Lincoln, which was sunk by the German submarines.

Essanay Begins on "Young America."

The cast for "Young America," the forthcoming George K. Spoor feature, has been selected and production started at the Essanay studios June 10. Director Arthur Berthelet spent the week in New York closing contracts with the players. The cast practically were all selected from the speaking stage in New York and Chicago. Sets have been erected in the Essanay studios and outside locations all secured, so that it is expected to finish the production in record time. The photoplay was written from the stage play by Fred Ballard and produced by Cohan and Harris.

Miss Pickford Making "Capt. Kidd, Jr."

Work is progressing rapidly on "Capt. Kidd, Jr.," Miss Pickford's new Artcraft picture from the stage play, with scenario by Frances Marion. William D. Taylor is directing, and it is said the picture will be completed in record time. It is also said that this will be one of her most amusing and original vehicles.

Lynn and Turpin Run From Rabbit and Lion

ANIMALS are again much in evidence in the latest Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy, "Two Tough Tenderfeet," scheduled for release on June 17, and it would seem that every living thing around the fun factory where these laugh-producers are made soon absorbs the humor with which the air is charged and develops comedy talents.

Most any one can make a rabbit run, but it is some trick to make the rabbit run in a desired direction, and a still greater feat to make the rabbit chase his natural enemy, man, but that is exactly what Br'er Rabbit does in "Two Tough Tenderfeet," and he gives Charlie Lynn and Ben Turpin the run of their lives.

The Mack Sennett lion covers himself with glory with his histrionic achievements, and the way he grins when he puts the two tough tenderfeet to flight would indicate that he thoroughly appreciated the humor of the situation.

Another animal with a sense of humor is the calico pony which gets very tired and leisurely lies down when the two heroes leap upon his back to pursue the escaping villain who is tearing up the trail to more congenial surroundings.

The cast includes Polly Moran, Ben Turpin, Charlie Lynn, Bert Roach and Laura LaVarnie. Richard Jones directed.

Rolin Completes "Kicking the Germ Out of Germany"

PATHE has just received a wire carrying news that the Rolin Film Company has completed a burlesque on the Kaiser. Hal Roach, president and director general says: "We are calling it 'Kicking the Germ Out of Germany.' It is a very good picture and we will rush it through to you as fast as we can."

If "Kicking the Germ Out of Germany" is as good as "Cleopatsy," starring Toto, and "Somewhere in Turkey," starring Harold Lloyd, to mention two of the company's recent productions, it should prove a real kick.

"Say! Young Fellow" Comes June 16.

The prominence of Douglas Fairbanks as a screen favorite, coupled with the novel theme and delightful photographic effects, make "'Say! Young Fellow," the Artcraft release of June 16, an exceptional subject for exploitation. The Fairbanksian athletics and methods are largely in evidence and can be made the subject of liberal publicity.

In the role of a newspaper reporter Douglas Fairbanks should prove interesting to the newspaper men throughout the country, who will, no doubt, be amused by the extraordinary efforts this young man puts forth to accomplish his purposes. The author and director is Joseph Henaberry.

Marie Osborne in Dramatic Role Heads Pathe June 23

BABY MARIE OSBORNE, the little Pathe star, has gone in for serious drama. Her first appearance as a bona fide dramatic star is announced in "The Voice of Destiny," a five-part Pathe play which heads the program to be released the week of June 23. In this play Baby Marie plays the role of Little Marie Lind, a winsome bit of femininity who is the prime favorite of an indulgent uncle.

Episode 16 of "The House of Hate," Pathe's most successful serial, is released on this program. This chapter is called "The Vial of Death," and in the two reels there is a full measure of thrill, mystery and suspense.

What is said to be the best Toto comedy yet released by Pathe is "Cleopatsy," a clever two-reel travesty on the story of "Cleopatra," the serpent of the Nile. The Rolin studios have given the comedy a rich production, employing heavy palace sets and beautiful girls for the throne room scenes.

"Are Crooks Dishonest?" is the title of a Harold Lloyd comedy released in this program, and Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels puts the fun-punch in every foot of the one-reeler.

Part 7 of "Britain's Bulwarks" is entitled "Fighting the Hun at St. Quentin," and shows the Germans blowing the crossroads, villages, manufacturing plants and churches in their effort to raze as much of France as they can.

The Post Travel Series picture on this program is "St Croix," and is one of the most beautiful and interesting yet offered, showing intimate views of life in what were the Danish West Indies till they were recently purchased by Uncle Sam.

Hearst-Pathe News No. 52 is released Wednesday, June 26, and No. 53 on Saturday, June 29.

Brunton Builds Big Set Inside of Glass Studio

THE Temple of Man" described in Thomas Dixon's novel, "The One Woman," now being photodramatized at the Brunton studios, is a notable structure, one of the most extensive churches or meeting houses ever erected for film purposes if it were necessary to erect it in its entirety. However, only the interior of "The Temple of Man" is needed for screen purposes. The technical department of the studio solved the difficulty by putting the temple interior set into the big glass stage.

It was thought that a stage would not be large enough for the tiers of seats required to accommodate the great crowds to be used in the "Temple of Man" scenes. Fortunately, the largest glass stage at the Brunton studio is of exceptional size, and it was found that by removing all of the other sets and devoting the entire space to the seats, aisles, pillars, pulpit, and rostrum of the temple the big scenes were capable of being made as extensive as any camera could grasp for an interior.

Mason-Truex Team Begins in July.

Production work will be commenced early in July on the first Shirley Mason-Ernest Truex pictures of the John Emerson-Anita Loos series for Paramount release, is the statement of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation following the return of Miss Loos from Los Angeles, where she had been conferring with Jesse L. Lasky on the initial scripts. John Emerson will personally direct the pictures, which will be produced at the eastern studios.

Pathe Issues Seventh War Picture.

Vandalism and destructiveness of the Huns on the Western front are shown in "Fighting the Hun at St. Quentin," seventh picture in the "Britain's Bulwarks" series of exclusive British official war pictures, released by Pathe June 23. In their fight the Germans blow up all the crossroads and villages to hinder the British advance. The allied engineers quickly restore communication by constructing a new road around the outer lip of a huge mine crater.

"Uncle Tom's" Ice Plays Hide and Seek With Dawley

J. SEARLE DAWLEY, the veteran director for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is noted for his even disposition, but his temper was given a severe trial when he took the scenes of Eliza crossing the river on the floating ice, in the production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the Paramount picture starring Marguerite Clark.

The New Meadows River at Bath, Me., was selected for this location, as it was breaking up and huge blocks of ice were floating down to the ocean. Dawley arrived on the scene, selected the location and issued orders for an early start the next morning. Everybody was on hand, the dogs were baying and straining at their leashes, and Eliza with the child in her arms had worked up a fine expression of fear and desperation. But the ice had disappeared!

A searching party was organized to trace the truant props, and it was discovered some miles up the river, where it had been floated back by the incoming tide, which, at this point, reaches a height of eight feet. By this time clouds had appeared, and when the sky was clear again it was found that the elusive ice had floated down the river again. It was pursued to the original spot selected for the location and the scenes were taken as planned.

Scene from "More Trouble" (Pathe).

It is Now "The City of Tears."

The title of Carmel Myers' next release, about which so much has been written, has been changed from "A Penny's Worth of Love" to "The City of Tears." It will take its place on the Bluebird release list on June 24 in place of "After the War," which has been set back until July 8.

In "The City of Tears" Miss Myers picturizes the prima donna of an Italian opera company which has closed after a financially unsuccessful season, leaving the members to shift for themselves to the best of their ability.

Edwin August does strong work in the role of the Italian storekeeper and he is assisted materially by the titles which apparently were handled by a person who had made a study of the United States dialect of an imported Italian. Other members of the cast are Earl Rodney, Beatrice Joy and Lottie Krause.

Lois Meredith Supports Barrymore.

Lois Meredith, well known star of the stage and screen, is playing the leading feminine role opposite Jack Barrymore in the Paramount picture, "On the Quiet," which is now being produced at the Fifty-sixth street studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation under the direction of Chet Withey.

Miss Meredith was formerly a Paramount star and will be remembered in the two successful pictures, "The Woman" and "Help Wanted," released several years ago. In the Barrymore photoplay Miss Meredith plays the part of the wealthy heiress with whom Barrymore is in love.

Scene from "The Heart of a World" (World).

There Are Star Actors if No Star in De Mille Play

WORD comes from the Pacific Coast studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation that Cecil B. DeMille has completed the work of photographing his Artcraft special picture, "We Can't Have Everything." The featured players in the picture are Kathlyn Williams, Elliott Dexter, Wanda Hawley and Theodore Roberts, though it is not a star production. Others who are prominent in the cast are Sylvia Breamer, Thurston Hall, Tully Marshall and Raymond Hatton. The cast in its makeup seems to be a most important one.

There are many unusually effective scenes promised, including the "Cascades," a well known New York roof garden, with a great company of guests and a specially engaged troup of ballet dancers.

Comedy will reign supreme, though there will be plenty of real drama as well. However, there will be, it is declared, more laughs in this production than in any former film directed by Mr. DeMille, and the burlesqueing of a "movie" company at work is said to provide much amusement. In these scenes Tully Marshall as the "director" proves that as a comedian he is a past master.

Kathlyn Williams has a particularly striking role in the part of Charity Cheever, a society woman. Elliott Dexter is a young millionaire with a hopeless love staring him in the face.

The story was by Rupert Hughes, while Wm. C. DeMille wrote the photoplay.

Hundreds of beautifully gowned women, soldiers, Red Cross nurses, dancers and others contribute to the general excellence of the ensemble scenes.

Farnum Starts Work on Second Zane Grey Story

WILLIAM FARNUM, according to a telegram received at the William Fox offices from the Fox studios at Hollywood, Cal., has begun work on the picturization of "The Rainbow Trail," the famous novel of Zane Grey's.

"The Rainbow Trail" is a sequel to "Riders of the Purple Sage," also written by Zane Grey, and recently completed for fall release by Mr. Farnum. It is being directed by Frank Lloyd, who also guided the work on "Riders of the Purple Sage."

The climax of "Riders of the Purple Sage" came when Lassiter, the terror of the Utah border, rolled a huge stone into a narrow canyon blocking pursuit by Mormons, and at the same time sealing himself and a woman and a child up in a small valley.

"The Rainbow Trail" takes up the life in the lost valley ten years later, when the child, now grown to womanhood, is spirited out of the canyon by Mormon agents.

Those who have read the "Rainbow Trail" in book form say that it is even stronger in its dramatic situations and in the swiftness of its action than "Riders of the Purple Sage."

Kansas Mothers Approve More Goldwyn Pictures

THREE more Goldwyn pictures have received the stamp of approval of the Kansas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations in their statewide campaign for better films as a part of their child welfare movement. Early in March the organizations, acting in conjunction with the Kansas Board of Review, gave seven Goldwyn productions marked and unusual commendation in listing them for presentation on "family nights"—dates set apart by the Board of Review and the child welfare workers for showing pictures that are entertaining for adults and at the same time highly moral fare for children. The co-operation of the Board of Review and the mothers' organization has made "family nights" in Kansas a huge success.

The three latest Goldwyn pictures to receive approbation are "The Danger Game," starring Madge Kennedy; Mae Marsh in "The Face in the Dark," and "Joan of Plattsburg," starring Mabel Normand. These, together with the seven other Goldwyn pictures previously approved, are being shown throughout the state on the designated "family nights."

Miss Glaum at Work on "Marriage."

Having completed her second Paralta Play, "Shackled," which is now being released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, Louise Glaum started work on her third Paralta production, "Marriage," last week at the Brunton studios in Hollywood.

The story is a strong society drama especially written for Miss Glaum by Denison Clift, and is being produced under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Miss Glaum will be supported by John Gilbert, Herschell Mayall, George Fisher, Joseph J. Dowling, Ida Lewis, and Charles Gunn.

General Film Releases Sixty-first O. Henry

THAT novel O. Henry story, "Sisters of the Golden Circle," is on the General Film release list for the week. This is the sixty-first O. Henry story in the Broadway Star Features series, and presents a trio of popular players in a unique and typical O. Henry plot. Edward Earle, Agnes Ayres, and Alice Terry are the featured principals.

Practically the entire action of "Sisters of the Golden Circle" was laid on the top of a Fifth avenue bus, the picture being staged during the final week of the Third Liberty Loan drive in New York City. Numerous novel situations are presented during the story, which recounts unusual adventures of two honeymoon couples during a sightseeing tour of New York. O. Henry has provided a surprising climax which has been effectively worked out in the film version.

Following "Sisters of the Golden Circle" will come "The Dismissal of Silver Phil," a tensely dramatic Wolfville tale by Alfred Henry Lewis in which Patricia Palmer, Bob Burns, George Holt, and Hattie Buskirk are featured as the popular Western characters in this author's humorous chronicles of frontier adventure.

Mix Dabbles in Comedy; Says Stuff Is Too Fast

WHILE working on "Fame and Fortune," his next release, Tom Mix took a dip into comedy recently to help his friend, Henry Lehrman, director of the Fox-Lehrman Sunshine comedies at the Hollywood studios.

The comedy was "Who's Your Father?" and the plot called for an actor who would typify the Western cowboy, and who could ride a horse as one to the saddle born. After a prolonged search among his companies for a player with such qualifications, Mr. Lehrman was in despair, when he mentioned his trouble to Tom Mix.

The comedy started with the rescue by the cowboy's dog of a baby that was floating down a gorge toward a cataract in a tiny crib. The cowboy takes the foundling to his cabin. Then the cowboy finds himself not only beset with the troubles of feeding an infant, but also is the object of a spinster who, by claiming the baby, hopes to compromise the cowboy and thus force him to marry her.

Tom Mix.

Tox Mix has engaged in many strenuous plays of Western life, but after Lehrman got through with him he said, "Never again! This comedy stuff is too fast for me!"

Louise Huff Is at Work On First World Release

LOUISE HUFF, the "Dolly Varden" of the screen, began work at the World studio at Fort Lee a week ago under the direction of William S. Earle in "Father Dear Charmer," a five-reel production written by Charles S. Sarver. The supporting company includes John Bowers, Charles Dungan, Eugenie Woodward, Jack Raymond, and Frank Norcross.

Heretofore the World in making a picture has engaged a cast and the various departments have talked things over with the actors and director. No special conference, where every department has been represented, was ever held. So anxious was the World organization that Miss Huff's first picture be a success that a meeting was called for everybody concerned in the picture. The symposium took place at the World studio at Fort Lee. The story was first discussed with the writers, both continuity and scenarioists. The details of the cast were discussed and the photographs of the leads and the minor players were displayed. The wardrobe department was present, and the costuming of each player was settled then and there.

The scenic and property departments received their orders and suggestions. The locations, photographs of which were taken from the files, were decided upon, and the data furnished to the director and assistant directors. This conference consumed five hours, and will result in a saving of at least four working days in the making of the picture, reducing the cost of the production several thousand dollars. Another result of this conference was in the ironing out of any improbabilities in the story, saving the director valuable time, as in most cases where a scenario has to be changed it becomes necessary to lay off the company and cease work until matters are straightened out.

General Film to Release Anna Luther's "Her Moment"

A SCREEN event of importance is the early release of a special feature production, "Her Moment," in which Anna Luther will be the star. Negotiations are being closed with General Film Company for the distribution. Critics who have had a view of the picture declare it to be the best work yet done by Miss Luther.

Miss Luther has appeared in numerous productions of high rank in the last few years. Her first work in pictures was with the Reliance Company. Since that time she has appeared in many screen productions. Her most recent picture is "Moral Suicide," in which she was featured, and in which her work identified her as a magnetic player. An effective sales campaign will be placed back of the Anna Luther, "Her Moment," production.

Scene from "The Scarlet Road" (Fox).

Campbell Is to Produce Jewel's "The Yellow Dog"

COLIN CAMPBELL, one of the most successful of motion picture directors, has been engaged to direct "The Yellow Dog," the picturization of Henry Irving Dodge's patriotic story which will be released by Jewel Productions at the earliest possible date.

The Dodge story first appeared in the May 4 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, and since has been issued by Harper & Brothers in book form. Harper & Brothers are marketing it in two forms, the library edition in cloth binding, and the popular edition in paper binding, which will be in great demand as soon as the Jewel picture is released.

That Colin Campbell has been engaged to direct the picture is an assurance as to the quality of the production.

In directing "The Yellow Dog," Director Campbell will endeavor to create a wonderful boy star something of which motion pictures have been unable to claim to the present. He must be a regular boy something between the babies of the screen and those players known as juveniles. He must resemble the wonderful red-headed "Torchey" of Sewell Ford fame, with all his slangy talk paraphrased in speaking titles, with every devilish boyish trait, and with it all an honorable youngster who takes his lickings with a smile if not with relish.

That is the character Colin Campbell is sure he will create.

Lois Weber Completes a Feature.

The final scenes have just been taken for Lois Weber's latest six-part superproduction, made under the title of "The Forbidden Box," from the story by E. V. Durling. It is the tale of a modern Pandora and a twentieth century Epithemeus, and the clever woman producer has given a decidedly new twist to the old Greek legend of the maid who loosed troubles galore on the world because of her insatiable curiosity.

Mildred Harris, whose characterizations of Linnie in "The Price of a Good Time," and Sydney Page in "The Doctor and the Woman," have placed her in the first ranks of the screen's emotional stars, plays the stellar part. In her support are seen Harry Woodward, Priscilla Dean, Fred Goodwin, Bruce Delameter and Kate Toncray.

Story of Bohemia Is "Scarlet Road."

A powerful delineation of life in New York's Bohemia is given by Gladys Brockwell in "The Scarlet Road," which is announced from the William Fox offices as the next special feature for June releases. The play shows how a young girl of Puritan training is enmeshed in the free, unconventional life of the art studios, and how she emerges from the maelstrom of temptation with a clean soul. "The Scarlet Road" was written by Charles Kenyon and directed by Edward LeSaint.

A particularly strong cast supports Miss Brockwell, the other players being Betty Shade, L. C. Shumway, Charles Clary, and William Scott. With the latter three the star has three leading men.

New Title for Madge Evans Picture.

The new World Picture in which Madge Evans and Johnny Hines are starred has been renamed "Neighbors" in place of "Clarissa," the working title under which the picture was known. July 29 has been set as the date for publishing this unusual attraction.

Who's Who in Nazimova's Making of "L'Occident"

A BIG production staff, directed by Albert Capellani, will handle Mme. Nazimova's next multiple-reel Screen Classics, Inc., picture, a screen version by Mr. Capellani and June Mathis of "L'Occident," by the Belgian dramatist, Kistemaecker. The actual work of photography began June 10. Henri Menessier, a French technical director, has been engaged as a part of the Nazimova organization, and he has completed the art drawings of sets and scenery. E. J. Shulter is now in charge of the execution of these plans.

Mr. Capellani considers that "L'Occident" will strengthen the impression already made in Mme. Nazimova's previous Screen Classics.

For his cameraman, Albert Capellani has chosen Eugene Gaudio. Gaudio is a member of the Cinema Camera clubs of both New York and California.

A few of the leading players already have been decided upon. Charles Bryant again will have the role opposite the star. Richard Barthelmess will play the important part of the young ensign, Arnault.

Sally Crute will be prominent. E. L. Fernandez will be intrusted with the part of Taibe, a crafty Arabian.

Scene from "The Venus Model" (Goldwyn).

Favorites Old and New Back Star in "The Venus Model"

GOLDWYN has left nothing undone to do full justice to Mabel Normand in "The Venus Model," for which success greater than she has yet enjoyed is predicted for the star. A cast of unusual excellence has been chosen for the play, which is described as "the perfect 36 of screen plays." Miss Normand's leading man is Rodrique LaRocque, who makes his first appearance with an Eastern producing company, although he has had varied screen and stage experience. While but nineteen years of age his mature physique equals the sureness of his acting. The star and her leading man are ideal foils.

Next comes little Nadia Gary, aged six, in the important role of "Dimples," companion and confidant of the star. She has appeared with practically every company in support of many stars, but in "The Venus Model" the child has a part of greater appeal than she has yet had. Her beauty and appealing acting go far to make her presence a distinct delight.

Una Trevelyn, well known for her many stage successes, is the sympathetic vampire who makes trouble then wins the star's friendship.

Among the men are Alec B. Francis, an old favorite. He renders his usual able support in the role of Braddock, owner of the bathing suit factory where the star meets with many extraordinary adventures.

Edward Boulden, identified with Edison pictures for years, contributes his ability, and Alfred Hickman, distinguished in Belasco productions, assumes the villainies of Nathan Bergman, the buyer, whose attentions trouble the star. Edward Elkas also is in the cast, as is Albert Hackett, a juvenile.

Bennethum Installs Typhoons.

George W. Bennethum, one of Pennsylvania's live exhibitors, is installing Typhoon Cooling Systems in two of h houses, the Pictureland theater at Reading and the Palace theater at Coatesville.

This makes six houses in all that Mr. Bennethum is cooling with Typhoons. The other theaters were equipped last year, and comprise the Scenic and Hippodrome theaters at York, Pa.; the Hippodrome at Allentown, and the Hippodrome at Pottstown.

Snakeville Hero Has Role of Diplomat.

Slippery Slim, hero of many a Snakeville comedy, is present in a new role this week in the current General Film-Essanay release, "Slippery Slim, Diplomat." The beanpole comedian experiences some lively adventures in proving his right to the title, and succeeds in introducing a few novel laughgetters. The next release in this series will be "Slippery Slim and the Claim Agent."

"A Reckless Rover" (Ebony).

"A Reckless Rover," said to be the best of the Ebony comedies produced to date, is released this week by General Film. The company of negro players, reinforced by a number of new faces, introduces lively comedy, with its slapstick humor developed to a high pitch.

Edna Goodrich Is Making "The Gadabout" for Mutual

ORIENTAL strategy in diplomatic combat with the cleverness of an American woman furnishes the plot for "The Gadabout," Maibelle Heikes Justice's story which has been selected as the first vehicle for Edna Goodrich in a new series of Mutual productions. "The Gadabout" is now in the course of production at the Biograph studios in New York under the direction of Burton King. David Powell, who scored heavily with Olive Tell in "The Unforeseen" and "Her Sister," and with Ann Murdock in "The Beautiful Adventure" and "The Richest Girl," Empire-Mutual pictures, has been chosen to support Miss Goodrich in "The Gadabout."

"The Gadabout" is a society drama, laid in New York today and deals with high finance, secret diplomacy and exclusive society. Dishonest business is thwarted by means of oriental intrigue and both are beaten by the cleverness of a woman, a supposedly frivolous society butterfly, who, goaded by the threat of her husband's ruin, manipulates a cold-blooded financier and a wily diplomat to her own

"Swat the Fly" Uninterrupted Scream.

In the current Katzenjammer Kids cartoon comedy, "Swat the Fly," a fly annoys the Captain's wife, and a colony of bees attack the Captain. The subtitle of "Swat the Fly" is "The Birth of a Nuisance." Yes, Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" is kidded just a little bit. The novelty of the bee attack is in the fact that the Kids collect millions of them by means of a vacuum cleaner and discharge them in "gas attacks" on the unhappy parents. In the pre-release at the New York Rivoli, "Swat the Fly" was one uninterrupted scream. It has been one of the funniest cartoon comedies released.

Triangle Features Are Tales of Theater and of West

A ROMANCE of the West, "His Enemy, the Law," by Lillian Ducey, featuring Jack Richardson and Irene Hunt in dual roles, is the first release on the Triangle program for the week of June 16. A theatrical story, "Station Content," is the second release of the week, featuring Gloria Swanson and Lee Hill.

In "His Enemy, the Law," Jack Richardson as Captain Jack Rogers, after many years in the West, develops into a bandit known as "Red" Rogers. Later Richardson interprets Jack's son, John. Irene Hunt portrays Sarah Catherwood and later the daughter, Sally Randolph. Raymond Wells directed this production, and C. G. Peterson was the photographer.

"Station Content" deals with the loves and heartaches of the theatrical profession. Gloria Swanson, who received much favorable comment for her work with J. Barney Sherry in "Her Decision," will have an opportunity to strengthen her reputation in the role of Kitty Manning. Lee Hill and Arthur Millett are in the cast.

Catherine Carr wrote the story, with the scenario by Charles J. Wilson. Arthur Hoyt directed, and Elgin Leslie photographed.

A Keystone comedy, "Isn't It Warm?" with Harry Depp, William Dyer, and Claire McDowell, concludes the week's program.

Threé Big Writers Sell Stories to World Film

FOREST HALSEY, one of the most noted short story writers in America, whose work appears regularly in the leading magazines, has just sold a story to World Pictures. It bears the title of "The Crook of Dreams," and it is now being put into scenario form for early filming. Mr. Halsey, it is interesting to note, is not only a short story writer, but also a writer of plays. Five of his plays have been produced on the stage. No writer in America commands a higher price for the screen rights to his works than does Mr. Halsey.

After reading in the Moving Picture World that World Pictures is a buyer of moving picture stories in record-breaking time, E. Forst, who on the same day had placed a play with Al Woods for early production, came to the World scenario department last week and offered a complete scenario for sale. The work was read at once by the scenario staff and Charles E. Sarver, the World scenario editor, and made such a deep impression on the entire staff that it was purchased at once. Mr. Forst in the meantime had been waiting while the reading went on. The present title of the story is "The Prescription."

The screen rights to Elizabeth B. Carpenter's story, "The Quickening Flame," have just been purchased by World Pictures. Miss Carpenter is a well known writer, and her works have been interpreted in motion pictures by the leading screen stars.

5,000 People in New World Picture.

Over five thousand people will be seen in a new World Picture written by Harry O. Hoyt, of the World scenario department, in which Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley will be starred. Both the story and scenario of this attraction, which bears the title of "Making Good," were written by Mr. Hoyt, and the work may be said to be a combination of those elements which make educational pictures so interesting and a striking love story which gives it zest and a big appeal. For the present the theme of the picture is being kept a secret, but it is revealed that the subject is one of tremendous popular interest and a topic that has not yet been treated upon in pictures. So big is the picture considered by the World executives that it is expected that it will mark a distinct advance in direction, photography, and entertainment value.

"The Midnight Flyer" (Universal).

"The Midnight Flyer," the third of Universal's two-reel dramas, will be released during the week of June 24 at the request of exhibitors who report that the short melodramas are making a splendid impression upon their audiences.

The latest two-reeler is a combination between a Western and a railroad drama, with all the thrills of the West and the excitement of the life of railroading. Helen Gibson is the heroine of the story.

Davies, Young, Talmadge and Brady in June Selects

SELECT announces that in addition to Marion Davies' picture, "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," three Select Pictures will be released during June. These are "The Claw," presented by Clara Kimball Young; Constance Talmadge presented by Lewis J. Selznick in "Good Night, Paul," and Alice Brady in "The Whirlpool."

"The Claw" is a story of the African veldt from the pen of Cynthia Stockley, the gifted author of "Poppy," another African tale, the star of which happens to have been another of the Select players, Norma Talmadge. In it we see Clara Kimball Young first in a desert wagon, which is being uncertainly guided across the veldt by a drunken driver. Later Miss Young appears on horseback, and there are other glimpses of her in novel scenes.

Milton Sills is once more leading man, and in the supporting cast are the star's father, Edward Kimball; Marcia Manon, and Jack Holt.

True to the prediction of those who have closely followed her work that Constance Talmadge could play anything from high farce to tragedy and "get away with it" she appears for the first time in pure farce in "Good Night, Paul," and she makes good in this metier just as convincingly as she has done in "The Lesson" and "Up the Road With Sallie," recent among her Select productions, which are of a totally different type. There are practically two leading men in "Good Night, Paul," Nornan Kerry, who plays the husband, and Harrison Forde, who plays his counterpart. Then there is John Steppling, who, in the role of sprightly old M. Batiste Bordeaux, becomes wax in Matilda's clever fingers.

"The Whirlpool," Select's June release starring Alice Brady, is a clean drama. Miss Brady is seen in the role of a girl with high ideals who is unknowingly made to aid her guardian in his gambling pursuits. How this girl retrieves herself from the false position in which she is thus placed and works side by side with a judge on the bench to encompass the regeneration of one of her victims makes the fascinating photoplay which has been adapted by Eve Unsell from the successful novel of the same name by Victoria Morton.

The action of "The Whirlpool" is particularly swift and direct, and its handling clean and breezy throughout. Miss Brady's characterization of Bella Cavallo, the gambler's stepdaughter, is unusually skillful and from first to last the photoplay is marked by a simplicity and naturalness which are refreshing.

"Patriotism" is Finished.

"Patriotism," Bessie Barriscale's Paralta Play, has been completed at the Brunton studios. The picture will be given a showing at the studio for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Raymond B. West, director of the production, and Mr. Brunton both declare it to be an exceptional picture in many ways. It has gripping plot against a vivid background of the great war, which, however, is felt rather than seen. The screen version of "Patriotism" was written by Julian Louis Lamothe, who has since joined the colors.

Metro Is to Reissue Two Old Favorites of Exhibitors

IN response to demands from exhibitors, Metro Pictures Corporation has decided on the reissue of two of its most famous features, "Destiny, or the Soul of a Woman" and "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." "Fans" throughout the country have never forgotten these two productions, and requests for another view of them have influenced exhibitors to make so many requests that a reissue was necessary.

Emily Stevens is the star of "Destiny, or the Soul of a Woman." Her recent Metro and Screen Classics triumphs have stimulated popular interest in her earlier pictures. "Destiny" is an allegorical screen spectacle by Anthony Paul Kelly. Edwin Carewe directed it.

Edmund Breese is the star of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." This is a screen version of the poem of the same name by Robert W. Service. Magnificent snow scenes form the background for most of this five-act feature, which was directed by Herbert Blache. Great stretches of the snow-clad fields of the Yukon district, superb fights on the cold Alaskan wastes between men matched in muscle and strength, perilous avalanches that threaten the lives of men and dogs on the trail to the gold country—these are a few of the scenes shown in "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," which recreates for the spectator the splendid, virile life of the north country. Romance, tragedy, and bitter revenge give force and beauty to this pictured epic of the Yukon.

Mutual to Release Six of Outing's Chester Pictures

OUTING'S extraordinary adventure pictures, one-reel travel classics produced by C. L. Chester in collaboration with the editorial board of Outing, will be released through exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation one a week commencing June 30. The first release will be "Ex-Cannibal Carnival," a Fiji Island picture.

Announcement of the consummation of negotiations for the release of the Outing-Chester series through the Mutual Film Corporation was made following the return last week of James M. Sheldon, president of the Mutual, to the executive offices in Chicago from a trip to New York. The negotiations were conducted by Mr. Sheldon and Mr. Chester. The first six of the series and their release dates follow:

June 30. — "Ex-Cannibal Carnival," a story of the camera's search for the head-hunting savage of the South Sea Islands.

July 7.—"Kaieteur," an interesting journey through the strange wilderness of British Guiana, two weeks from civilization, to the famous waterfall, five times as high as Niagara.

July 14.—"Mountaineering Memory," a trip along untraveled trails in the mountains of British Columbia.

July 21. — "Zuni Kicking Races," a unique race, older than history, one of the strange customs of the Zunis of New Mexico, who live still in the pueblos of their prehistoric forefathers.

July 28. — "A White Wilderness," the Mount Columbia ice fields of British Columbia, 200 square miles of glaciers, towering mountain peaks, and unexplored wilderness.

August 4.—"A Coorial on the Orinoco," a trip by native logboat through a tempest of seething waters to the heart of Venezuela, where Spanish buccaneers three centuries ago filled their treasure chests.

"The Outing-Chester series excels in subject matter, technical work, and human interest qualities anything that I have ever seen of its kind," declared Mr. Sheldon. "These pictures are fit for the finest screens and for the most discriminating audiences.

"They show the touches of master craftmanship. The subject matter is so unusual and it is handled in such an original way, the titles are so snappy, and the individual pictures are in such contrast that they are bound to go over big in any theater.

"Pictures of this kind are the sort which make people talk. When I saw them first screened they gave me a sense of pleased surprise. I know that they are business building pictures for exhibitors, pictures which will make an exhibitor proud of his show."

Kerrigan Working Hard on Paralta's "A Dollar Bid"

J. WARREN KERRIGAN, the Paralta star, who has been absent from the studios for a number of months owing to a fractured leg, has returned to the Brunton studios, and is now engaged with the filming of his third Paralta Play, "A Dollar Bid," adapted from Credo Harris' novel, "Toby."

The locale of the story is laid in the Kentucky hills, that picturesque part of the United States which has afforded so much excellent material for song and story. "A Dollar Bid" is a typical Kerrigan story, which gives the popular star ample opportunity to be seen as a dashing young American hero.

Miss Lois Wilson, who appeared as leading woman with Mr. Kerrigan in his two former Paralta Plays, will again be seen in the leading feminine role of this production, which will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation immediately upon its completion.

"The Woman Eternal" Is Now Ready for Release

PATHE announced last week the forthcoming release of "The Woman Eternal," in which Elaine Hammerstein is starred. All of the exterior work on this photoplay was made at Bat Cave, N. C., near Hendersonville. The interiors were made at the old Biograph studio in New York. The original scenario, by John E. Ince, was as carefully worked out as any play intended for the speaking stage.

The story has to do with a New York society debutante who forsakes her life of ease and luxury to go to the Cumberland Mountains as a teacher in a rural school, her aim being to aid the wretched mountaineers, whose chief interests in life are corn whiskey and murderous feuds. How in a most original, back-to-nature manner the heroine puts an end to feudism and tames the savage spirit of a powerful mountaineer who falls in love with her makes the tensely interesting story. The photography is remarkably well handled and Miss Hammerstein proves herself worthy of stellar honors in the play.

Lytell's "No Man's Land" Completed.

Bert Lytell has finished work in "No Man's Land," his second picture as a Metro star, which follows "The Trail to Yesterday." Completion of the film was accomplished after a stretch "drive" in which the company worked several nights until a late hour to get some unusual and strikingly beautiful light effects.

Here's the Cast for Metro's "To Hell with the Kaiser"

A THRILLING feature of the forthcoming Screen Classics, Inc., seven-reel patriotic production de luxe, "To Hell With the Kaiser," will be the battle royal of two air armies. Each of the opposing forces is represented by forty planes in close view in the fury of attack. The air is literally black with planes just previous to the engaging of the rival aerial squadrons in the contest, and the actual bombardment between the two forces of air-artillery is probably the most splendid spectacle ever shown upon the screen. Government aid and co-operation was necessary in order to secure pictures of these manoeuvres. This feature is now almost completed, and will have early release.

The air battle has an important bearing on the story, and precipitates the climax of the action.

As a welcome contrast to the scenes of battle the subject shows some beautiful pictures of a world restored to peace when the monster of Europe has been captured and brought to justice.

The Kaiser is played by Lawrence Grant. Olive Tell plays the American girl, Alice Monroe, the leading feminine role. John Sunderland, an aviator, has the part of the American air-fighter. Betty Howe has the touching role of Ruth Monroe.

Character players of reputation and ability were engaged to play the members of the Kaiser's family and staff. Earl Schenck plays the Crown Prince, Mabel Wright, the Kaiserin; H. J. Carvill is Bismarck, Charles Hartley impersonates Count Zeppelin, Emil Hoch is Von Hindenburg, George Trimble, Von Tirpitz; Carl Dane, Von Hollweg; Frank Farrington, General Pershing. Walter P. Lewis plays Satan. Well known persons who have taken small parts to be identified with this production are W. J. Gross, May McAvoy, Allan Walker, Margaret McWade, Marion Stewart, George Ridell and Bertha Willsea.

World Pictures Extends Service Bureau to All Offices

THE service bureau established by World Pictures in all of its branch offices two years ago—on June 23, 1916, to be exact—has by its success and increasing popularity justified another innovation. World Pictures now announces its branch office departments of local publicity under the supervision of the company's general publicity director.

Strictly in line with its policy covering several years of affording the exhibitor of World Pictures every possible aid in successfully promoting his business and securing box office results, World Pictures has inaugurated in connection with its publicity department a bureau that will prove of inestimable value to exhibitors who cannot afford a press agent.

This idea grew out of the apparent necessity for showmanship among the exhibitors who seldom edit the advertising and press matter sent out by the distributing companies. This is plainly apparent by analyzing a large number of local newspapers throughout the country carrying advertisement and press notices for the local exhibitors. Such an analysis shows that the copy is being used line for line and word for word the same as it is being mailed the exhibitors without a change. It is not the intention of the distributor in sending out this press matter to have it used as written, it is merely to furnish a local man with a general idea, and that he should adapt it to fit local conditions, both as regards the policy of the newspaper and the patrons he is endeavoring to reach.

This new bureau of World Pictures wishes to impress on the exhibitors that no two pictures should be advertised the same way. Each picture must have an individual appeal just the same as each play, and being different from each other must make its bid for approval along an entirely different line.

If the exhibitor would only stop for a moment and analyze the synopsis of the story sent him he can make his press matter conform with local conditions. The stories on which feature pictures are based are supposed to have the human note, and by the same token these stories have, in one variation or another, appeared in the columns of the local papers as news. If Mr. Exhibitor will let his memory aid him in adapting his publicity to events of like character that have been of general interest at different times in his home town he can "hook" this up with his picture and "cash in" at the box office.

Charles Klein, famous author of "The Lion and the Mouse" and other successes, once stated that he could find the story of a play any day in the reading of the newspapers, and that he could see material for a hundred plays in walking down the street and watching the passers-by. Just so the local exhibitor can make capital out of men, women, and events that happen in his home town by attaching them to his press matter which he sends to his home papers.

The service bureau of World Pictures will be placed at the beck and call of those who screen the World program, and if they desire special ideas to excite interest in their offerings it will be theirs for the asking.

L-Ko Beauty Sextette Breaks Into Broadway

THE L-Ko Beauty sextette has broken into big time on Broadway. All L-Ko comedies have been booked by the Marcus Loew circuit for an indefinite period beginning the week of June 9, and continuing until the public shows a desire for some other form of comedy.

For several months the Loew interests have been watching the work of Gale Henry, Kathleen O'Connor, Dave Morris, Rube Miller, and the sextette of female beauties awaiting actual booking until a vigorous demand had been created. The market has been created, and the Loew interests are prepared to grab it.

In breaking into the big time the L-Ko management has caused special projection instruction slips to be printed. On these the attention of the operators is called to the fact that L-Ko comedies should be run at a speed much slower than the usual feature. This is necessary, it is explained, to give the feminine portion of the audience an opportunity to grasp the detail of the costumes worn by the beauties and the male portion to thoroughly assimilate every detail of the work of nature.

"Both Members" Is Title of Bushman-Bayne Story

AN unusually distinguished cast of clever players has been brought together by Metro to support Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in their new picture, "Both Members," which was written for them by Luther A. Reed. Every member of the company is of note, and all play difficult character roles.

The part of Michael McGrorhan is taken by Gerald Griffin, a noted actor of many New York stage successes. Another favorite player is Jessie Stevens, who is seen in the role of Bridget McGrorhan. Charles W. Sutton, who plays the part of Uncle Harry Burgess, is a Metro favorite of long standing and has played, among numerous other parts, that of many "ministers" and has supported such notable players as Ethel Barrymore and Edith Taliaferro.

"Both Members" is being directed by Charles Brabin.

Russell's First Picture Breaks All His Records

BOOKINGS for the first week of "Hearts or Diamonds?" the first picture of the William Russell Productions, have exceeded all previous bookings for the same period of Russell pictures.

The second release in the Russell series, "Up Romance Road," has been completed, and will be released by Mutual June 24. This is another strenuous romance-drama of the type that have made Russell's reputation as one of the premier fighting men of the screen. It is full of fast action and mystery, with a strong element of romance, and gives "Fighting Bill" plenty of opportunities to display his talents as a doer of heroic deeds.

Miss Charlotte Burton, who played the lead in "Hearts or Diamonds?" will again do the heroine. Henry King again is responsible for the direction.

Universal Names Trio of Comedies for June 24 Week

IN line with a recent announcement the comedy releases of Universal for the week of June 24 will include a two-reel Century featuring Alice Howell instead of the usual L-Ko. The recent announcement was to the effect that every fourth week one of the Century comedies would be substituted for the L-Ko. The title of the Howell comedy is "In Dutch."

The Nestor comedy for the same week is entitled "The Borrowed Baby," in which Gale Henry and William Franey are featured. Its all about a young man who told his wealthy uncle about his beautiful wife and baby when he didn't have any.

"Birth Control," a one-reeler, is the Lyons-Moran offering for the week under the brand name of Star comedies. Its a regular baby story with lots of both smiling and squalling babies in many of the scenes.

Thirteen Fox Companies Now at Work East and West

THERE apparently is no superstition in the make-up of William Fox, for announcement from the Fox offices is to the effect that thirteen of the Fox companies are now busy making pictures both in the East and at the Hollywood studios in California.

William Farnum, after a brief sojourn at the Grand Canyon, has begun work on "The Rainbow Trail," which Zane Grey wrote as a sequel to his other famous novel, "Riders of the Purple Sage," the picturization of which Mr. Farnum had only ten days before completed.

J. Gordon Edwards, the Fox director, has got a good start on "The Message of the Lilies," and Jewel Carmen is progressing on her picture, "You Can't Get Away With It," which is adapted from Gouverneur Morris' story of the same name. Gladys Brockwell, also at Hollywood, is working on "Kultur," an expose of how Germany went to war, and Tom Mix is doing "Fame and Fortune." The other Fox workers at Hollywood comprise three Sunshine comedy companies under the direction of Henry Lehrman.

In the East, Jane and Katherine Lee have just completed "Doing Their Bit" at the Biograph studios. Virginia Pearson at the Blackton studio in Brooklyn is nearing the completion of "Her Price," and June Caprice has "Miss Innocence" in work at the Victor. A play which has for its tentative title "The Sleepwalker" is keeping George Walsh on the jump at the Kalem studio, and another production is under way at the Biograph studio in the Bronx under the direction of R. A. Walsh. Peggy Hyland is resting after having completed "Other Men's Daughters."

Arrow Film Corporation Handling "Finger of Justice"

Seven-Reel Feature Photoplay by Reverend Paul Smith Dealing with Vice Question Being Offered on State Rights Basis—Crane Wilbur in Leading Role.

UNDER the terms of an arrangement recently completed the Arrow Film Corporation is offering on state rights basis Reverend Paul Smith's feature picture, "The Finger of Justice." Dr. Smith was pastor of Central Methodist Episcopal Church in San Francisco, and was instrumental in the campaign which culminated in the clean-up of the Barbary Coast in that city, which forms the basis of the story of this picture, which is in seven reels.

The scenario is the work of Grace Marbury Sanderson, grand-daughter of a man who was eight times mayor of San Francisco. The production was directed by William Chaudet, and the leading characters consist of Crane Wilbur as the fighting parson, Henry Barrows as the poltical boss, and Jane O'Rourke in the vampire role as the spider in the web of the boss.

This picture is said to have great moral and educational value, and to be a powerful plea against commercialized vice. It has been exhibited in a large number of houses not only in California, but on the entire Pacific Coast, where it was well received.

The net proceeds received from this production are to be used for civic work in connection with the suppression of commercialized vice, the money being deposited in a fund administered by D. B. Brumett, editor of the Epworth Herald, Chicago; Charles Jewett, the present Mayor of Indianapolis, and the Reverend Paul Smith.

Arthur S. Hyman

AN interesting visitor to the Moving Picture World offices during the past week was Arthur S. Hyman, vice-president and general manager of Dawn Masterplay Company, located in suite 501 Owen building, Detroit, distributing state rights features in the state of Michigan.

During this trip to New York, Mr. Hyman secured for his company, as announced in our last issue, rights to D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World" for Michigan at what is said to be a record price for this territory, and Ohio and Michigan rights to the "Eleventh Commandment" from Advanced Motion Picture Corporation.

Mr. Hyman expressed himself as being strongly in favor of the co-operative plan of the Affiliated Distributors Corporation, and has made an offer to Michigan exhibitors, pending the formation of all the national units of this organization, to handle the productions of his company with the exception of "Hearts of the World" under the plan of this organization in order to demonstrate its practicability; the exhibitors sharing in the profits. Mr. Hyman is of the opinion that the working out of this plan will be of benefit to and increase the business of state rights buyers.

Associated with Mr. Hyman in the Dawn Masterplays Company is J. M. Frieburg, secretary and treasurer. This company occupies spacious offices consisting of eleven rooms in the Owen building, Detroit, and are handling a number of feature productions, including "The Whip," "Raffles," "I Believe," "Wrath of the Gods," "Persuasive Peggy," "Marvelous Maciste," and the series of Keenan and Talmadge reissues.

The watchword of the company is service, the road force consists of eleven men, and as an example of the lengths to which they go to keep from disappointing their customers, during the past winter, when train service was interrupted and it was impossible to ship films to an exhibitor in Luddington, they arranged for a relay consisting of an automobile and three sleighs, the films reaching the exhibitors only two hours late.

Announcement is made by Ernest Shipman of sales on Shorty Hamilton features, Josh Binney comedies, and "Berlin Via America" for a number of territories. Full details given in another column of this department.

Gail Kane Is Featured In "When Men Betray"

SINCE the premiere of "When Men Betray" on the New York Theater Roof exhibitors have been endeavoring to secure an early booking. It is said to be a "human" picture, the kind that gets under your skin and makes you feel you belong to the story. The plot deals with the betrayal of the marriage vow, and, while this is a very delicate subject to handle, it is claimed to have been done in such a way as not to offend anyone.

The cast includes Gail Kane in the role of the wronged wife, Robert Elliott as the husband, Stuart Holmes as a disloyal friend, Sally Crute as the other woman, and Tallulah Bankhead, a young Southern beauty, who made her debut in New York in "The Squab Farm," plays the part of a young and rather "flighty" girl brought to the verge of despair by man's unfaithfulness.

All Territory on "Warrior" Sold

THE Warrior" and "Mother" have been acquired for the states of Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky by the Metro exchange. Contracts to this effect have just been consummated between Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, of General Enterprises, Inc., which organization has distributed throughout the United States and Canada both of these productions, and representatives of the Metro exchanges.

The Metro exchange, of New York, has also purchased "The Warrior" for New York City and state, and it has planned to offer this feature starring Maciste as a special hot-weather attraction.

With the consummation of the deal whereby Metro secures "The Warrior" for Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, General Enterprises, Inc., has announced that the entire territory embraced by the United States and Canada has been disposed of for this spectacle.

"Song Hits In Photoplays" Offered on State Rights

SONG Hits in Photoplay," a novelty series produced by Harry Cohn in collaboration with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, indicates that there is something new in motion pictures. At a recent showing at the New York Strand the audience so liked the idea that they joined in the chorus.

Reports from Western states suggest that "Song Hits in Photoplay" is here to stay. State rights have been arranged for in almost every state in the country and requests for bookings are continually received at the office of the company.

D. O. Reese has been traveling in the middle and far west, while David A. Levy is handling the proposition from the New York end and has closed with several large exchanges and exhibitors in the east.

Advance offers "The Eleventh Commandment."

"The Eleventh Commandment," featuring Lucille Lee Stewart and directed by Ralph Ince, is being offered by the Advanced Motion Picture Corporation on state rights basis; also under the plan of the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation. They announce that arrangements have already been made with the Dawn Masterplays for the State of Michigan and with the Exhibitors' Booking Syndicate for New York on the latter basis.

Pretty Girls in King-Bee Comedy.

The King-Bee comedy in which President Burstein announced that a bevy of beautiful girls would appear is now being made at the Hollywood studios, and will be released July 15 under the title "Beauty in Distress." This cluster of good looking girls are said to have been selected from California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, and Indiana, each from a different state.

Ernest Shipman Goes West

Will Close Contracts for New Productions and Confer With Prominent State Right Buyers on the Coast.

DURING the past week, Ernest Shipman left New York for a trip to the Pacific coast in order to make necessary arrangements for closing contracts for a number of productions now in the process of manufacture, and also to decide on other important negotiations which have been pending for some time. He expects to be gone for about three weeks, and will visit several important Western cities, including San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, and Salt Lake, conferring with prominent state rights buyers, and on his return expects to announce a number of special attractions for the state rights market.

In addition to his selling activities, Mr. Shipman has also recently made arrangements with a number of out of town state rights buyers to represent their interests in New York in the selection and purchase of such pictures as they may require, negotiating for any desirable pictures available on the open market.

One of Mr. Shipman's last activities before starting West was the viewing of a feature picture made by Director Lloyd Carleton, of the Carlton Attractions, Los Angeles, which reached New York only a few hours before Mr. Shipman's departure.

Mr. Shipman also announces that arrangements have been made with Walker Whiteside, the well known actor, whereby he will interpret the part of a Japanese Secret Service agent in America in a timely seven-reel release based upon stirring episodes of the present war. He also calls attention to the timeliness of the forthcoming Nell Shipman productions, "The Tiger of the Sea" and "The Coast Guard Patrol," both of which deal with the submarine menace along our coasts now so much in evidence account of the activities of the German submarine along the Atlantic coast.

In addition to list published in a recent issue, Mr. Shipman also announces the following sales of territory of the productions that he is handling: Shorty Hamilton series, to Josiah Pearce & Sons, New Orleans, for Mississippi and Louisiana; to Kaufman Specials, Memphis, for Tennessee and Arkansas; to Unity Photoplay Company, Chicago, for Illinois; to Elliott & Sherman, Minneapolis, for Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, and to V. H. Hodupp, Indianapolis, for Kansas; Josh Binney comedies to Doo-Lee Film Co., Syracuse, for New York State. Berlin Via America, to Westcott Film Corp, Minneapolis, for Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Wisconsin, and to C. F. Michaels, Pittsburgh, for West Virginia and western Pennsylvania.

Several Massive Sets "For Tempered Steel"

THE fourth special production, "Tempered Steel," in which Madame Olga Petrova is the leading figure, is said to be marked by a number of unusual stage sets of massive character.

The story calls for considerable theatrical atmosphere, with several scenes laid in a Broadway playhouse, and Director Ralph Ince caused to be erected a reproduction of the Belasco theater. This setting occupied the entire floor space of the studio, and on the film shows in detail the stage, boxes, and more than half of the lower floor of the theater holding a capacity audience, including a complete orchestra.

Another novel setting is the foyer of a large New York apartment house showing a row of elevators, switch-board, etc. This setting was patterned after one of the biggest apartment dwellings on Riverside drive, and the staff of attendants is said to have been requisitioned from the house to play the characters of hall boys, switchboard operators, elevator runners, doormen, etc.

Gaumont News-Reel Pictures First Fabricated Ship

"Agawam" Shown in Graphic No. 10—While News No. 11 Contains Views of Harkness Trophy Race—Many Other Interesting Scenes.

IMPORTANT subjects in Gaumont Graphic No. 10, ready May 31, show the launching of the "Agawam," the first "fabricated" ship; the big Red Cross Drive for the Second War Fund of $100,000,000, which our people nearly doubled, memorial services all over the country on Decoration Day; the way in which the American Red Cross is aiding war sufferers in Europe, and the negro who broke the world's record for ship-riveting, contests which are expected to speed up ship construction for the Allies.

No. 11 of the Gaumont News, ready Tuesday, June 4, contains more than a dozen new subjects, pertaining not only to the war, but to other topics of general interest, including the 100-mile Harkness Handicap at Sheepshead Bay on June 1, in which De Palma piloted a Packard to victory and won $30,000 in prize money.

Other interesting topics show the champion gas-mask girls of New York, who were entertained at a theater as a reward for their speedy work in making these necessary life-savers; the visit of the King of Roumania and the French Minister of Munitions to the battle-front; the monster thrift festival at the Polo Grounds in New York City; activities of our soldiers and ship-builders on both coasts, and the war work of the women in England and the United States. A very interesting subject shows how the Mission Indians of Southern California are working for the Red Cross.

Leah Baird in New Serial

THE announcement that Western Photoplays, Inc., had signed Leah Baird for feature productions is said to have caused numerous letters and wires to that company, particularly from independent releasing concerns throughout the country.

The reason is ascribed to the fact that both Messrs. Golden and Alperstein are well known film men and in addition there are nine independent feature releases before the public in which Miss Baird appeared during the past year, and the desire of the independent men to retain this star in their ranks.

Whether or not the Western Photoplays intend releasing on the state rights market has not yet been announced. Progress on the opening five episodes of the serial featuring Miss Baird is being pushed and other plans laid aside until these are given pre-release showing.

Among the stipulations included for Miss Leah Baird in her contract with the Western Photoplays, Inc., is a clause which guaranteed that all her work is to be under the personal direction of Joseph A. Golden. Mr. Golden's work is well known, as he has in the past directed such artists as Blanche Walsh, James O'Neill, Pearl White, Nat Goodwin, Helen Ware, Norma Talmadge, John Mason, Alma Hanlon, Holbrook Blinn, and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

Louis K. Anspacher

SELDOM has so prominent a man of the literary world as Louis K. Anspacher used his talents for the screen.

Born in Cincinnati, Mr. Anspacher, after graduating at the College of the City of New York, specialized in philosophy, metaphysics, ethics, and political science at Columbia, taking a post graduate course. He is a member of the permanent lecture staff of the League for Political Education, the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, and the staff of the Civic Forum Lecture Bureau.

His modern drama, "The Embarrassment of Riches," was produced in 1906, and is said to be the first American play to deal with the political machinery of lower New York. His other plays include "Anne and the Archduke John," "A Woman of Impulse," "The Glass House," "Our Children," and "That Day."

Mr. Anspacher is interested in the theater not only from the standpoint of the author, but of the public, and his remarks on "An Organized Audience" was the inaugural address at the formation of the Drama League of America. He is married to the well known actress, Kathryn Kidder, is a lecturer on history of dramatic literature, as well as philosophical and psychological movement in the theater today.

His contribution to the screen consists of the latest Rialto-Deluxe production, "The Unchastened Woman," which, as a play, enjoyed a successful run on Broadway.

"Mickey" a Cheerful Picture

WE are on the brink of a great change in the public sentiment toward motion pictures," says an official of Western Import Company. "Each day brings the war closer home, so that there is a sort of suspense, which, though not a fear, is an apprehension that should and must be relieved. Motion pictures must now do their bit. There has never been anything in the world which has reached the hearts of the masses in so universal a language as motion pictures. At this time everyone is turning to motion pictures for entertainment and relief, though temporary, from the great tragedy of the war.

"Imperceptibly, changes in public sentiment and taste in motion pictures are accomplished. He who can see ahead and can feel and understand the workings of the public mind and their ultimate decision has solved the great problem of the motion picture industry—the longevity of pictures.

"Over two years ago Mack Sennett started his production of 'Mickey.' At that time this repulsion of the public mind against bloodshed in motion pictures was apparent to a certain extent, but was not then so marked as it is today. He conceived the idea of a big comedy. But he knew it might be two years before he could complete and release such a feature, and that he had to look ahead, for, while a good comedy might be desired more than anything else at that time, it must be at the same time carefully balanced—not too light nor too depressing, but witty and wistfully humorous.

"That he read the signs truthfully is evidenced in 'Mickey.' There is no bloodshed. It is not a drama of flying pastry or innocent heroines seduced. It is a cheerful play. 'Mickey' is a mischievous little mountain girl whose pranks are amusing, and whose sunny disposition is magnetic. In spite of hardships her sparkling personality conquers, and ends in a wistfully sweet romance.

"Mickey" is now complete, an illustration of the kind of photoplays that are doing their bit cheerfully for humanity."

Poli Praises Flynn Serial.

S. Z. Poli, head of Poli's Theatrical Enterprises, operating vaudeville and motion picture houses throughout New England, recently changed his original booking for "The Eagle's Eye," and is now showing this serial four days instead of three, beginning with Sunday of each week. He is enthusiastic over the result of this change in the opening date, and writes the Wharton Releasing Co. as follows: "The Sunday opening gives a greater scope for advertising in the Sunday papers, and, to my way of thinking, and based on personal observation, 'The Eagle's Eye' properly exploited by the man who exhibits it unquestionably is one of the biggest attractions on the screen, especially for a Sunday night concert."

Scene from "Stolen Orders" (Wm. A. Brady).

Successful Premiere For Brady's "Stolen Orders"

Well Received by Audience at Park Theater, New York—Four Stars in Cast, Kitty Gordon, Carlyle Blackwell, Montagu Love and June Elvidge.

THE premier of the picturized version of Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton's Drury Lane melodramatic success, Stolen Orders," produced by William A. Brady, took place at the Park theater, New York, on Sunday evening, June 2. Notwithstanding the intense heat the theater was packed to capacity, and when the picture was finished it was accorded a tribute of applause.

The cast is headed by four stars—Kitty Gordon, Carlyle Blackwell, Montagu Love and June Elvidge. Besides there are several prominent actors in minor roles, while several hundred persons are employed in the big scenes. Numerous necessary accessories for the production of a patriotic picture were placed by the government at the disposal of Mr. Brady, who is a member of the National Council of Defense. In the picture are battleships, naval launches, hydroplanes and anti-aircraft guns, and sailors, marines and naval officers participate. President Wilson is shown delivering a speech indicting the enemies within our gates.

The Italian government tendered Mr. Brady the use of war scenes taken on the Italian front, which have been used in such a manner as to lend zest to a succession of thrills such as have been seldom seen on the screen. In the filming of this picture it was necessary to construct a dirigible balloon and have it destroyed by anti-aircraft guns. By a strange coincidence the spot where the fight in the dirigible takes place is the locale where the German submarines have recently been operating against vessels in American waters.

The criticisms of the daily newspapers were strongly favorable. Such expressions as "The most interesting melodrama we ever saw on the screen," "A masterpiece," "Interesting and thrilling," "At the end of the picture there was a generous and genuine tribute," "Succession of thrills" and "Decidedly entertaining besides being good propaganda" being employed.

Petrova Starts Thrift Stamp Tour on June 6

THE final arrangements have been completed between Madame Olga Petrova and the War Saving Stamps Committee, of Washington, D. C., for the tour which she will make in behalf of this patriotic movement.

As a preliminary, Madame Petrova visited Philadelphia last week, where a Liberty booth was erected for her work in the public square of the City Ha During her visit she sold several hundred dollars worth of War Saving Stamps. With each sale of one War Saving Stamp and ten Thrift Stamps she gave the p chaser a photograph of herself, in addition to auctioning off eight de luxe po traits, which were secured by purchasin $50 worth of Thrift Stamps for each.

Madame Petrova then made a tour of all first-run motion picture houses, in which she gave patriotic talks and an entertainment which consisted of two songs.

Accompanied by Beulah Livingstone, her personal representative, and Bobby North, manager of the Petrova studio, Madame Petrova left New York on June 6 for Baltimore, where she will appear at the New theater. From there she will go to the Strand theater, Washington.

Arrangements have been made whereby each theater will show "The Life Mask" during Petrova's personal appearance.

Due to the necessity of witnessing a screening of "Patience Sparhawk," Madame Petrova will return to New York following her appearance in Washington. After which she will depart for Boston.

Following her appeal in each city to the public relative to the purpose of Thrift Stamps, Madame Petrova will visit as many motion picture theaters as time will permit in order to still further impress on the minds of photoplay audiences the necessity of giving the United States Government their utmost financial support.

Special Sets Built for "Playmates."

In "Playmates," the King-Bee comedy to be released June 25, in which Billy West and Babe Hardy appear in rompers, a special set was built for the prologue, so as to make the characters appear diminutive, and it is said that the illusion produced is a remarkable one.

Uniqueness Claimed For Gaumont Serial

The Gaumont Company announces in "The Hand of Vengeance" they have what is really a unique serial, and that those who appear in it are prominent dramatic actors. Among them is a mysterious personage, "The Grey Lady," the daughter of a prominent statesman, to whom the avenger of wrong loses his heart while engaged in acting as her champion. Even before the last episode was completed "The Grey Lady" sailed for France to nurse wounded soldiers.

It is claimed that picturegoers who insist upon sensations will be satisfied with "The Hand of Vengeance," though the title is more gruesome than the scenes portrayed, and that the serial does not rely on crime to make it interesting. Though he constitutes himself a dispenser of justice and incurs the enmity of the police, it is said that the principal character is far from being a criminal.

The thrills come from the dangerous situations in which the hero finds himself while being hunted by an officer of the law. Several times in each episode it seems that the avenger will be captured by the detective, and each time his ingenious mind enables him to escape.

It is claimed that the element of suspense is so well held that the spectator is unable to figure what will happen next, and that this, particularly, is why the Gaumont Company calls it the "different" serial.

Flies, Bees, Sheep and Goats Share Split Reel

SWAT THE FLY is the title of the International Film Service black and white comedy released by the Educational Film Corporation this week, and there is said to be a laugh in every "swat."

In the beginning, and as an obligato running through the story, the spring drive of sunshine waves a fly from his hibernacle for the express purpose of tormenting Ma Katzenjammer, which it proceeds to do in diverse unique ways and much to its own edification.

Captain Katzenjammer, who is painting a floor, has "tackled" the job from the outside of the room coming in, and finds himself marooned on a small spot in the center. This wouldn't be so serious if the Kids hadn't put molasses in his paint pot, and in trying to make his escape he finds himself anchored. With a vacuum cleaner as their machine gun and bees as their ammunition his "devoted" nephews proceed to make his life even more miserable, but in the end they find their own weapon turned against them in a manner that is very discomforting.

On this same reel is a Ditmars Animal picture entitled "Wild Sheep and Goats," in which the customs of these animals are shown. With plenty of snow and cold weather they are in their element, and will travel to the highest mountain peaks to get into a more rarified atmosphere. Their sure-footedness is shown by the manner in which they traverse seemingly impassable crags and peaks with the greatest ease. The method of capture and crating for shipment is also shown.

Gus Alexander in Moon Comedies.

Sunshine Film, Inc., announce that they have engaged Gus Alexander, better known as "Shorty" Alexander, and that the first two Moon Comedies in which he will appear have already been completed.

Mr. Alexander has had considerable experience both on the stage and in moving pictures, having appeared on the stage with Dan Daly, David Warfield and Madge Lessing, while in moving pictures he created the role of "Jeff" in Horsley's "Mutt and Jeff Comedies," and has also appeared in the supporting casts with Mary Pickford, Blanche Sweet, William Farnum and others, also in Universal, Christie and Biograph productions.

Trade News of the Week in New England

"Pershing's Crusaders" Shown at the Shubert Theater—Personal and Business Notes of Interest—Theater Brevities.

By Robert N. Howe, 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, MASS.—A large amount of publicity was given the first showing of the Government film, "Pershing's Crusaders," at the Shubert theater on Monday night, June 10. Prominent government officials and army and navy men were very prominent in the first-night audience.

The showing of scenes in France in which the 101st, a Boston regiment, had a prominent part, caused great enthusiasm. The film was sent here by the Committee on Public Information and has the backing of the Government. Postmaster Murray, of this city, and a committee of fifty representative business men behind the local showing of the film, are producing some unique publicity to boost it.

An admission of 25 and 50 cents is charged to cover expenses. What surplus there is will be given to the Red Cross, the Knights of Columbus, and other activities.

"Little Women" Film Nearly Finished.

Concord, Mass. — Director Hawley Knowles, of the World Film corporation, has nearly finished the filming of "Little Women" in this town. With a company of a dozen or more actors of the World company he has been at the Wright's Tavern. Many interesting scenes on the old battlefields of Concord and Lexington have been taken by Mr. Knowles. Among those with Mr. Knowles are Henry Hull, Dorothy Bernard, Conrade Nagle, Kate Lester, Lillian Hall, Florence Blinn, Elsable Lamon, Mother Anderson, Mrs. Hurle, Frank Dernon, Lynn Hammond and George Kelson.

Farrell Leaves Selznick Exchange.

Edward J. Farrell, who has been manager of the New England exchange of L. J. Selznick Pictures Corporation, has sent in his resignation, which was accepted and took effect June 1.

Mr. Farrell has managed the New England exchange of the Selznick Pictures corporation for the past six months, and is probably the best known film man among the exchanges in New England. He was formerly manager of the General Film, Metro and Pathe exchanges, and was the first salesman to go on the road in New England territory, having been in the motion picture business for twelve years.

Mr. Farrell was very well liked in the Selznick office. This was shown when the employees of the exchange presented him a pair of engraved, studded cuff links when they learned of his resignation. Mr. Farrell has not made known his plans for the future, but it is understood that he is through with the film business. D. J. Selznick, brother of L. J. Selznick, will assume the position as manager until another is appointed.

Exhibitor J. F. Truman Dies.

Foxboro, Mass.—J. F. Truman, owner of the Orpheum theater in Canton, died after a long illness. The management of the theater will now be under the direction of his son, Paul Truman.

J. F. Truman was having a new theater built in Foxboro and was just about to open it when he died. It is expected that his son will open the new theater and close the other house in Canton.

Here and There About New England.

Boston.—There has been a change in management of the Huntington Avenue theater, which is in the Back Bay district of Boston.

George Haley, the former manager, has left to take charge of the Dudley theater in Roxbury. Frank Jaques, who was formerly on the road for the Universal Film Corporation, has bought an interest in the Huntington Avenue theater and will manage it himself.

Medford, Mass.—The Fellsway theater of this city has been taken over by Tamer Lane, motion picture editor of the Boston Evening Record. He reports very good business for the first two weeks.

Woburn, Mass.—John Watt, manager of the Woburn theater, has resigned. As yet, no one has been appointed to succeed him.

Newport, R. I.—A. R. Commette, owner and manager of the Opera House in this city, announces that his theater will close the first of June for the summer season. During the summer the theater will undergo repairs, will be completely refurnished, enlarged and redecorated.

H. DuMont Perry, manager of the Lafayette theater of Newport, R. I., is having his theater enlarged and rebuilt; as the theater is now he is unable to accommodate hundreds of people at every performance. Newport, R. I., which was a city of about 8,000 inhabitants, has had its population increased about 95,000 since the war started, and the exhibitors have their houses packed at every performance with sailors and marines from the great naval training station here. The theater will be closed only when the floors are being laid and when the seats are being put in.

Springfield, Mass.—The Poli theater, a moving picture and vaudeville house, has changed to a stock house for the summer and will resume their former policy in the fall.

Springfield, Mass.—A. Sheifitz, manager of the Gordon theater in this city, is spending the week in Boston. He will visit his son in the service at Newport, R. I. His other son, Louis Sheifitz, who was recently in the motion picture business, is now at Camp Devens.

Maritime Provinces Letter

By Alice Fairweather, "Standard," St. John, N. B.

Business in New Brunswick Dull.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Several of the local theaters have installed new booths especially for the handling of the Dominion's new admission tax. This has been done at the St. John opera house and at the Imperial theater. The Government allows a small commission for the theaters for looking after these tax tickets.

Theaters not using the ticket-chopping receptacles are being supplied with them by the Government and the price is taken out of the commission. The Government of Nova Scotia insists that the theaters there must buy these machines outright, and their cost is $280.

The Imperial theater patrons who take boxes will have to pay the two-cent rate, and the Opera House lower floor seat tickets will also call for a two-cent tax. These are the only houses in St. John charging above twenty-five cents.

The "Nickel" theater will have to change its name, as they have had to raise their price to ten cents. They advertise that they will absorb the tax, but I understand that this is probably contrary to the law.

The tax on the reels will cost one manager of two houses in the city $2,700 a year, figuring on the number of reels used last year. The Imperial manager states that with the two taxes his amount will be over $4,000.

Theater Business Is Depressed.

Business is dull at present throughout the whole territory. The daylight bill is very hard on theaters and the general depression is felt immediately whenever the war news is bad.

One theater in Moncton, N. B., the Grand, is closed, and I hear of others through the Province reducing the number of days for opening.

Certainly the expenses are mounting very high, but with the summer season over and brighter times, the people will return to their amusements doubtless.

Brief Personal Mention.

C. K. Stowe, manager of F. G. Spencer's theater, the Gem, at Fredericton, N. B., visited St. John recently.

Charles Allan, manager of the Empress theater, owned by F. G. Spencer of St. John, was in the city a few days ago.

Utica Trade Letter

By Clifford A. Carroll, The Utica Observer, Utica, N. Y.

Norwich's Colonia to Open Soon.

UTICA, N. Y.—It has been announced that the opening of the Colonia theater, Norwich, N. Y., will take place the latter part of June. The theater was badly damaged by fire some time ago and was closed to allow repairs to be made and new equipment installed. A New York firm of decorators have been at work entirely redecorating the interior, and when finished the Colonia will present a more beautiful appearance than it did before the fire. Adam Tennis is manager of the house, and as all of the former employes of the house are now in the service of Uncle Sam, his son, Louis Tennis, will be associated with him. Louis Tennis has been connected with the Majestic theater, Utica, for a number of years and has had much experience in the amusement business. Quite a few thousand dollars have been expended in the new equipment of the theater, which includes two new Simplex projection machines, a new screen, new curtains, new stage accessories, new seats and new apparatus for lighting effects. Mr. Tennis is a veteran showman, having formerly been the proprietor of the Hippodrome, Utica, which place he conducted for about four years. Mr. Tennis has already booked many of the bigger features, and as his stage is fully equipped for road shows he will undoubtedly run some legitimate attractions.

Trade News Letter of Week from Detroit

Dawn Masterplay Company Gets Michigan Rights to "Hearts of the World"—Other Items of Interest About Theaters and Exchanges.

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Dawn Gets Griffith's Masterpiece.

DETROIT, MICH. — "Hearts of the World," made by D. W. Griffith, has been sold to the Dawn Masterplay Co., of Detroit, for Michigan. It is unquestionably the biggest deal ever made in the Wolverine state. We might add that the Dawn Masterplay Co. is one of the first exchanges in the country to buy it. The Dawn is to get three prints, considerable paper, advertising paper, photos, etc., so that it would not be one bit surprising if the total amount reached $100,000. It is a tremendous feather in the cap of the Dawn Masterplay Co. to secure such a picture, and justly entitles them to claim the slogan, "The biggest film exchange in Michigan." As a matter of fact they are one of the biggest in the country, because they have many other big successes, such as "The Whip," "Redemption," "I Believe," "Raffles," "Wrath of the Gods," "Persuasive Peggy," "Maciste," etc.

Arthur S. Hyman.

On top of the announcement that they purchased "Hearts of the World" we just learn at the time of writing that they also purchased "Carmen of the Klondike" for Michigan and a number of other special features, bringing their total investment for films during the past few days over $125,000 mark.

S. M. Krohn, of Dayton, is president of the Dawn Masterplay Co.; Arthur S. Hyman is general manager, and I. M. Freiberg is secretary. They occupy suites 707-708-713 Owen building, and have just leased two additional rooms, and are still negotiating for more space which in time assures them of the entire floor.

At the time of writing it is practically settled that the Washington theater, Detroit, will play "Hearts of the World" starting Sunday, June 23. This is one of John H. Kunsky's theaters, and he is planning an extensive publicity and advertising campaign. There will likely be three shows daily—one matinee and two at night, with prices up to $1.50. The engagement, once started, no doubt will last most of the summer.

Harold Bolster Visits Detroit.

Harold Bolster, vice-president of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, was in town recently for a day or two. It has been known for some time that Goldwyn had planned the installation of service departments in its various film exchanges. "There is nothing we won't do to help the exhibitor," said Mr. Bolster. "All they have to do is to ask for it."

Dave Mundstuk Buys More Features.

Dave Mundstuk, of the Strand Features, is fast coming to the front. He has gained considerable prestige for his exchange by the purchase of the two-reel W. S. Hart features, the series of Chaplin reissues, and the series of Triangle-Keystone-Sennett comedies. Dave is now doing business with the leading houses throughout the city and state.

Claud Cady Buys Theater.

The Family theater in Ionia, formerly conducted by F. Jacobi, has been sold to Claud Cady, who operates the Colonial theater in Lansing.

Opens Office in Saginaw.

The Pan-American Film Co., of Saginaw, announces the opening of a branch office in Grand Rapids at 323 Murray building.

Among Prominent Film Men.

Frank E. Stuart, a Long Time Employee of the General Film Company, who Was Recently Appointed Assistant Manager at Detroit.

Detroit Items.

Field Carmichael and Jos. Kaliski, of the Detroit branch of the Fox Film exchange, have been attending the convention of branch managers in New York week of June 3.

Dave Pricen, of the Triangle, feels quite elated over the fact that in the city of Detroit there are 82 theaters using Triangle service.

J. C. Fishman, of the Standard Film exchange, is now offering to state exhibitors "Mothers of Liberty" and Helen Gardner in "Cleopatra."

Hal Smith, of the Ferry Field theater, Detroit, has just signed what is probably the biggest contract of any residential theater. It calls for Fox regular service, Fox specials, Fox Standards, Fox Mutt and Jeff Cartoons, and Fox-Sunshine comedies. J. O. Brooks, salesman for Fox, was responsible for the sale.

W. F. Rogers, sales manager for the General Film Co., was in Detroit recently. He said he was well pleased with the conduct of the exchange under the management of M. S. Bailey, who was producing considerable new business.

Dayton Trade Letter

By P. J. G., Dayton Theater Building, Dayton, Ohio.

Local T. M. A. Lodge Opened in Dayton.

DAYTON, OHIO.—At last Dayton has a local fraternity of the Theatrical Mechanical Association. The charter has already been closed and contains the names of thirty local showmen, including managers and attaches and others connected with the business end of the game. The officers of the present society are W. R. Record, president; Martin Gaunt, secretary-treasurer; W. Clair, vice-president; H. Bucher, marshal; Gus Pfeiffer, chaplain, and E. Bauroth, sergeant-at-arms. The Dayton Lodge is No. 99. Martin Gaunt, of the Dayton theater, passes out the information that "The objects of the order are to bind all theatrical people together into a fraternity for the propagation of the principles of charity, benevolence and fidelity, and for the advancement of their mutual welfare." Anyone of good moral character who has been engaged in the show business for a period of 6 months is eligigle to membership. Martin Gaunt, secretary of the local lodge, states that at present his office is flooded with membership applications and that the lodge will number five hundred by midsummer.

Majestic Theater at Dayton Closes.

The Majestic theater at Dayton, Ohio, closed recently, and according to the receiver, Dick Raynor, it will not open again for some time. The Majestic always was out of the "beaten path," but at one time was Dayton's leading theater.

"The Doctor and the Woman" at the Dayton.

The best bet played yet at the Dayton theater, said Mark Gates, managing director, has been "The Doctor and the Woman." The Sunday opening was far above the usual Sunday, and it seems as though the public wants this kind of picture.

Kentucky Trade Letter

Benefit Greatly Profits Red Cross.

LOUISVILLE, KY—"Out There," the Red Cross benefit performance which was recently shown at Macauley's theater, proved a great success, a total of $31,401 being taken in at the one performance. Lawrence Jones, a wealthy turfman and distiller of Louisville, secured the program autographed by race horse men and local society people, which was run up to $11,850. The seats sold for $5,681, and seat premiums brought in $13,600, while the play bill was sold in the auditorium by Red Cross girls, bringing in $270 additional. The program was auctioned off by Burr McIntosh, who explained at the outset that every bid would be a pledge to the local Red Cross.

W. E. Carrell is a Daddy.

Louisville, Ky.—W. E. Carrell, manager of the S. & P. Film & Supply Co., is now a daddy, he becoming father of a fine boy on June 1, this being the first heir to the Carrell interests.

Calnay Taken to Louisville.

James Calnay, former promotor of the Dixie Film Corporation, Nashville, and the Calnay Cinema Corporation, Louisville, for whom the police were looking for months on indictments returned against Calany for irregular practices in Louisville, was brought back to Louisville on May 31 from Galveston, Tex., to face the charges.

Newark News Letter

By Jacob J. Kalter, 25 Branford Place, Newark, N. J.

Newark Censors Stop Film.

NEWARK, N. J.—The action of the board of censorship in banning "Old Wives for New," originally booked for presentation at the Newark theater, 195 Market street, Newark, N. J., prevented its showing, and Paramount's "Trunella" was substituted. The picture will, however, return to the theater later on during the summer, it is announced.

"Careless America" Exhibited Free.

Under the auspices of Chief of Police Long the Universal exhibited the safety first picture, "Careless America," in the various Newark motion picture theaters. Hugo Fargo, special representative of the Universal, was in the city, and enlisted the aid of Mayor Gillen, who spoke at an invitation performance of the film Tuesday morning at Proctor's theater, 116 Market street.

Brighton Theater Reopened.

The Brighton theater, East Orange, after extensive alterations and remodeling, was opened to the public Saturday evening, June 1. Excellent initial business is reported at the new house.

Edna Goodrich, the Mutual star, appeared personally May 27 at the Hill theater, Springfield and South Orange avenues, Newark, in connection with the showing of her picture, "American Maid." Miss Goodrich appeared in her Red Cross uniform, and incidentally was the indirect cause of materially adding to the total collected for the Second Red Cross Fund.

Ex-Captain Stucky in Film.

Former police captain, but now a film star, William H. Stucky appears in Vitagraph's "Over the Top," on exhibition June 5 and 6 at the City theater, Seventh and Orange streets, Newark. Leo O. Mumford is the managing director of the showhouse.

The Milton Amusement Company has been incorporated at East Rutherford, and papers for same were filed June 5. The concern is capitalized at $10,000. The incorporators are J. I. Stene, of Passaic, and S. A. Goldberg and Irving Goldberg, of New York.

Rochester Trade Letter

By L. B. Skeffington, 61 Main Street, East Rochester, N. Y.

Joe Stoffel Writes Good Song.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Joe Stoffel, live wire manager of the Plymouth theater, has written a song that has received much humorous praise. It is entitled "The Nickel You Waste for Carfare Will Never Buy a Thrift Stamp." Joe is endeavoring to educate the people of his section of the city to patronize neighborhood business instead of going downtown.

Woman Asks Operator's Permit.

The first local application by a woman for a permit to work as an apprentice motion picture operator has been filed by Mrs. Laurine Staley. The Staleys now run the Rose Garden theater, and Mrs. Staley is preparing herself for the practical end of the game. A six months' apprenticeship is necessary before an applicant may take the examination for an operator's license.

Paul Fennyvessey Honored.

Paul Fennyvessey, manager of the Strand theater, and a son of Albert A. Fenneyvessey, president and general manager of the Theaters Operating Company, controlling several Rochester theaters, has been accepted by the Government to direct Liberty theaters, and is now assigned to a camp in Texas.

Theaters Make Big Sunaay W. S. S. Drive

Six of Baltimore's Leading Houses Give Shows on Sabbath Entirly for War Saving Stamps and Get Almost a Half Million.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mount Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE, MD.—What is considered one of the biggest drives ever made in Baltimore by the local theatrical enterprises in the interests of patriotism was held on Sunday night, June 2. Seven theaters were allowed to open, and excellent shows were presented in each for the benefit of the W. S. S. The amount of the sales were $440,000, of which $320,000 was taken up in admissions, while $90,000 was obtained by canvassing for extra subscriptions in the audiences. The Maryland and Auditorium, Frederick C. Schanberger, manager; Academy of Music, Harry A. Henkel, manager; Ford's opera house, Charles E. Ford, manager; Garden and New, Charles E. Whitehurst, president, and L. A. DeHoff and Milton Krogman, managers; Nixon's Victoria, Abe Seligman, manager, were open.

The stage hands, as well as the musicians and ushers, tendered their services for the occasion.

Community Recognizes Good Work.

A unique gift was presented to L. A. De Hoff, the manager of the New theater, recently, which was entirely unexpected. For some time Mr. De Hoff has been arranging to showing of moving pictures at the Maryland Penetentiary for the inmates. He has been doing this work just for the pleasure of knowing he was helping the prisoners spend a pleasant hour during their confinement. One night a short time ago, Mr. De Hoff was summoned from his office to a box seat by one of the city officials and told to wait a few moments, that he had something to communicate to him. Mr. De Hoff sat in the first row of box seats. Suddenly, to his great surprise, the footlights flashed up, and out walked another city official on the stage and began a speech. Mr. De Hoff realized that something was being put over on him. The voice on the stage said, "As Mr. De Hoff, the efficient manager of this theater, has done so much in furnishing the moving pictures for the inmates of the penetentiary they wish to show their appreciation by presenting him with a token of remembrance." The audience wildly applauded when a beautifuly hand painted copy of the American's Creed was shown, and Mr. De Hoff then had to make a speech.

More Benefits for Red Cross.

Williamsport, Md.—On Wednesday, May 22, W. O. Bowser, the popular proprietor of the Princess theater in this city, donated the entire receipts of the day to the Red Cross.

Salisbury, Md.—A big meeting in the interests of the Red Cross was held in the Arcade theater here on the night of Saturday, May 25, through the courtesy of W. G. Pond, and a good sum was realized.

Aberdeen, Md.—A rousing meeting in the interests of the Red Cross was held at the Opera House in this city by J. H. McPherson, the manager, on Tuesday, May 21.

C. B. Councilman Promoted.

C. B. Councilman is now manager of the Grand theater in Highlandtown, Md. He has been operator at that theater for the past three years, and knows the house and its patrons. He succeeds Charles S. Anderson.

Minor Privileges May Be Cheaper.

The new schedule of minor privilege tax charges that went into effect in January, 1917, may now be greatly reduced. It is understood that the Board of Estimates is now in favor of working out an entire new minor privilege charge schedule. The tendency, it is rumored, is to lower the existing prices, to put some on the free list, and to grant some that are now prohibited under the existing law. It is also probable that a very much more liberal policy will be adopted in handling minor privileges. Now is the time for the Maryland Exhibitor's League to get busy. They are paying for electric signs

Frank Pierce to Represent Goldwyn.

The Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will be represented in the Baltimore territory by Frank Price, Jr., who became associated with that company on Monday, June 3. Mr. Price is very pleasant and courteous, and the writer feels certain that he will prove a big asset to the sales-forces of Goldwyn.

Newsboys See Gerard Picture.

Real American hate was shown for Kaiserism on Monday night, June 3, when the newsboys in care of the Social department of the Baltimore Sun were invited to the Academy of Music as the guests of Harry A. Henkel, and about 800 attended. The subject was Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany."

Manager Seligman's New Sign.

At Nixon's Victoria theater, 415 East Baltimore street, something new in the way of signs has been originated by Abe Seligman, the manager. They are a take off on the old cross road signs, but they read, "Stop—Look—Laugh." According to Mr. Seligman they have been stopping, looking, and laughing.

C. S. Anderson Leaves Baltimore.

Manager Charles S. Anderson, pioneer film man of Baltimore, is to leave the Monumental City. Mr. Anderson is well liked, and has a host of friends throughout the Baltimore territory. For the past five years he has been associated with the Grand theater. On Monday, June 3, Mr. Anderson took over the affairs of the Palace theater at Newport News, Va., and will act as manager.

Theaters Aid Red Cross Drive.

Three of Baltimore's moving picture theaters and two out-of-town theaters in the state of Maryland held patriotic meetings on Sunday, May 19, in the interests of the Red Cross drive.

Charles Nolte, manager of the Linwood theater, Baltimore, arranged a fine program for the Red Cross entertainment, the feature being "The Spirit of the Red Cross."

L. Gorman, manager of the Pimlico theater, Baltimore, arranged a Red Cross meeting.

Isaac Berman, proprietor of Berman's theater, Baltimore, was on the job with patriotic moving pictures and a fine musical program for a Red Cross benefit.

Five Stars Honor the Victoria.

The Victoria theater has flung its service flag to the breeze. There are no less than five stars on the flag. The men who have left the Victoria to serve Uncle Sam in his fighting forces are Lieutenant P. Harry Farren, brother of Manager Jack Farren, Aviation Corps, Camp Dick, Dallas, Tex; Corporal Al Florack, Jr., formerly an operator, now at Camp Dix, N. J.; Private Russell Fishbaugh, Camp Wadsworth, S. C.; Private Henry Gardner, Camp Dix; Private Morris Spies, formerly a drummer in the Vic orchestra, Camp Dix.

A. H. Westfall Made Manager.

A. H. Westfall has been appointed manager in the Rochester territory for the Educational Film Corporation of America. He reports that his features are receiving a hearty reception from the better class of theaters. The Piccadilly theater here has signed up for first run, which fact alone should be a big help to Mr. Westfall in getting some good bookings hereabouts.

Week's Filmdom Doings in Capital City

Joseph M. Cummings Chosen to Head Mutual's Washington, D. C., Branch—Other Items of Live Interest to the Motion Picture Trade.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Mutual Film Corporation has a new manager for its Washington office following the separation of Victor Abbey from that position. The new occupant of the managerial chair is no stranger to the film business, and is almost a native production, hailing, as he does, from Washington's prettiest suburb, Baltimore. His name is Joseph M. Cummings, and he broke into the film business in Dallas as the Texas representative of the General Film during the anti-trust controversy. When his work there was concluded he joined the Mutual Film, and went to Canada as general manager in the Dominion.

After about a two years' absence from the United States he went to Kansas City for the Triangle Film Company. He retained this connection until last September, when he went with the General Film as a district manager. This position took him all over the country, and he kept it until last April, when, tiring of being away from home all of the time, he returned to the Mutual, and now he's her

Mr. Cummings was installed in his new position by D. A. Poucher, from the home office, who was on the job as ad interim manager. Mr. Poucher returned to New York last week.

Is Distributing "Mothers of Liberty."

The distribution of the new release, "Mothers of Liberty," in the District of Columbia, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina is to be handled by Fritz Hoffman for Harry M. Crandall. Mr. Crandall has just concluded the purchase of the state rights privileges for the states named from the Monopol Film Company.

Dipple is House Manager at Meader's.

Charles Dipple has been named as house manager of Meader's theater, Washington, D. C., one of the Crandall string. Mr. Dipple was formerly an usher at the Apollo theater, another of the Crandall houses.

A. C. Eckhardt Back Again.

A. C. Eckhardt, formerly employed at the K-E-S-E exchange in Washington, D. C., who went to Chicago for the same concern when the local office was closed, returns to Washington to enter the employ of the Super Film Attractions, Inc.

Two Mutual Film Boys Join Navy.

Some day the Washington, D. C., correspondent of the Moving Picture World hopes to be able to have printed in these columns a complete roll of honor with the names of all the film men who have joined the colors. Washington is well represented on the battlefields of France, and the film center here is proud of its boys in khaki and blue.

Tardy mention must be made, therefore, of the enlistment of Eugene Dyer and George Leibold in the Naval Reserve. Both were with the Mutual Film Company, the former as shipping clerk in this city, the latter as booker, first in Baltimore, and then in Washington. Mr. Dyer is now stationed at the Washington Navy Yard; Mr. Leibold is at the training station at Newport News, Va.

Sam Flax Comfortable for Present.

Manager Sam Flax, of the Washington, D. C., Metro Film Service, is getting straightened out in his new quarters in the Costello building, at Sixth and G streets. Mr. Flax has only one complaint now—that even these quarters may only prove to be temporary.

The entrance to the exchange is from the Sixth street side. The first of the offices is occupied by Mr. Flax, and the other two which follow, house the members of his office force. Beyond is the large film and poster room with nearly a thousand feet of floor space. The exchange is in a fairly good location, but before it can be made to comply with the proposed new fire regulations it would have to undergo considerable additional improvement. There is no fireproof vault there. It may be, therefore, that Mr. Flax will have to go through the moving task again at the conclusion of his temporary lease.

"Tillie's Punctured Romance" Again.

Sidney B. Lust, of the Super Films Attractions, Inc., Washington, D. C., is bringing back "Tillie's Punctured Romance." Through the Community Motion Picture Bureau he has obtained booking for 200 booking days. The film is to be shown at all army camps, cantonments and forts between Washington and Louisiana.

New Operators Cause of Trouble.

Washington, D. C., exchange managers are having a great deal of trouble with shipments of films. Most of the difficulty arises from the fact that a great many of the exhibitors have new operators who do not seem to know that a great deal of damage can be done by their failing to follow closely shipping directions that go with the reels. Many instances have come to the attention ofthe writer recently where films were intended to be routed between towns but were returned to Washington by operators or others handling the shipments, with the result that the theater for which the film was intended for showing the following day remained dark. Some times the films returned are not even sent to the right exchange.

Washington's exchange managers have asked that the exhibitors instruct their employes as to the necessity of following shipping instructions. This failure to do so has resulted in some of the offices losing good business, and they have no redress in the matter.

Summer Dress Helps Theaters.

The male employes of the Strand and Garden theaters, Washington, D. C., look both cool and neat in their white duck suits, which were donned with the coming of the hot wave last week. The girl ushers are also dressing in appropriate summer costume. With slip covers over the orchestra chairs and additional electric fans, these theaters have become doubly inviting.

North Carolina Trade Letter

By D. M. Bain, Wilmington, N. C.

Wilmington Expecting Big Business.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—The selection of Wilmington as one of the largest of the shipbuilding plants to be permanently engaged in construction of both steel and concrete ships during the war and afterward, has caused a boom in the industrial life of the city which is due to reach the theaters and result in big business once the plants now being constructed by the Government are completed. With a present population of thirty thousand, Wilmington is looking for a doubling of population within twelve months, and the Howard-Wells Amusement Company, operating the five theaters in the city, are preparing in advance to handle the newcomers.

Alterations are being made to the different theaters, including the Victoria, where twenty thousand dollars is being spent. This house will open in the early fall with Keith vaudeville, high-class feature pictures replacing the present tab shows at the Royal about the same time.

An option was secured upon the only other available Front street site for a theater and was later closed, so that this corporation may at any time erect another theater to add to their change should business warrant it. The Howard-Wells organization, pioneers in the motion picture field in the South, have grown from a small ten show thirteen years ago to the proprietorship of five theaters in Wilmington and one in Charlotte at the present time, besides numerous allied interests in the vaudeville field.

S. S. Stevenson Plans New Home.

S. S. Stevenson, manager of the Princess theater, Henderson, N. C., is building a new house, which will be known as the Liberty theater, with a capacity of over 300. The Liberty will also have a balcony and will be given over entirely to pictures, using regular feature service.

The Princess, which Mr. Stevenson has managed for five years, is being enlarged and will have a seating capacity of 400. It will be a combination theater and airdome. The back walls will be made so as to be raised level with the eaves of the house and open into a large court planted with grass. Patrons may either occupy seats in the theater or comfortable chairs and benches placed on the lawn. The new Liberty will be open about June 15.

Henry Randall Answers Call.

Henry Randall, for the past two years representative of Famous Players' interests through the Wilmington, N. C., territory, is making his farewell trip and will don khaki. Randall is one of the most popular film salesmen who ever traveled this territory, having covered North and South Carolina for Mutual for a period of three years before going with Paramount Washington exchange two years ago.

C. B. Rohder Leaves Howard-Wells.

Carl B. Rohder, for the past three years manager of screen and program advertising for the Howard-Wells theaters, Wilmington, N. C., severs his connection with this company on June 1. Mr. Rohrer was forced to seek a rest on account of ill health, and will later consider several attractive propositions which have been tendered to him. Mr. Rohder has made a long study of the screen advertising business and has achieved success in the theaters he has handled which will stand for a long time as a world record.

Jolliffe Will Guide Durham House.

J. M. Jolliffe has assumed managership of the Orpheum theater at Durham, N. C., succeeding Grover Daniels, who resigned to accept a similar position in Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Jolliffe is an experienced showman, having been managers of the Elks' Auditorium at Bluefield, Va., and more recently assistant to Ollie Savin, general manager of the Piedmont Amusement Enterprises at Winston-Salem, N. C.

H. R. Mason to Take Rest Cure.

The many friends of Harry R. Mason, for many years connected actively with film interests in the South, but for the past five years owner and proprietor of the Acme and Rex theaters at Goldsboro, N. C., will regret very much to know that he has found it necessary to seek a more congenial climate and, after recuperating in the mountains, will look over several theatrical propositions in another territory. The local theaters are under the management of Mr. Mason's partner, R. F. Phillips.

Philadelphia Trade Letter

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Edgar Wolf at the Victoria's Helm.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Edgar Wolf, one of the most popular managers of Philadelphia, has been appointed the new manager of the Victoria theater, having previously established a splendid record for himself at the Crosskeys and the Globe vaudeville theaters. Mr. Wolf is chiefly noted for his high moral standards and believe in always catering to the demands of the finer element for entertainment. In the same manner that he has exercised his judgment in securing the best that vaudeville afforded, it will be his intention to follow out the same principle in obtaining photoplays for the Victoria, thereby continuing the same policy for which this house is noted.

Arthur Forbes Now Heads the Stanley.

Arthur Forbes, who has won considerable merit as the manager of the Victoria theater, has been made manager of the Stanley theater, one of the finest photoplay houses in this country and will endeavor to render the same efficient service to the patrons of the Stanley that has made the Victoria so popular with the photoplay lovers in Philadelphia.

Dolly Sisters Help Sailors.

William D. Parry, social secretary of the Y. M. C. A. corps, who is in charge of the entertainment for the sailors and marines at League Island Navy Yard, secured the services of the Dolly Sisters on the occasion of their last visit here when they voluntarily offered to entertain the boys at the Navy Yard on last Friday afternoon. The famous dancers were accompanied by their mother and a party composed of Frank W. Buhler, general manager of the Stanley theaters; Abe L. Einstein, publicity director of the Stanley; Robert Lynch, manager of the Metro; Mrs. Irine Solomon and F. V. Armato.

What Notable Films Are Doing.

"Joan of Plattsburg," a story of timely interest, attracted great crowds at the Stanley last week upon the occasion of the first presentation on Monday, June 3, when Mabel Normand again displayed her versatile talent as a capable screen actress.

"My Four Years in Germany," after enjoying three weeks of capacity business, terminated its engagement at the Forest theater on Saturday, June 8. During the showing soldiers and sailors were admitted free by the manager, Eugene Perry.

R. Berger, manager of the local George Kleine exchange, has booked "The Unbeliever" at the Hippodrome theater in Allentown, Pa., and the Victoria, in Wilmington, Del., for a week's engagement at both places.

Dr. Walter Stuempfig, of the Germantown theater, has installed a massive organ which has materially added to the interest of the photoplay attractions as the box office will testify.

Edward Kruppa Buys Exchange.

Edward Kruppa, of the Monarch, has bought out the American Photoplay exchange and acquired its entire stock of films, including "The Warrior" and "The Lust of the Ages."

New Theaters and Changes.

The Iris theater, seating over 1,000, at 3142 to 3154 Kensington avenue, was conveyed last week by Frederick P. Kennedy to Ellen Reed for a price not disclosed. It occupies a lot 80x115, and is assessed at $45,000.

Arthur Graver has been appointed the new manager of the Ridge avenue theater and succeeds Ben Shindler, who has recently joined the sales force of the Select exchange.

Negotiations are now pending whereby Gabriel Michels will take possession of two Philadelphia theaters, the Bellevue at Front and Susquehanna and the Eddystone at Lyna and Eddystone, to be reopened about June 1.

Under the name of Paramount, a new theater recently opened at Arnot, Pa. The house contains 350 seats and is considered a cosy and up-to-date place, whic his under the capable management of H. H. Roberts.

Mrs. W. Dunn, of the Washington Palace, has greatly improved the quality of pictures being shown there. The patriotic Metro feature, "Draft 258." will be shown June 6.

Great Need in Sharon for Sunday Shows

Petitions Are Being Circulated by Citizens Who Have No Place to Go on Sundays —Exhibitors Would Like to Provide It For Them.

By E. J. McCarty, 150 Union Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—There has been considerable discussion among league members and other exhibitors of late in the Pittsburgh, Pa., district regarding Sunday shows. There are two towns in western Pennsylvania at the present time which have Sunday movies, Erie and Farrell. Erie is the only large town in the territory where Sunday pictures have become a part of the regular amusement life of the city. There is no music permitted with the pictures there, however. Farrell is a small industrial town, but the theaters have been permitted to run on Sunday because of the liberal views of the council and magistrate. There is an unusually large foreign population there.

The latest recruit to the "Sunday" idea is Sharon, Pa., a town close to Farrell, but much larger in population. Petitions are now being circulated by many citizens, and they are taking advantage of the time that the workers put in the mills there during the week, and showing that they have no place to go for amusement on Sunday, although it is the only day that most of them can avail themselves of the opportunity for amusement. It is supposed that the petitioners will receive active and hostile opposition from the Ministerial Association of the valley.

There are some exhibitors in the territory who are not in favor of Sunday shows strange as this may seem. One of the largest exhibitors in Pittsburgh some time ago, in a discussion of the "Sunday" proposition, declared himself opposed to the idea simply on the ground that he felt that he should have a rest day for himself despite that extra income which might be derived from the extra day's showing. There seems to be divided sentiment on the part of exhibitors over the territory, and from what I can gather, the sentiment is largely based on this argument of the Pittsburgh exhibitor, where theater men are opposed to opening on the first day of the week. There is, however, a large sentiment for Sunday shows on the part of the public in many towns, and exhibitors feel in many instances that the desire for amusement on the part of the public should be met by the theaters on Sunday as it is in so many other territories.

New House at North Clairton.

M. A. Scarletto & Co. is opening a new house at North Clairton, Pa., which will have a seating capacity of about 350, and the indications are that the house will prosper, as the location is exceptionally good from an industrial standpoint. Mr. Scarletto, who is manager of the new house, has been connected with the Verdi theater in Pittsburgh for a number of years.

F. E. Osborne and E. Phillips in Khaki.

F. E. Osborne, of the Independent Display Company in the Film building, and "Eddie" Phillips, who formerly shipped for Pathe, but has had charge of the Triangle department for some time, have gone to camp. Phillips has gone to Columbus Barracks, while Osborne has gone to Camp Humphries at Acotink, Va. Both have the best wishes of the local film men.

Buffalo Trade Letter

Mae Marsh Sells Many Thrift Stamps.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Mae Marsh, Goldwyn star, appeared in person in Buffalo on Saturday, June 1, to aid the War Savings Stamps cause. At the afternoon performance of Shea's Hippodrome she appeared on the stage and, amid enthusiasm, auctioned twenty-four of her autographed photographs. When the bidding had subsided and the figures were totaled, it was found that the appearance of the star had netted more than $6,000 in sales of war stamps.

The evening appearance of Miss Marsh was the signal for more spirited bidding, and several thousand dollars worth more of the stamps were sold. The audience urged Miss Marsh to make a speech. She said she was glad to appear for such a worthy purpose.

Mr. Perrin of the New York office of the Goldwyn; George A. Hickey, the company's Buffalo manager, and Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, aided Miss Marsh in the war stamp campaign. A bouquet of flowers, presented by Mr. Hickey, was auctioned by Miss Marsh at the Hippodrome for $1,000. The star had the pleasure of seeing her picture, "A Face in the Dark," at that theater.

Miss Marsh said she was delighted with the reception that Buffalo gave her. She remarked that if every city in her itinerary gave her the same greeting, she would feel well repaid for her work. Miss Marsh was accompanied by her sister, Margaret, also of the Goldwyn staff.

Bruce Fowler, manager of the Olympic theater, and Charles Bowe, manager of the Lyric, Buffalo, are among the Thrift Stamp workers in Buffalo. They furnished the combined orchestras of these houses for a Thrift Stamp meeting at Lafayette square on Saturday. Leo Latz was the leader. Vaudeville acts from these theaters and the Academy were another attraction.

C. R. Rogers Gets Merited Promotion.

Charles R. Rogers, for the past year manager of the Select exchange, Buffalo, has been appointed manager of the Boston branch of that company. Mr. Rogers' successor in Buffalo is Sherman S. Webster, former road representative of the company in this territory.

"Boston is one of the big offices of the Select, and Mr. Rogers' promotion is well deserved," said Mr. Webster. "The company has picked a good man for the position." Mr. Rogers laid out the Select's Buffalo exchange, which was opened a few months ago. Nearly every visitor to the branch commented on the fact that the place was always kept as neat "as the proverbial pin." Any praise along this line was well merited by Mr. Rogers, who, no matter how great the rush, was a sticker for having the exchange in "apple pie order." Mr. Webster has always been known as a tenacious campaigner for Select Pictures. Besides hitting "the high spots," or, in other words, the big cities, he has covered by auto nearly every hamlet and junction in New York State where pictures are shown. At one time he was in the film business for himself in Buffalo, and later was with the Universal in Cleveland. He has been with the Select Pictures Corporation since it went into business. He is favorably known by every exhibitor from Toledo, O., to Hudson, N. Y.

Interesting Buffalo Bits.

Max Lewis, owner of the Frontier moving picture theater, Buffalo, is putting on vaudeville two night a week.

The Academy, a popular priced vaudeville and moving picture house, Buffalo, is now playing summer stock with pictures.

Fred Flarity, former manager of the General, Buffalo, has been called to Washington for special war service.

The Amusu moving picture theater, Arcade, N. Y., has lost its operator on account of the draft.

Glen Houghey, owner of the Glen theater, Watkins, N. Y., has been drafted.

Sales Manager Rogers, of the General, was a Buffalo caller.

Another visitor was Art Lee, special representative of the Gaumont.

H. Petrosky has taken over the Popular theater on Broadway, Buffalo.

No Electricity Even for Advertising Toy

Theater in Toronto Wanted to Use Mechanical Dog to Advertise Chaplin Film, But Dominion Power Controller Forbids.

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

TORONTO, ONT.—An instance of the far-reaching effect of the special regulations enforced in Ontario by the Dominion Power Controller was seen when Manager Clarence Robson of the Strand theater, Toronto, desired to make use of a moving object in a special lobby display for Chaplin's "A Dog's Life." A back-street scene was arranged, and it was intended to use a mechanical dog in the set. The theater was forbidden to do so because it was ruled electricity would be used for advertising purposes. According to the special regulations, no juice can be used for ornamental or advertising purposes on any theater front or in any window except on Saturday evenings.

In this connection, Manager Fegan of the Eclipse theater, Parliament street, has the laugh on the authorities because makes use of an arc rectifier in the lobby of his theater. This gives an illumination that is attractive as well as effective. This stunt has not been prohibited.

Theater Invites Aid of Teachers.

The Allen theater, Toronto, has mailed special invitations, in the form of letters, to every school teacher in Toronto to attend the regular Saturday morning performances for children either as a guardian for children whom they may bring to the theater or to look after children already at the theater. In each letter was enclosed a complimentary ticket for two adults. The co-operation of the teachers in the move for "selected pictures for children" was invited in the letters and a request was made for the opinion of the teachers regarding pictures shown.

Every teacher in the city is on a regular mailing list of the theater and letters are sent to them at frequent intervals.

Organizations Indorse Scout Film.

President Clair Hague of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Toronto, announces that he has secured the indorsement for the special serial, "Boy Scouts to the Rescue," from a number of Canadian organizations. After a special screening of the series at Ottawa, the Canadian General Council of Boy Scouts gave its official support to the picture. Others who have endorsed the subject include the Ontario Council of Boy Scouts, Dominion Council of Girl Guides and the League of Honor. The picture has also had a special screening in Toronto.

Y. M. C. A. Backs Fox Standard Films.

The Princess theater at Brownsburg, Que., has arranged for the presentation of a number of Fox Standard pictures under Y. M. C. A. auspices. This arrangement was made following the success of the presentation of "The Daughter of the Gods" as a benefit for the Canadian Red Cross Society. The plan is largely due to the initiative of the executive of the Dominion Cartridge Company, which employs a considerable number of local residents.

Two Montreal Managers Fined.

The proprietors of seven moving picture theaters in Montreal, Que., have been summoned to court for alleged infraction of the law regarding the admission of unaccompanied children under sixteen years of age. This action against the exhibitors was taken as a result of a campaign of annoyance instituted by Archbishop Bruchesi toward the civic authorities. The Archbishop adopted various methods to bring about the prosecution of the exhibitors on this account and a letter by him to the civic administration commission resulted in the arrests.

The accused were brought before Recorder Semple, and the representatives of two houses, the Majestic theater, Frontenac street, and the Dominion theater, were immediately found guilty and sentenced to $25 and costs or one month in jail. It is interesting to note that the two proprietors of each of these theaters were both fined for the same offence. In other words, there were two convictions over each alleged case.

The managers of the North Star theater, Villerai and Hubert streets; the Napoleon theater, Ontario street east; the Maisonneuve theater, Ontario street east; the Alhambra theater, St. Catherine street east, and the Lord Nelson, all pleaded not guilty and their cases were remanded.

Goldman Assisting at the Holman.

Harry Pomeroy, manager of the Holman theater, Montreal, recently acquired by the Canadian Universal interests, has secured the services of Sam Goldman as assistant manager.

"Lunch-Hour" Shows at the Rialto.

Manager Stuart of the Rialto theater, Toronto, launched a new policy, starting with the week of June 3, when he arranged for special noon-hour shows lasting exactly one hour each. These were presented between 12 and 1 P. M., and from 1 P. M. to 2 P. M. Chaplin's "A Dog's Life" and other short subjects were presented during the week. The special shows were called "Business Men's Lunch Hour Performances."

Manager Stuart has also decided to operate his theater from 9.30 A. M. to 11 P. M. daily. This is the second downtown theater in Toronto to open in the mornings. Stuart has also fallen in line with special performances for children, the first of which was given on Saturday morning, June 8, for a ten-cent admission.

Grand, at Kitchener, Becomes Allen.

The name of the Grand opera house, Kitchener, Ontario, recently purchased by Jules and J. J. Allen, of Toronto, has been changed to the Allen theater. It has been decided to charge 15c. and 20c. prices for the two evening performances and 10c. and 15c. prices for the daily matinee. Programmes are being changed twice weekly.

Recent Allen Acquisition Brightens.

The Regent theater, one of the finest picture theaters in Ottawa, was re-opened on Monday, May 27, after having been closed for a remodelling and redecoration. The Regent was recently acquired by Jules and J. J. Allen, of Toronto, who now own sixteen theaters in eastern and western Canada. J. Moxley remains as manager of the theater.

Announcement is made that the Allens have acquired control of the Coliseum theater, a 500-seat theater in the Beaches district of Toronto. They now have three large and small theaters in Toronto, and a fourth theater, to seat 1,000 people, is being built for them on Bloor street west.

Raoul Rickner Becomes Birdman.

The third employe of the Specialty Film Import, Ltd., Pathe distributors in Canada, has joined the Royal Air Force. This man is Raoul Rickner, for three years with the Montreal office of the company.

Interesting Theater Items.

Loew's theater, Hamilton, Ont., obtained a great line-up of people every day for the first week's run of "A Dog's Life" in Hamilton by offering orchestra seats free to the first fifty people in line at the box office when the doors were opened at 12:30.

Ross Humble, manager of the Family theater, Walkerville, Ont., is now overseas with the Canadian Army, serving as a corporal with the 64th Battery. During his absence the Family theater is being managed by his mother, Mrs. Humble.

William Dineen, of the Strand theater, Toronto, has disposed of his interest in the Idle Hour, a small house at Queen street east and Parliament street. Dineen had the theater for three months, during which time he made many changes in it.

The Montreal branch of the Famous Players Film Service now occupies a fine new suite of offices at 437 Bleury street. One of the features is a well-equipped projection room.

Andrew Keenan, of Montreal, formerly with Pathe and Mutual, has joined the staff of the Vitagraph in Montreal.

The Vermont theater, Toronto, has adopted the odd-cent admission price. General admission to this theater is now 11 cents, according to an announcement.

Exhibitor Gerbitig Back.

Proprietor M. Gerbitig, of the Blue Bell theater, Parliament street, Toronto, and one of the pioneer exhibitors of the city, returned recently from a five months' stay in California. During his absence the Blue Bell was managed by Mrs. Gerbitig. This exhibitor started in the theater business in Toronto eleven years ago, when he opened the Queen's Palace on College street, after which he operated the Savoy theater at Queen and McCaul streets.

Cleveland Trade Letter

By M. A. Malaney, 607 Belmont Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

Elyria Dispute Settled.

ELYRIA, OHIO.—At a recent meeting of the Elyria Theaters Company, the concern which operates all the theaters in Elyria, Ohio, the stockholders, who have been in a dispute for several months, agreed to bury the hatchet. So the dove of peace is now flying over the American, Strand, Dreamland, Bannon and Rialto theaters.

The battle between a faction led by Melton Phelos and another led by Owen Bannon was fought out in the courts about three months ago and resulted in the Bannon faction winning.

At the meeting recently, two new directors were elected to replace Frank Stetson and County Clerk Williams, who disposed of their interests to John Pekras and L. T. Fay, who are the new directors.

Fay also was elected secretary of the company, and it was announced all differences between the directors had been adjusted and that the best photoplays obtainable will be presented in the theaters. The directors now are Henry Wurst, John Pekras, L. T. Fay, Owen Bannon, Melton Phelos, Chris Neufer and Charles Chisolm.

Collected $11,711 for Red Cross.

The Electrical League of Cleveland has announced that the total amount of money collected from theaters of the city during the Victory Chest-Red Cross campaign was $11,711.

Chairman Baxter of the committee in charge of the theater collections wishes to thank the exhibitors for their hearty co-operation and the way they supported the campaign.

Rita Jolivet Stirs Cleveland.

The coming of Rita Jolivet to Cleveland proved an event of unusual importance for photoplay fans and she drew a great amount of publicity.

Miss Jolivet came June 2 and appeared for four days at the Stillman theater in connection with her picture, "Lest We Forget." In addition, she was the guest at several patriotic meetings, her husband, the Count Giuseppe de Cippico, accompanying her.

"I certainly loved this enthusiastic reception," she said.

One of the features of the event was the act of the Baker Electric Automobile Company in presenting a machine camouflaged, which she used during her stay. It attracted lots of attention and gave the picture valuable publicity.

Cincinnati Trade Letter

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

"The Remaking" for Benefit Show.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—After considerable delay, due in part to the desire of the authorities in charge to secure the best possible time and location for the picture, the initial showing of the Camp Sherman cantonment picture, "The Re-Making of a Nation," has been duly scheduled for the Grand theater, following the second week of "Cleopatra." It was stated some weeks ago that the camp picture, which bids fair to be one of the real successes of the season in Cincinnati, on account of the interest of local people in seeing their boys in training, was to be shown at the Olympic, but the opportunity to secure the Grand was given to the promotors, and was promptly seized.

The net proceeds of the picture, which has already been shown at nearly every other city in Ohio, will go to form an emergency fund for Ohio soldiers and their dependents. The engagement is for two weeks, Manager Libson having offered to interrupt the arrangements made for other features for that length of time, and as numerous patriotic societies will aid in pushing the sales of seats, an attendance of large proportions will certainly be made before the engagement is terminated.

Airdomes Do Well During Hot Spell.

All of the Cincinnati, O., airdomes got into their stride during the period of extremely hot weather which featured the last week in May, and handled big business. Temperatures around 90 degrees prevailed during all of the week mentioned, and while, as a rule, the airdomes had not been expecting warm nights, suitable for their business, before June, they took advantages of the break in their favor with promptness and dispatch. An unexpected factor against them, however, proved to be the extra hour of daylight gained by the new time schedule on which the country is working. As it is not now really dark until after eight o'clock, the outdoor exhibition of pictures is therefore not practicable until a correspondingly late hour, and this has hampered the airdomes considerably. In spite of this, the way people flocked to the cool outdoor exhibitions promises big business for the summer, and the lost hour of darkness will probably be made up by running the shows later.

Western Ohio Items.

Wapakoneta, O.—The Shannon Amusement Co., organized by Harry Shannon and others, with a capital stock of $5,000, will operate a moving-picture theater here.

Canton, O.—The Odean Amusement Co. has been incorporated by A. H. Abrams, A. L. Abrams, I. O. McKinnery, and others, and will operate the Odeon theater. The Abrams Company, organized at the same time, with a capital stock of $25,000, by the same interests, will control the Odeon company and probably others, the plans of the men interested being to operate a string of theaters.

Another Shift in Minneapolis Exchanges

Two More Managers Are Holding New Jobs—Pearson Leaves Universal for First National and Coen Leaves Metro for Universal.

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Two more exchange managers have shifted their activities in Minneapolis, thus keeping up the splendid record of eight changes established during May.

E. R. Pearson has secured a financial interest in the First National Exhibitors' Circuit exchange in Minneapolis and asked Carl Laemmle to relieve him of his duties as manager of the Universal exchange. Joe Brandt, assistant treasurer of the Universal, arrived in Minneapolis June 1 and completed arrangements for taking the Universal management off of Mr. Pearson's hands and turning the executive office over to Louis H. Coen, who for the past eight months has been manager of the Minneapolis Metro exchange.

The First National exchange will continue to transact its business out of the Minneapolis Universal exchange, but Mr. Pearson will devote his entire time to furthering the business of the First National. He will spend some of his time at the Milwaukee First National branch and will visit exhibitors throughout the territory occasionally, something he has not previously had time to do owing to his many important duties.

Mr. Coen has resigned his managerial position at the Metro and will assume charge of the Universal exchange on Monday, June 10. Mr. Coen is well known to exhibitors throughout the territory, having been affiliated with local film exchanges for about three years. Mr. Coen was twice previously with the local Universal exchange. He has also acted as salesman for Paramount and Metro. No successor to Mr. Coen has been selected by the Metro organization as yet, but it is expected that the new manager will come here from Canada. The personnel of the Universal exchange will remain as Mr. Pearson has selected and developed it.

Business Jottings from Twin Cities.

Manager Charles G. Branham, of the Strand theater, has had so many requests for a return showing of "The Unbeliever," that he has booked the film for showing its eighth, ninth and tenth days. Recently Mr. Branham played "The Unbeliever" a week to a consistent capacity business.

Arthur Tyson, formerly assistant manager of the Minneapolis Strand, has joined the Minneapolis Fox exchange as a salesman.

James V. Bryson, who controls the territorial rights to "Come Through," and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" will leave Minneapolis June 23 for an automobile trip to Boston where he and William Koenig, manager of the Minneapolis Bijou theater, will attend the National Moving Picture Exposition.

Manager Billy B. Watson, of the New Garden, Minneapolis, has booked for a second downtown Minneapolis run "The Heart of the Sunset," Rex Beach's Goldwyn. Mr. Watson has also booked Alice Brady's "The Spurs of Sybil" for showing four days beginning June 9.

"Over the Top," Vitagraph's big photoplay featuring Arthur Guy Empey, began a week's run at the Hippodrome theater, which the distributors subleased from Ruben & Finkelstein for the occasion on Sunday, June 2, to a good business. The feature was preceded by a big newspaper and billboard advertising campaign.

Indiana Trade Letter

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

"Hearts of World" in Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—D. W. Griffith's great "Hearts of the World" is to be exhibited for the week beginning June 16 at English's opera house, operated during the summer by Messrs. Barton and Olson.

The rights to show the picture in Indiana and Kentucky have been obtained by the Doll Van Film Company, of Indianapolis and Chicago. The company is headed by Henry L. Dollman of Indianapolis.

It is understood that a corps of mechanicians, operators, effect men and musicians will come from New York to Indianapolis for the local engagement. In order to perfect the special arrangements necessary to properly present the picture English's will be dark for the next two weeks. The theater has just closed a very successful week with an exhibition of Sergeant Guy Empey's "Over the Top."

Arnold Brothers Take Kokomo House.

The Isis theater, a motion picture house in South Main street, has been sold to Arnold Brothers, of Kokomo, who for the last few years have been successfully operating the Grand theater here. The Isis for the last two or three years has been operated by the Alhambra Amusement Company, of Elwood and Kokomo, of which Ralph Mosiman was the local representative. It is understood that Mr. Mosiman will return to his former home in Elwood, where he and his brother, Hugh, will continue to operate a moving picture theater now controlled by them.

Arnold Brothers have announced that the policy of the Isis, which has built up a reputation as a moving picture theater of the highest class, will be continued.

Illinois Trade Letter

New Companies—Theater Changes.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—Secretary of State Emmerson has issued certificate of incorporation to the A. and B. Theater and Amusement Company, Chicago; capital, $2,500; incorporators, John T. Boyle, Ellen C. Boyle, and William M. Lynch.

Nauvoo, Ill.—The Nauvoo airdome has been sold to Simon Diekman, who will operate a moving picture show.

Champaign, Ill.—George Applegate has sold the Varsity theater to G. R. Parker, of Urbana.

Keithsburg, Ill.—The Gem theater was reopened after being closed for two weeks.

Peoria, Ill.—Fire at the Princess theater on South Adams street damaged that house, making it necessary to close it for ten days for redecoration. The fire was noticed while the show was in progress, but Secretary Henry Weisbruch, of the Seaver Amusement Company got the crowd out without difficulty. The Chaplin feature, "A Dog's Life," was booked for the Princess, but was transferred to the Hippodrome.

St. Charles, Ill.—T. W. Bryant is now in control of the Idle Hour theater, the firm of Bryant & Cremer, which operated the Idle Hour and Strand theaters, having been dissolved.

Roseville, Ill.—E. C. Smith has opened his new moving picture theater, the Idle Hour.

Plans Great Theater in East St. Louis.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Title to a site 150x200 feet at the southwest corner of Collinsville and Illinois avenues has been taken by Josehp Erber and Phil Cohn, proprietors of several southern Illinois moving picture houses. The building now on the property will be remodeled so as to provide for a steel and concrete vaudeville and moving picture theater seating 2,500 persons. The project represents an investment of $225,000. Plans for theater have been drawn by C. W. and George Rapp, of Chicago. The promotors operate Erber's theater in East St. Louis, the Washington and Lyric in Belleville and other, and, in addition, contemplate establishing others in other Illinois towns.

What Has Happened in Texas Filmdom

Pictures that Pleased in Dallas Last Week—Some Interesting Changes Among People in the Trade—Exhibitor Commends Texas Editors.

By Douglas Hawley, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

DALLAS, TEX.—Perhaps the most pleasing moving picture offered Dallas patrons during the week ending June 1, was the Hart-Paramount "Selfish Yates." Local newspaper critics hesitated not to call it the best release the "gun man" has been seen in in many a week. The two "kiddies" were particularly appealing to most of the local reviewers.

Dallas releases for the week beginning June 2 included the first "Selexart" shown here, in "Carmen of the Klondike," at Nevill's Washington theater. Manager Bissinger put the picture on for a week's run, and first day's indications were for a good business. Hulsey's Old Mill began the week with a return engagement of the Metro "Revelation," with Nazimova, for three days, and ended up with the Select "De Luxe Annie," with Norma Talmadge, a picture many local people had been waiting for. Hayakawa, in the Paramount, "The White Man's Law," with the Pathe news features, including the official French issues on Americans in Picardy, started the Queen off, and a revival of "The Coward," with Chas. Ra and Frank Keenan took the latter part of the week. The Hippodrome ran "The Spreading Evil" the week through.

J. W. Hill, Jr., New Pathe Manager.

District Manager C. W. Wessling, of Pathe, before leaving Dallas after a stay of some ten days, announced appointment of a new local staff and a complete rejuvenation of the Dallas branch. The new manager is J. W. Hill, Jr., with L. D. Brown named as assistant manager. Mr. Hill is a native Texan and has been in the "game" as an independent distributor for several years. P. E. Clinckett, formerly of the San Francisco office, and with a record declared to be enviable, has been made Dallas auditor.

Pathe Worker With Red Cross.

Miss Willie Sterett, for the last several years assistant cashier at the local Pathe branch, resigned her place May 15, to go into Red Cross work. Miss Sterett has already sailed for "over there," where she is entering the canteen service of the great war-time organization.

Cliff Reid Quits Mutual.

Cliff Reid has resigned as Dallas manager for the Mutual, going with W. G. Underwood of the Matinee Film Company, interested in the United Theaters project. District Manager Stephens of the Mutual, came up from New Orleans to check Mr. Reid out.

H. G. Morrow, formerly with F. N. E. A., but now with the United, has been transferred from Dallas to New Orleans and Atlanta territory.

James Kelly Back From Border.

"Jimmy"—or more properly James—Kelly, the Paralta specialist with the General, is back at headquarters from a trip into lower Rio Grande border territory. James—or "Jimmy"—reports some business and is chockfull of optimism as usual.

Sam Schwartz Not an Editor.

Sam Schwartz says he isn't an editor, and particularly not a Mexican editor, but he's "for" the latter contingent just the same. Mr. Schwartz is proprietor of the Aztec theater, Eagle Pass, Tex., and he was in Dallas just about the time a party of thirty Mexican editors landed at Laredo, preparatory to making a tour of the United States, studying war-time conditions. They are all pro-Ally in their sentiments, it is said. "It's a good thing," said Mr. Schwartz. "They're bright, brainy, up-to-date fellows, and they'll learn that the United States is friendly toward Mexico—wants to help her to the fullest of its power in the sister republic's present difficulties. I venture to say that their trip will do a world of good toward restoring the confidence that should exist between the two countries." The Eagle Pass man says things are rocking along nicely.

The Owens Back With Contracts.

Harry Owen, manager Lynch Enterprises branch, with Mrs. Owen, has returned from a week's automobile trip through southwest Texas territory—declared to have been both enjoyable and profitable. Mr. Owen reports several very satisfactory new accounts opened and some personal acquaintances made that were thoroughly enjoyable.

Harry Musser, in charge of short subjects at the Paramount-Artcraft office, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Owen—his last trip before joining up with Uncle Sam. Mr. Musser, with F. A. Little, also of the Lynch staff, have both reported at Camp Travis for army training.

Quanah Man Quits Films.

T. K. Hawkins is now operating the theater formerly conducted at Quanah by W. W. Fernell. Mr. Fernell has sold out his interests and gone into the oil business at Bartlesville, Okla. He had many friends in the trade who wish him success in his new venture.

Rockport, Tex.—C. F. Hoffman and Mrs. Merritt have sold the opera house to H. L. McKee and C. L. Camble, who are now running it.

Deming, N. M.—The Majestic Theater Company chartered, with a capital stock of $50,000, by W. W. Wilcox and William Menhennet, of Deming, and C. Fred Brackett, of Mesa, Ariz.

Gulf States Trade Letter

Liberty Theater Opens June 15.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The date of the formal opening of the Liberty theater has been fixed for June 15, and it is probable that there will be no change in the present arrangements. The dedication of the new theater is expected to take on the proportions of a public ceremony from the fact that dedicatory exercises will include the unveiling of a great statue of Liberty enlightening the world, which will surmount the theater, and further that the entire proceeds of the opening date will be given to the Red Cross. The feature production is to be Guy Empey's "Over the Top." Manager Ernst Boehringer, of the Boehringer Amusement Company, builders of the Liberty, has recently been under medical care at a local hospital, and for the past few days has been in Texas in the hope of regaining strength for the strenuous work of opening the magnificent new photoplay house.

Al. G. Dunning Wins Promotion.

Al. G. Dunning, who for two or three years has been with the New Orleans branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, was appointed branch manager on Monday, May 27, and he has become well settled in his new position. Al. is one of the best known film salesmen in the New Orleans territory, and he has been receiving congratulations of his friends ever since his good fortune. S. T. Stephens, former branch manager, has been rewarded for good work by being appointed Southern superintendent, and he will retain his headquarters in this city.

New Company in Plaquemine.

Plaquemine, La.—The charter of the Liberty Theater, Inc., has been filed with the clerk of court. The company is incorporated for $25,000, the shares being divided into 2,500 at $10 each, and the charter was signed by upwards of a thousand stockholders. The officers are Victor J. Kurzweg, president; William J. Oubre, vice-president, and Henry J. Levy, secretary and treasurer. The board of directors consists of V. J. Kurzweg, Henry J. Levy, William J. Oubre, Ned B. Schwing, A. H. Gay, H. N. Sherburne, S. P. Schwing, W. A. Holloway, Henry Nadler, E. J. Gay, C. K. Schwing, Eugene Holloway, Joseph J. Templet, Mark Arnold, Sam Polizzotto, Jules A. Carville, W. C. Miller, Sidney Levert, Charles W. Row, W. C. Myhand, and Dan D. Holliday.

Karl A. Bugbee Drops United.

Karl A. Bugbee, one of the best known film men in the South, has severed his connection with the United Pictures Corporation, Inc., New Orleans, and will turn his activities in other directions. The exhibitors of this section are using great caution in entering into any of the organizations that propose to revolutionize the film business, and Mr. Bugbee decided to seek other fields.

Iowa Trade Letter

By J. L. Shipley, 615 Locust St., Des Moines, Iowa.

W. L. Myers Leaves Palace Theater.

DES MOINES, IA.—One of the biggest surprises of the week in Iowa film circles is the announcement that W. L. Myers, for the past several years manager of the Palace theater in Waterloo, has tendered his resignation to take effect this month. Mr. Myers, through his splendid showmanship and unusual advertising ability, has won a place of almost national prominence. He is relinquishing the management of the Palace in Waterloo because of a desire to enjoy a vacation to which he feels entitled aft many months on the job.

Charles McGuire, formerly manager of the Palace in Vinton, will succeed Mr. Myers as manager of the Waterloo Palace, while George Smith, formerly of the Palace in Cedar Rapids, becomes manager of the Vinton theater. A. J. Diebold, of Cedar Rapids, will do booking for all three towns.

M. J. Frisch Back in Des Moines.

M. J. Frisch, formerly assistant manager of the local Pathe office, and later connected with the Pathe in Oklahoma City as officer manager, has returned to Des Moines, and is now associated with Manager H. E. Friedman, of the local Laemmle interests here. Mr. Frisch states he is very glad to return to Iowa, and his many friends will be glad to see him.

Iowa Business Brevities.

A. Kahn, Iowa representative for Select, pulled a stunt recently that entitled him to the business that rewarded his efforts. Missing his train on a jump from Waterloo to Reinbeck he borrowed a motorcycle from one of the attaches of the Palace theater there, and made the round trip in an hour and a half, bringing back a contract for five pictures. Mr. Kahn threatens to use a motorcycle for the rest of the summer to make the smaller towns.

The Palace in Des Moines is establishing the record for week runs. Not only did Nazimova in "Revelation" pack the theater for seven days, but "Lest We Forget," with a big Memorial Day attendance, held up over the week to nice business.

D. C. Burgum, manager of the Garden theater, Des Moines, has left for an Eastern trip, stopping at Chicago, Cincinnati, and Cleveland en route to Pittsburgh, his former home. Mr. Burgum will be gone about two weeks.

The A. H. Blank Enterprises, Des Moines, have had to purchase additional prints of "Tarzan of the Apes" to take care of the number of bookings which have been coming in on this subject. "Tarzan" has proven one of the most consistent money-makers in this part of the country, and several prints are booked well into the fall.

F. R. Martin Now a Soldier.

F. R. Martin, well known Iowa road man for several film concerns, has enlisted in the Quartermasters Department, and is stationed at Camp Dodge.

Henry Boyle Dies in Florida.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.—Henry Boyle, sixty-seven years old, who was responsible for the building of the Henry Boyle theater, died at Miami, Fla. He was a millionaire.

New Theaters and Changes.

La Crosse, Wis.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Liesenfeld, who formerly operated the Dome theater on the north side, have reentered the local photoplay field by taking over the Star theater and reopening it as the Rex. Improvements and the installation of new projection apparatus make it a practically new theater. The musical programs will be in charge of Franz von Loew.

Spring Valley, Wis.—H. L. Boch, a former exhibitor here, but more recently of Glenwood City, has purchased picture shows at Black River Falls and at Alma Center, which he will operate. He will make his headquarters at Black River Falls.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Davidson theater found it profitable to hold over "My Four Years in Germany" for a second week.

Superior, Wis.—All Superior theaters united the night of May 20, donating one-half the receipts to the Red Cross.

Sheboygan, Wis.—The funeral of Jack Clark, who operated a number of moving picture theaters in various parts of Wisconsin, and who died at Muskegon, Mich., was held here.

Iron River, Wis.—The building formerly occupied by the Farmers' Co-operative Store has been remodeled, and will be occupied by a moving picture theater operated by E. Daniels.

Hurley, Wis.—M. E. Keegan, of Maple Lake, Minn., who purchased the Garrick theater from Carl Becker, overhauled the house prior to its reopening about June 1.

Black Creek, Wis.—A moving picture theater has been opened in the Auditorium by F. N. Blick, who will operate it Friday nights.

Beaver Dam, Wis.—Charles Staehle is now in control of both the Odeon and Davison theaters, having taken a lease on the latter house. The photoplay policy will remain at the Odeon, while the Davison will be used for road shows, as well as for feature pictures.

Waupaca, Wis.—The remodeled Lyric theater has been reopened under the management of Charles Cohen. The seating capacity will be doubled.

Washburn, Wis.—A moving picture show under canvas will be operated here.

Marinette, Wis.—Manager Aelick, of the Strand theater, was host to the members of the senior class of the high school at a performance of "Tom Sawyer."

KANSAS CITY ITEMS.

New Theaters and Changes.

Marceline, Mo.—The airdome will be remodeled and opened some time soon.

St. Charles, Mo.—The Lyric theater and the airdome are under new management. John Moore will be in charge of the airdome, and D. W. Bass will continue to run the Lyric as a picture house.

Joplin, Mo.—J. Taylor, formerly in the moving picture business in Oklahoma, has reopened the Star theater at Joplin, Mo., under the name of the Liberty.

Kansas City, Mo.—W. A. Andlauer, proprietor of the Bonadventure and St. John theaters, recently sold the St. John to Mr. L. M. Lashell, formerly connected with the Kansas City Star. The St. John theater is located at 3608-10 St. John street.

Airdomes Go Well Near Mother Theaters

In Kansas City Separate Sky Roof Shows Are at a Disadvantage, but Exhibitors Who Can Run Two Shows Together Find Them Profitable.

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The hour more of daylight plan has been a problem to the Kansas City exhibitors which they are solving in various ways. Those who have been maintaining airdomes have in some instances decided to abandon them and continue the performances at the regular theater. Other exhibitors whose airdomes are conveniently located with respect to their winter houses have decided to try out the plan of giving the first performance indoors and a later one commencing about 9:15 at the open air theater.

W. G. Bailey, proprietor of the Alamo at Hunter and Main streets, is an example of the latter group. Mr. Bailey's airdome is just next door to the regular picture house, the screen being placed on the outside wall of the Alamo. Patrons coming in toward the close of the indoor performance are given extra tickets which will admit them to the adjoining airdome for the outdoor entertainment. In case of unfavorable weather the patrons are furnished with rainchecks and the performance continues at the Alamo. Mr. Bailey opened his airdome the evening of Memorial Day, and the plan has worked out very well so far, improving as the patrons become accustomed to the new system.

Mr. Scott, of the Apollo theater at 33rd and Troost avenue, intends to try out a similar plan, though his open air theater is located two blocks away, and it will be necessary to employ a double shift of assistants.

Kansas City Universal Notes.

E. E. Reynolds, formerly with the Mutual Film Corporation, is now filling the position of sales manager of the Jewel productions in the Universal office.

Frank S. Cass, who has been with the Universal office in Kansas City for the past four years, has been promoted to sales manager of the special productions department.

C. A. "Red" Jones has accepted a position as manager of the short subjects department.

Geo. W. Himton has been added to the sales force of the Universal Film and Supply Company.

While here, Joe Brant, assistant treasurer of the Universal Film Mfg. Co., decided to make the Wichita office, of which O. K. Major is manager, a branch of the Kansas City exchange, the action to take effect July 1. The Wichita office has formerly been a branch of the Oklahoma City exchange.

H. W. Talbot, formerly manager of the Universal office of Kansas City, and now connected with the Paramount at Dallas, Tex., was in Kansas City recently on business.

J. T. McGowan, general auditor for the Universal Film and Supply Co., New York, was in Kansas City recently installing a new system in the office here. A similar system will be installed in the offices of each of the seventy-three exchanges of the Universal Company.

Lends "Unbeliever" for Recruiting.

The Kansas City office of the Geo. Kleine productions, of which C. C. Vaughan is manager, donated "The Unbeliever" to the Marine Corps for a free showing, which was put on at the Grand Avenue Temple, Sunday, June 2. The film was put on for recruiting purposes.

Madame Guerin Stirs Audience.

Madame Guerin, wife of the French jurist, who is in Kansas City for a week or ten days in the interests of the Red Cross and other war charities, spoke on France in war time at the Gillham theater, Saturday night, June 1. Madame Guerin, who wore the French uniform, was enthusiastically received by the audience, and when at the close of her talk sixteen young ladies passed quickly through the aisles the well-filled contribution plates testified to the deep impression her pathetically vivid sketch had made. Mr. Rhoades, the proprietor of the Gillham, has placed his theater at the disposal of all Red Cross benefits, and the entire proceeds for one evening during the war fund week were donated to the cause.

"Pershing's Crusaders" in Kansas City.

"Pershing's Crusaders," now running at the Garden theater for a limited engagement, drew an unusually large crowd on its opening night. Every available seat was occupied, and about two hundred fifty spectators who had not made reservations were turned away. It was an enthusiastic audience which cheered wildly as the American troops marched across the Rhine, the many troops from nearby training camps adding their share.

The advertising of the film was done in a novel way. One feature of this was inserting notices in the pay envelopes of all employees of mills, packing houses, and mercantile establishments. Announcement was also made from pulpits and schools.

E. McAvoy Becomes Salesman.

E. McAvoy, who has been with the Mutual for some time as a booker, has left to take the position of salesman for the southern Kansas and Missouri territory, formerly held by E. E. Reynolds, now of the Universal. Mr. McAvoy will be succeeded as booker by Mr. Roder Wild.

Exhibitors Seen in Kansas City.

The Kansas City exchanges are enjoying visits from many out of town exhibitors as the weather grows warmer. Among these were:

J. H. Kamm, Coffeyville, Kan.
J. G. Tindale, Baxter Springs, Kan.
W. H. Ingran, Fairfax, Okla.
John E. Feeney, Okmulgee, Okla.
C. C. Johnson, Great Bend, Kan.
E. T. Burgan, Beloit, Kan.
S. A. Davidson, Cherryvale, Kan.
H. Roy Payne, Spring Hill, Kan.
J. R. Burferdt, Rex theater, Arkansas City, Kan.
E. R. Munson, of the Belmont theater, and J. P. Barkwell, of the Royal, Eldorado, Kan.

Theater Notes from Middle West.

Cunningham, Kan.—Mr. Ludwig is now manager of the picture show at this place.

Colony, Kan.—Preston Bowen, owner and manager of the Crescent theater, has closed the theater and joined the army.

Newton, Kan.—The old Pearl theater here is being remodeled. Mr. Hardin is the new proprietor.

Wichita, Kan.—Work of wrecking buildings at 308 and 310 East Douglas avenue will begin immediately. The new Wichita theater, to cost about $80,000, will be erected on the site.

Corning, Kan.—A recent fire destroyed the Starlight theater. W. M. Ward, proprietor. The loss runs into thousands, and there was no insurance.

Wichita, Kan.—The Palace block on West Douglas, owned by Charles and Harry Lawrence, is being remodeled. E. B. Holmes, of Newton, will move his moving picture concern from Newton to the Palace block. The Lyric theater, which has been in that building, is moved to its new home at Twenty-first and Lawrence.

Milford, Ia.—G. H. Williams has purchased the Royal show at this place.

Hopkinton, Ia.—The new Belnap theater has been opened for business.

Start Co-operative Booking in Bay City

Some Leading Exhibitors Open Office on Golden Gate Avenue—Want a Member in Each Town—Officers Chosen for Company.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—In order to take advantage of the plan of collective booking some of the leading exhibitors in the San Francisco territory have organized the Pacific Coast Exhibitors, and offices have been opened with the Liberty Film exchange at 168-170 Golden Gate avenue, recently launched by Nat A. Magner. It is the plan of this organization to have one member in each town, or in the case of San Francisco, one in each district. The membership already includes Louis R. Greenfield, of the Mission and Fillmore street districts, San Francisco; C. W. Midgley, of Oakland and Alameda; James Beatty, of San Jose and Fresno; Charles Godard, Sacramento; Joe Cohen, of Honolulu, and Peter Hanlon, of Vallejo. The officers are Charles Godard, president; C. W. Midgley, secretary, and James Beatty, treasurer. The reviewing committee is composed of C. W. Midgley and James Beatty. Owners of houses in some of the smaller towns of northern and central California are expected to affiliate with the organization at an early date.

Apollo Theater Reopened.

The old Empire theater, on Market street, near Sixth, recently taken over by Aaron Goldberg and associates, has been refitted in handsome style and reopened as the Apollo theater. The entire front of the house has been changed and presents a very handsome appearance in a new shade of gray. The interior has been redecorated and the theater transformed into a very cozy house at a cost of several thousand dollars. It is near the Strand theater and in the very center of the amusement district of the city. The seating capacity is 400 and the projection equipment consists of Simplex machines. The price of admission is 10 cents at all times.

Goldwyn Head Pays a Visit.

Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, recently visited the San Francisco office of this concern and spent a short time inspecting some of the fine theaters that have been erected here since his last visit, and is investigating conditions. He has since left for home, going by way of Denver. Upon the departure of Mr. Goldfish for the east local manager, G. C. Parsons, left for Los Angeles on a brief trip.

Chaplin Film to Return to Strand.

After having been shown at the Strand theater for three weeks in succession, the Chaplin success, "A Dog's Life," has been taken off to make way for other attractions. It will be brought back in June, however, for another week's run.

Casino Drops Pictures for Ten Weeks.

The Casino theater has dropped moving pictures for a period of ten weeks to make way for the Will King musical comedy company, which has brought its engagement at the Savoy theater to a close. All of the pictures booked for the Casino will be shown at the Hippodrome during this special engagement.

Incandescent Outfits Prove Popular.

Especially in the smaller communities, incandescent outfits are meeting good success. George Metcalfe reports having sold equipment of this kind to L. S. Murphy, Guerneville, Cal.; the Antelope Valley Land Company, Topaz, Cal., and to the United States Government for use on Goat Island.

Managers Out Meeting Exhibitors.

The managers of several San Francisco film exchanges have been making road trips of late to meet exhibitors and to learn of country conditions from first hand. H. H. Hicks, of the Select Pictures Corporation, has completed a trip through the valley; Floyd St. John, of the local World branch, has also made a valley trip with one of his road men, and Louis Reichert, of the Metro, has visited exhibitors in Sacramento and Stockton. Myron H. Lewis, manager of the San Francisco office of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, has been covering the Sacramento Valley, while J. Goldberg, of the local Bluebird office, has also been out visiting exhibitors. Meyer J. Cohen, of the George Kleine System, returned recently from Fresno, where he started an engagement of "The Unbeliever" at the Liberty theater.

Progressive Motion Pictures Notes.

Herman Wobber, manager of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, San Francisco, is expected home shortly from a conference of Famous Players' managers at New York.

Robert C. Poor has been added to the local selling staff and is rapidly becoming conversant with the business.

The Famous Players-Lasky recently published a large advertisement giving the names and addresses of thirty-one local theaters where Paramount and Artcraft pictures may be seen.

Lasky Company to Visit Wawona.

A Lasky company will visit Wawona, near the Yosemite valley, early in June to film "The Source," a lumber story featuring Wallace Reid, supported by Ann Little. The production will be made under the direction of George Melford, and other members of the company will be James Cruze, Theodore Roberts, Charlie Ogle, Guy Oliver, Raymond Hatton and James Mason. The camera work will be done by Paul Perry. The location is in the Sierra Nevada mountains, almost due east of San Francisco, where specimens of Sequoia, the largest trees in the world are to be found.

Jesse Goldberg Visits Coast.

Jesse Goldberg, of the Metro, arrived in San Francisco recently in the interests of the film production, "My Own United States," featuring Arnold Daly.

Found Fotoplayer Far from Home.

The American Photoplayer Company has received word from W. B. Crooks, of the Orpheum theater, Benecia, Cal., that he has landed safely at Ellis Island, New York, after a trip to the Atlantic by way of the Panama Canal. He states that he was surprised to find a Fotoplayer installed in the Sailors' theater there, the gift of Mrs. Edith Kingdon Gould, and advises that he has been asked to remain there as the permanent player.

San Francisco Briefs.

A special Memorial Day musical program, free to the public, was offered by the management of the Tivoli opera house, a feature of this being two mammoth pipe organs playing the same numbers at the same time in perfect synchronism by Gordon Bretland and Edward House.

During the recent showing of "M'liss," at the Imperial theater, a special attraction was offered in the appearance of Miss Roberta Hewson, a counterpart of Mary Pickford, who wore on the stage the same costume worn by the screen star during the filming of this story.

The California theater now has six stars in its service flag, and another former employe is now with the United States Shipping Board.

Vivian Preston, formerly of this city, is touring New Mexico with the Evans & Sontag film, "The Folly of a Life of Crime," controlled by George Chamberlain, of the Independent Film exchange.

D. Santry, a cartoonist of South Africa, was a recent visitor here and has since left for New York to take up work with some of the news weeklies.

Northern California Notes.

Petaluma, Cal.—E. B. Deakin and Clyde Van Deveere, who recently purchased the M. & M. theater, have secured property on West street and plan to erect a moving picture house at an estimated cost of $40,000.

Corning, Cal.—F. D. Gogers, who conducts the new Corning theater, has purchased the Maywood opera house from Alex. Case.

Niles, Cal.—The Niles theater has been purchased by Thomas Spees.

Jackson, Cal.—John Ratto, who conducts houses here and at Plymouth and Sutter, has closed the one at the latter place and will show pictures but two days a week in the other two.

Portland, Ore. Trade Letter

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Building, Portland, Ore.

Village Theaters Close for Summer.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Travelling film men returning from interior portions of the state bewail the fact that the sentiment among many small exhibitors is to close for the summer time. Among the towns that have definitely reported to exchanges that they will not continue to operate during the hot months are the Burns, Riddle and Myrtle Creek, Oregon. While these accounts are small, exchanges take their closing as an indication of conditions throughout the territory except Portland.

Metropolitan exhibitors are looking forward to a big season this summer in asmuch as the war activities started in the Rose City will not be abated during the summer months; in fact, the influx of labor is expected to be greater than ever.

Said J. J. Parker, president of the Majestic Amusement Company, conducting the Majestic theater. "I am lookng forward to one of the best summers in the history of the amusement business in Portland. Accordingly, the Majestic theater is going to follow the plan of booking the best pictures available during the summer months as it has done during the season just closing; there will be no cheap pictures to 'tide over' the summer, so to speak. The business conditions here are such that I do not think this procedure necessary."

Ralph Ruffner Goes to Butte.

Spokane Studio Starts Film Production

Florence Turner Takes First Scene for Washington Motion Picture Company in Picture of Old Country School—Gala Day Made for Opening.

By S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 11th Ave., Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH.—A score of Spokane children, with Miss Florence Turner, on May 25 put on the first scene in the first film to be made by the Washington Motion Picture Corporation before a crowd of guests of the company in the new plant at Minnehaha.

The ceremonies were the first of three days of festivities to mark the formal opening of the new studios in which the Payroll Committee of the Spokane Ad Club, which was instrumental in bringing the industry to Spokane, entertained several hundred guests with ceremonies and dancing in the indoor studio and the studios outdoors.

H. C. Sampson was chairman of the day, and introduced T. S. Lane, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who welcomed the corporation to the activities of the Inland Empire, and assured the stockholders and screen stars of the hearty cooperation of people of Spokane and vicinity. Mayor C. M. Fassett extended the welcome of the city to the corporation.

General Manager C. J. Ward, of the company, declared that the splendid equipment and settings for the work has fulfilled his fondest hopes.

Lawrence Trimble, director of productions, said: "I have found here just the conditions that I have long sought for." Tyrone Power was warmly greeted by the guests, and he responded by expressing his deep appreciation of the interest of Spokane people in the moving picture industry, and particularly the welcome that had been extended to him and the other members of the company who have come here and are about to produce the first film plays.

Others who spoke were Wellington Playter, Miss Turner, Sarah Truax Albert, and Harry Hyde.

The guests were then entertained by watching the filming of the old country school with the Spokane children and Miss Turner.

Kempton Greene arrived in the midst of the festivities, and was introduced to the assemblage. Mr. Greene will take juvenile roles in the screen productions at Minnehaha park.

Tyrone Power, now leading man with the Washington Motion Picture Corporation, was featured May 30 and 31 only, at the Clemmer theater in "A Modern Lorelei."

Liberty Theater Releases Boy Ushers.

In order to release 14 boy ushers for farm work this summer the Liberty theater, Spokane, has decided to employ girls, and to make the substitution in the next four or five weeks. A natty serviceable costume is being designed now, and as soon as the manufacturers turn over the costumes the girls will be placed in the Liberty in place of the 14 boy ushers.

"The Liberty theater wants to help win the war," said Manager Sam Cone, "and I believe the best contribution we can make right now is 14 healthy, strong lads between the ages of 16 and 20 years.

The Liberty has booked the Pathe play, "The Yellow Ticket."

Seattle Trade Letter

By J. S. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

Plans to Use Theaters for War Chest Fund.

SEATTLE, WASH.—J. A. Koerpel, Seattle World manager, who is a member of the publicity committee for the second war fund drive in Seattle, has planned to make motion pictures play an important part in the drive, both in advertising it and in actually furnishing a means for collecting money. He had a short length film made of the subject of the war poster entitled "He Gave His All." This will be shown at all the theaters on Mercy Monday. Then on Saturday, May 25, he obtained the use of five theaters, the Palace Hip, Levy's Orpheum, the Clemmer, the Mission, and the Colonial, to give free shows in the morning for the children. The shows were free only in that there was no admission charge. The idea of this is "nothing to get in, but something to get out." Red Cross workers were stationed at the doors to collect a silver piece from each person going out. The films were all donated by the exchanges, and they were of the type to appeal to the youthful audiences, but mostly patriotic.

Carl Laemmle Visits Seattle.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, spent a recent Sunday in Seattle. G. A. Metzger, manager of the Northwest territory, came up from Portland with Mr. Laemmle, and will take charge of the Seattle office for several weeks while John R. Meldrum, the Seattle manager, is out in the territory. Mr. Metzger is inaugurating a special sales campaign, with E. R. Latz and Beverly Griffith helping Mr. Meldrum to cover the territory. Mr. Griffith is a director at Universal City. He is trying to sound exhibitors on just the kind of pictures that their patrons want. This is in line with Universal's policy of finding out what the exhibitor wants and giving it to him.

C. F. Hill Making a Motor Car Trip.

C. F. Hill, Northwest manager for Goldwyn, is making a trip in his motor car as far south as Corvallis, Oregon, calling on all exhibitors along the line, whether they have booked Goldwyn pictures or not. In this way Mr. Hill expects to make many friends among the exhibitors and to get a first hand knowledge of conditions in that part of the territory.

Film Personals From Seattle.

B. R. Keller, who opened the Select exchange in Seattle, is now road representative out of the Seattle Foursquare office.

Mike Rosenberg, manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, announces that he has secured the Northwest rights to "song hits in motion pictures."

Notes from the Dakotas

"STOLEN ORDERS."

William A. Brady's Screen Production of Stage Melodrama Excellent War Propaganda.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ENGLISH melodrama generally has the merit of being well made. "Stolen Orders" is no exception to the rule. Written by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, and produced first on the London stage, the play was brought to New York and put on for a run at the Manhattan opera house by William A. Brady. An eight-part screen version has been prepared by Manager Brady, most of the stars of the World Film Corporation being included in the cast. The picture is excellent war propaganda. The Drury Lane production had English characters and scenes. In the screen version the personnel is American, and most of the action takes place in the United States.

The story never attempts to get above its class. Frankly melodramatic, it depends on the vigor of its action and the variety and "punch" of its incident to hold the spectator. It shows a striking phase of the German spy system in this country, has a United States naval officer for its hero and contains a number of scenes taken on board of a United States battleship.

"Stolen Orders" is a timely picture. It is an extensive and capably handled production and will thrill the hearts of all honest Americans. Minor faults will be readily overlooked for the sake of the soundness of its patriotism and the opportunity it gives to applaud the overthrow of a German plot to obtain secret information from the United States War Department.

There are several novel features to the plot of "Stolen Orders." The German spy system manages to get two Americans in its power and forces them to steal important information concerning naval movements that are sent to an American admiral. The wife of this admiral is one of the unwilling tools, and a man whose love for his sick child outweighs every other consideration, is the other. The incidents leading up to the moment when the young naval officer wrests the orders from the German diplomat and gives him a thrashing are pieced together in a workmanlike manner, and the sensations include an attempt to escape in a balloon and its pursuit by the hero in an airplane.

The cast contains the names of Kitty Gordon, Montagu Love, June Elvidge, Carlyle Blackwell, George MacQuarrie, Walter D. Greene and Madge Evans. It is hardly necessary to assure screen patrons that the acting in the picture meets every demand.

"THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT."

Melodrama Full of Human Touches and Finely Directed by Ralph Ince.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

IT is the sympathetic light thrown into human hearts in passing rather than consistent glow on life from the plot that makes the new Advanced production, "The Eleventh Commandment," a noteworthy picture among the early summer releases. The story is melodrama, but, written and directed by Ralph Ince, it has been so artistically handled in the making that it is beyond cavil a beautiful picture.

The scenes surrounding one deeply poignant place in the story where the lights on the little heroine's birthday cake are permitted to go out on the dining room table while she is led away to prison prove its maker a master-hand, and reminds one of Belasco's work. She hadn't taken the money. It was her fiance who snatched it away from her against her struggling will, and she couldn't clear herself without convicting him. Lucille Lee Stewart plays this part with charming skill, and makes such incidents as this, and there is more than one or two of them in the picture, convincing and moving to a degree.

The details of direction and stagecraft, the supporting players, the gracefully arranged entrances and exits, lighting, furnishings and all consistently aim at a poetic and beautiful effect, and they attain it amply. The subtitles—not all of them, but a good many—are weaker than the picture, and this is the more noticeable, as the action has been so clearly pictured that many of them are not needed.

Walter Miller plays the villainous lover whose selfish lack of conscience causes all the trouble. Huntley Gordon has the role of faithful and unselfish hero who is true to the bitter end, and his playing does much to keep the character convincing. Grace Reals as the girl's mother has one scene that gives her all the chance she needs, and she fills the opportunity splendidly. It is, of course, when her daughter won't deny she took the stolen money. Carlton Macy plays a benevolent doctor who intrusted the funds to the girl, his stenographer, and he carries a rather hard part without losing its dignity for an instant. It is an offering whose beauty will be the cause of much favorable comment.

"THE MAN HUNT."

World Picture Features Ethel Clayton in Story That Is Different.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is no effort in this amusing five-reel subject based on a story by Fred Jackson to adhere to the probabilities. It owes its particular interest to the way in which the heroine throws ordinary procedure to the winds and sets out to marry a man she chooses for herself. It is a veritable case of "Woman proposes, and man disposes." In this instance the reluctant hero says he won't marry her, but the girl employs some men to abduct him, taking a minister along, and they go to a cabin in the woods. In the end she, of course, has her way.

Ethel Clayton is cast in the role of Betty Hammond, daughter of a mining and lumber king. After her father's death she goes abroad, and all sorts of titled individuals desire to marry her. This pursuit by the men of title was handled sketchily, and it would have added strength to the story to show that her coming to America was a positive flight from them. This might be accomplished by a well worded subtitle, and would help to justify her decision to choose an American man for herself. Ethel Clayton plays in good style, and carries off her role very attractively. Rockliffe Fellows, the American hero, and the lover of her childhood days, is also an excellent type. The work of the two principals does much to render convincing a plot so improbable that it requires considerable skill to get it over.

The number was directed by Travers Vale. Others in the cast are Henry Warwick, John Adrizonia, Herbert Barrington, Jack Drumier, Al. Hart, and John Dungan.

"FIND THE WOMAN."

Vitagraph Version of O. Henry Story Presents Alice Joyce in Pleasing Romance.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE gifted author of the O. Henry stories must have been in a very romantic mood when he wrote "Find the Woman," which has been produced on the screen by the Vitagraph Company as a Blue Ribbon Feature. The picture is a love story, with Madeline Renard, of the French Opera Company of New Orleans, as its heroine. Alice Joyce plays the part, and makes it human and appealing. Modern realism has little in common with the method and personality of this refined and earnest actress; the gentleness and charm of the young opera singer who is the central character in "Find the Woman" fits her in every way. Tom Terriss directed the picture. His work is greatly to his credit. The New Orleans exteriors are well chosen, and there are glimpses of an old garden that are very beautiful.

Unless one knows New Orleans intimately it is difficult to realize that the scenes of the story are in the United States and the time is today. The entire atmosphere is French, and O. Henry has caught the style of the French romantic school. Mme. Tibault, the keeper of the cafe, who pastes a fortune in Government bonds over a crack in the wall, is a character that belongs to a land different from ours. The fortune was left her by an aunt, and intrusted to Monsieur Morin, an unworldly old gold worker, who invested in the bonds for madame, and then died without telling her their value. Madaline, who is to sing Marguerite in "Faust," has Morin make her a number of paste jewels to wear in the part. A pearl necklace that belonged to her mother gets mixed with the imitation jewels, and Morin is supposed to have used Madame Tibault's money to pay for the necklace, and given it to the opera singer. Madaline almost loses her lover through the mistake, after she gives up the pearls to shield the old goldsmith's name. The ending is a happy one.

Walter McGrail, Henry Houry, Jessie Stevens, Jean Paige, Arthur Donaldson, and Martin Faust complete the cast.

"SMASHING THROUGH."

Herbert Rawlinson Scores in Universal Subject, Abounding in Action.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE title of this five-reel Universal feature, "Smashing Through," is very apt, and gives a fine conception of the dashing qualities displayed by Herbert Rawlinson as the hero. The part is one that brings out his athletic powers to the best advantage. He is assisted in this offering by a capable cast, Sally Starr appearing as the girl, and Neal Hart, M. K. Wilson, Sam De Grasse, and Clarissa Selwynne having important roles.

The story, which was written by Walter Woods and directed by Elmer Clifton, is a first class Western yarn of the type in which action and suspense figure largely. Mr. Rawlinson appears as Tod Mason, a young prospector, whose rich claim is about to be jumped by a crooked lawyer and his friends. The lawyer, Earl Foster, is in love with the sister of Ralph Brandon, the girl heroine. Ralph Brandon is a weakling, and has been drawn into the crooked work by the lawyer.

During the course of the story Foster succeeds in entrapping the girl in a false marriage, and the hero makes a dash in an automobile and later on a motorcycle to overtake the train and rescue her. But perhaps an even more exciting feature of the yarn is the three-cornered fight between the would-be claim jumpers, the sheriff's posse, and the hero and the girl in a cabin.

The subject is one that will have wide appeal.

"THE ONLY ROAD."

Metro Pictures Release Features Viola Dana in Strong California Tale.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is an undeniable charm about this five-reel number, "The Only Road." It was written and adapted by George D. Baker and A. S. Le Vino, directed by Frank Reicher, and photographed by John Arnold. The plot ingredients are not altogether new, but they have been put together in a very convincing manner despite the fact that an averted hanging and a forced marriage are included. For all-around story interest this subject should not be overlooked.

Viola Dana is cast in the role of Nita, a seller of vegetables in a sleepy old town of Southern California. She is just the type for such a part, being rather diminutive and girlish, but at the same time able to look out for herself, as she is frequently called upon to do in this number. Edith Chapman makes a strong bid for the acting honors in the part of Clara Hawkins. It has been some time since the writer has seen any actress throw more sincerity into a role than she accomplishes in certain scenes here. Casson Ferguson as the hero and Fred Huntley and Monte Blue as the villain and his son also do good work.

The plot revolves about the parentage of the girl. She is presumed to be the daughter of a half crazy old peon, but her fair complexion and blue eyes belie this. Ramon Lupo, the villainous lawyer, who is retained by Clara Hawkins, knows the secret of the girl's birth, and the facts are brought out after some very dramatic happenings. The subject as a whole is full of interest, and beautifully pictured.

"KIDDER & KO."

Pathe Play Features Bryant Washburn and Gertrude Selby in Pleasing Yarn.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel Pathe Play, produced by Prando from a play written by John W. Grey, makes good light entertainment. The action is breezy and full of humorous touches. The plot is not exceedingly novel in any respect, but the continuity is swift and the characterizations good. It is the sort of an offering that will amuse the average audience very successfully.

Bryant Washburn plays the role of Cuthbert Kidder, son of a wealthy dealer in dried fish. The young man is one of the type designated as too strong to work, but he plays excellent pool. In fact he wins a championship at this much to his father's disgust. The old gentleman gives Cuthbert fifty dollars, and tells him to come back when he has earned one thousand dollars by honest toil.

Cuthbert goes West, and in a certain city comes to financial grief. He is finally knocked unconscious by some crooks, and picked up by Julie Knight and her wealthy father. They take him home, and there are some amusing scenes during Cuthbert's convalescence. He pretends to have invented a patent can, and finally induces a young inventor to help him make good on the story. They produce a "Keyless, Kutless Kan," and make a fortune. Cuthbert wins the girl, and then brings his father to terms.

Bryant Washburn and Gertrude Selby are both pleasing as the lovers. Others in the cast are Harry Jenkinson and Wadsworth Harris.

"SOCIAL QUICKSANDS."

Metro Pictures Release Presents Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman in Romance.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel Metro number, "Social Quicksands," is not an emotional story as the title might indicate. It is what the magazines are prone to call a "summer story," and a very delightful one of the type. It contains a wealth of agreeable photography, some picturesque scenic effects, and the plot itself makes excellent light entertainment. Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman are seen in pleasant and appealing situations throughout the entire story.

The girl heroine, Phyllis Lane, is stung by the indifference of Warren Dexter, who fails to attend a reception at which he was to meet her. The circumstances of the case are known to the other guests, and Phyllis makes a wager that within a month she will bring the young man to the altar with a matrimonial rope about his neck. To make good her proposal, Phyllis decides to go to his home and faint on the steps, but when she arrives there a better plan occurs to her.

She catches sight of some crooks trying to raid the place. Phyllis enters the house, and discovers a girl crook gathering up the silverware. She grasps the girl's revolver and forces an exchange of clothing. She then hides the girl in the clock, and allows Dexter to believe she herself is the lady crook when he comes. There are some good humorous touches strung along through these scenes.

Later Dexter, thinking to reform the alleged crook, offers her a job as maid at his hunting lodge. During the romantic situations which follow he falls madly in love with her, and so within the given time Phyllis brings him a captive to the altar.

The number, as a whole, is artistically presented, and holds the interest firmly.

"HER FINAL RECKONING"

Pauline Frederick in French Romance Does Best Work of Screen Career.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

WRITTEN by Jules Claretie, the famous director of the Comedie Francaise, and produced under the supervision of Emile Chautard, "Her Final Reckoning," a Paramount picture, with Pauline Frederick as the star, is French in subject and treatment. Produced on the stage under the title of "Prince Zilah," the role of Marsa has been acted by most of the great emotional actresses now living.

Its story is not for the Sunday school library. Marsa is the daughter of a Hungarian gypsy woman who is captured by a Russian officer and forced to become his mistress. When a daughter is born to the pair the officer offers the mother marriage. She refuses on account of her hatred of all Russians.

The child Marsa grows up and is noted in Paris for her beauty. Prince Zilah, a Hungarian patriot, falls in love with her and they are married. It is next disclosed that Marsa had been intimate with an admirer named Count Menko and is living in fear of him.

The Count demands a meeting with his old sweetheart and Marsa consents. When he arives she turns loose a number of savage dogs and the Count is disfigured for life. A package of compromising letters fall into the hands of the Prince and Marsa confesses the truth about Menko. Zilah leaves her and she loses her reason. Count Varhely, a friend of Zilah's, kills Menko in a duel and helps to convince the Prince that Marsa loves him devoutedly. He goes to his wife at the request of her physician to help restore her reason and is successful. Finally convinced that Marsa is worthy of his love, the Prince becomes reconciled with his wife.

Set in its Old World frame and finely acted by Pauline Frederick and her support, "Her Final Reckoning" makes a very favorable impression in spite of the feverish nature of its story. It is finely produced and seems a truthful reflection of the life it is intended to depict.

Pauline Frederick does the best work of her screen career in this picture and acts with a sincerity and restraint that are thoroughly convincing. John Miltern as the Prince, Bob Cain as Count Menko and Warren Cooke as Count Varhely lend her efficient aid.

"SHACKLED."

Louise Glaum the Emotional Heroine of Well-Made Paralta Photoplay.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

LAWRENCE McCLOSKEY is the author of "Shackled," a six-part Paralta play, directed by Reginald Barker. The scenario was made by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton, and Louise Glaum is the featured player. There are a number of beautiful seashore and garden exteriors and the camera work by L. Guy Wilky is uniformly excellent. The acting also is generally commendable, and the production reflects credit on all concerned.

The story is bound to excite a wide difference of opinion. Some will find it unusually sympathetic, others will refuse to forgive the heroine for accepting the protection of a man without having gone through the formality of a marriage ceremony with him. This act leads to all the drama in the story and the woman is made to pay in tears and heartache before she is permitted to become the wife of the man she learns to truly love. Lola Dexter is weak by nature, but Louise Glaum contrives to give the impression that the girl is more sinned against than sinning and that inability to fight the battle of life rather than vicious instinct is what leads her to become the mistress of Walter Cosgrove.

A thorough cad, Cosgrove makes her believe he intends to marry her and then coldly turns her off when he sees an opportunity to secure a wealthy bride. While the pair are on their wedding trip Lola meets the father of Cosgrove's wife. He is an invalid and offers her the position of secretary. When Cosgrove and his bride return they find Lola an inmate of the Danfield home.

Complications, ending in the death of Cosgrove and the engagement of Lola to Danfield, who regains his health, keep the dramatic tension well keyed up. W. Lawson But, Charles West, Roberta Wilson, Jack Gilbert and Roy Laidlow are the leading members of the support.

"THE MODEL'S CONFESSION"

Universal Feature Presents Mary MacLaren in Story of Ultra-Social Type.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE glamor of high society hangs about this six-reel Universal feature, and the presence of an agreeable and cleverly balanced cast does much to sustain interest in its slight, artificial story. There is a well-sustained mystery in the conduct of the heroine, and we think careful elimination of unnecessary scenes to the extent of about one reel would speed the production up immensely.

Mary MacLaren is attractive in the role of Iva Seldon, and the remainder of the cast is proficient. It includes Kenneth Harlan as the hero, Billy Ravensworth; Edna Earle as Rita Challoner, the other woman, and Herbert Prior, Louis Willoughby, and Gretchen Lederer in other roles. The social atmosphere is excellently suggested throughout this number, but the action drags through too many close-ups and too much conscious posing. There are many observers who like a certain amount of this style of presentation, but it should not be permitted to slow down the story too much, as happens in this number.

The plot is interesting, and concerns a girl named Iva Seldon, who poses for an exclusive gown shop. She becomes interested in Billy Ravensworth, who has been reduced to poverty by a beautiful woman named Rita Challoner. Iva desires to get into society, and makes a proposal to Billy that he announce their engagement, and his jealousy of Rita induces him to take this course. Iva makes an impression in the exclusive circles, and it develops that she is desirous of revenging herself upon her father, Bertrand Seldon, who does not know her. The closing scenes in which the father meets death are quite dramatic.

"MADAME SPHINX"

Alma Rubens Excellent in Interesting French Criminal Story Produced by Triangle.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

STARTING with a tenseness that catches and holds the attention from the first moment, "Madame Sphinx," a five-part Triangle photoplay in which Alma Rubens is the star, proves an exceptionally interesting criminal story with Paris as the scene of action. Raymond L. Shrock wrote the story and Lanier Bartlett furnished the scenario. Thomas N. Heffron directed the production, which was photographed by C. H. Wales. The picture has received adequate treatment in all departments of production.

Celeste, the ward of Henri Du Bois, finds herself friendless when the body of her guardian is discovered on the floor of the library. The safe has been rifled and a cuff-button carved with the head of a sphinx is lying near it. Celeste picks up the button and determines to track the murderer, after the police fail. Her quest takes her into the Latin Quarter. Here she is attracted by a young artist who wears on his tie a pin that matches in design the cuff-button with the sphinx's head. Satisfied that she is on the track of the murderer she makes his acquaintance and accompanies him to a cafe frequented by the male and female Apaches of the neighborhood. A realistic free-for-all fight is a feature of this incident.

Celeste finally manages to get the artist into the room where Henri Du Bois was murdered and accuses him of the crime. He is innocent and turns out to be the son of the murdered man, having quarreled with his father over becoming an artist and then changed his name. A love of excitement and a wish to help many of the poor people near his studio led him to assist a band of thieves ply their trade. Celeste is happy to learn the truth regarding him and the two have the good sense to fall in love with each other. The real murderer is caught.

Alma Rubens is a fine selection for the part of Celeste. Her beauty and intelligent acting give the character the right touch of romantic interest. Wallace McDonald is a worthy second as the artist, and the minor roles are in competent hands.

"THE CLAW"

Clara Kimball Young in Well Produced Select Picture of South African Life.

STORIES of South African life written by Cynthia Stockley are always correct as to detail. "The Claw" is one of this author's most interesting novels, and the five-part screen version produced by Select, with Clara Kimball Young as the heroine, has been skillfully directed by Robert G. Vignola. The scenes in the book showing Mary Saurin's life in London and her first meeting with Major Kinsella, the hero, are left out of the screen version, the picture opening with the heroine traveling across the South African veldt in a cart driven by a drunken driver. She is rescued from danger by Kinsella, and when she joins her brother at Fort George becomes the belle of the post.

Stair, the resident commissioner at Fort George, is smitten by Mary and makes up his mind to cut out the Major at any cost. An uprising of the blacks sends Kinsella and Stair on the warpath after them. Stair runs away when the battle begins and Kinsella is captured by the natives. By making the blacks think he is crazy he avoids being put to death. Stair goes back to Fort George, tells Mary that Kinsella has been killed and prevails upon her to mary him. News is finally brought that the Major is a prisoner. Stair experiences a change of heart, goes to his rescue, is fatally wounded and dies in Mary's arms, after reaching Fort George with Kinsella.

The human interest is carried along cleverly. "The Claw" will not rank among the most dramatic of the Clara Kimball Young pictures, but its atmosphere will please. The part of Mary Saurin has few strong scenes and the star is not severely taxed by it. She dresses it becomingly and makes the most of her opportunities. Milton Sills is manly and convincing as Major Kinsella, Henry Woodward, Mary Mersch, Marcia Manon, Jack Holt and E. M. Kimball complete the excellent cast. Louis J. Physioc had charge of the photography.

"HIT-THE-TRAIL-HOLLIDAY"

George M. Cohan Seen As the Wide-awake Hero of His Up-to-Date Comedy-Drama.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

AFTER a successful career on the stage "Hit-the-Trail-Holliday" has been turned into a screen play by John Emerson and Anita Loos, with Author George M. Cohan as the hero of his own story. Marshall Neilan directed the production and Walter Stradling was the cameraman. The character of Billy Sunday, the famous evangelist, is the prototype for Billy Holliday, the champion drink mixer, who is won over to the cause of prohibition and who helps to defeat the brewery element of the town in which his sweetheart lives. The subject is up to the minute and George M. Cohan's breezy impersonation of Billy carries the performance along at a lively rate.

The first glimpse of Holliday shows him tending bar in a New York hotel. Billy never takes a drink himself and his refusal to serve some young boys results in his quitting his job. Otto Wurst, the proprietor of a brewery in a small town, starts a hotel of his own when he finds out that Burr Jason, the owner of the old established hotel, has closed his bar and is strong for prohibition. Wurst engages Billy to run his bar for him, but Holliday throws up the job without even starting it and helps Jason to put a temperance drink on the market with the near Anhauser-Busch name of "Vevo." Billy also prevents the liquor crowd from breaking up a prohibition convention and makes such a live speech on the subject that he is in great demand as a prohibition advocate all over the country.

Being a normal young fellow Billy's desire to help the hotel man get rich is caused mainly by his interest in Jason's pretty daughter and he is rewarded by winning the girl's heart. The story is all very human and leaves an excellent impression.

The supporting cast includes Marguerite Clayton, Robert Broderick, Pat O'Malley, Russell Bassett, Richard Bartelmess and William Walcott in well acted parts. "Hit-the-Trail-Holliday" is an Artcraft picture and the production is worthy the name.

FOX REISSUES TWO FILM HITS.

"The Bondsman" with William Farnum and "A Fool There Was" with Theda Bara.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE more recent of two Fox reissues is "The Bondsman," which I reviewed in the issue of this paper dated April 8, 1916. The story is from Hall Caine's famous novel. It is very tragic, and while not the best of Mr. Farnum's box office attractions nor so convincingly directed as some of his more recent pictures, the leading man has two tremendous roles as the vagabond, Stephen Orry, and in the latter parts of the tale as his Iceland son, Jason. Sunlocks, the vagabond's Isle of Man son, is taken by Harry Spingler. Dorothy Bernard plays the role of the heroine of the younger generation, and Doris Wooldridge has the role of the vagabond's aristocratic first wife. The picture is as interesting today as when it was produced because the story has a bigness that will not grow trivial. It has substantial worth.

"A Fool There Was."

Even more artistic than the Hall Caine story is this Theda Bara picture, "A Fool There Was," which gives her probably her best vampire role. It is true that it pictures the degradation of what was a fine man, distinguished and worthy, who falls under the sway of the adventuress, but there is nothing sloppy in its relentless showing of the fact. It is an unpleasant but a remarkably ably directed and acted picture. The plot carries the man from the heights of public esteem to the depths when her "Kiss me, you fool," will make him turn from the appeal of wife and child and cling, the slobbering idiot, around the siren's neck. The house he lives in becomes a pen. He crawls on his belly among a litter of bottles and glasses. The picture was first released early in 1915.

"THE FIREFLY OF FRANCE."

Paramount Presents Wallace Reid in a Romantic Melodrama.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

STARTING out with great promise, the romantic pursuit of a mysterious girl by a young American aviator on his way to volunteer at the front, the story leads through a series of adventures aboard ship, in Italy and France, complicated by the constant reappearance of an alleged Secret Service agent of the United States, who is in reality a German spy. The young aviator, impersonated in pleasing fashion by Wallace Reid, engages in this enthusiastic chase because he has become infatuated by the mysterious young lady, Ann Little. The spy is after some important "papers" intrusted to her brother, "The Firefly of France." He is so sure that she will lead him straight to where her wounded brother is in hiding, and that she is unaware of his purpose, he follows her closely without attempt at disguise.

This double pursuit leads to an old French chateau near the line of battle, where the wounded "Firefly of France" is hiding, carrying with him a double set of papers, one intended to deceive the enemy in the event of capture. The American aviator, supplanting the mysterious young lady's murdered chauffeur, arrives with her at the chateau, and only to find the old caretaker bound and gagged and the spy with confederates in French uniform in possession.

The American and the girl are made prisoners, and is about to be tortured into a confession when they put up a spirited fight and escape to a secret room where "The Firefly" is hiding. Her conduct there leads the hero to become desperately jealous, and he resorts to a dangerous expedient to release her from persecution. He gives up the false papers and rides away with the spies. At the battle front he turns them over to the French forces, but he is seriously wounded by an exploding shell. In the end, while convalescent at a hospital, he is decorated for his services, is rejoined by the girl, and finds she is the Firefly's sister-in-law. They "seal their love with a kiss." Such is the story he relates to some companions in the service.

GENERAL FILM TWO-REELERS.

An O. Henry, "The Purple Dress," and a Wolfville, "Tucson Jennie's Heart."

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

"The Purple Dress."

OF the large number of O. Henry stories which have been filmed as Broadway Star Features, "The Purple Dress," a two-reel offering, is one of the most interesting and entertaining. The story is slight, but the characters are well drawn and finely interpreted by a competent cast. It is rich in human interest, and much credit is due to Agnes Eyres, who enacts the principal role with a great deal of realism. The production as a whole is well directed, although there is a lack of continuity in certain of the scenes.

All the girls in the department store desire to make a hit with the junior partner. Maida saves her money to buy a purple dress to wear at a Thanksgiving party. Just as she is about to make the last payment her friend Grace is turned out of her room for non-payment of rent, and Maida comes to her rescue. The tailor lets her have the dress on credit, and, although it is a cold day, she goes to the park without a wrap. She accidentally meets the junior partner, who is a fresh air fiend, and everything ends satisfactorily.

Evart Overton is well cast in the leading male role. Bernard Siegal gives a fine characterization of the Jewish tailor, and Adele De Garde is satisfactory as Grace. The closing scene where Maida sneezes just as she is accepting Ramsey's proposal is a clever bit.

"Tucson Jennie's Heart."

This two-reel Broadway Star Feature is the best of the Wolfville stories of Alfred Henry Lewis so far presented by General Film Company. There is a lot of wholesome humor in the story, which deals with the arrival of a new and very pretty waitress. Two of the boys immediately fall in love with her, and in order to find out just where they stand they stage a fake murder wherein the one whom the crowd thinks is the favored suitor is supposed to be killed. Contrary to expectations, Jennie clings to the neck of the other chap, and the only one who is not surprised is Mrs. Rucker, the boarding house keeper, who enjoys the crowd's discomforture.

Patricia Palmer not only looks the part, but acts it well. The cast includes Robert Burns, Tex Allen, William Lester, Edward Alexander, and Hattie Buskirk. George Sargent directed the production.

"THE LAST REBEL"

Triangle Picture of Southern Life Featuring Belle Bennet, Fairly Entertaining.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

COMMENCING at the time of the Civil War, "The Last Rebel" is a romance of two generations. This five part Triangle photoplay, featuring Belle Bennett, was written by Hapsburg Liebe and directed by Gilbert P. Hamilton. G. E. Jenks is responsible for the scenario and Jack Mackenzie was the cameraman. Aside from the rather overdrawn innocence and pride of the heroine and the unconscious humor of some of the subtitles the story has considerable appeal.

The first portion has the more life and movement, but the local color is always correctly handled and the negro parts are acted by colored actors of real ability.

In the earlier scenes two prominent southern families are turned into bitter enemies by the breaking out of the Rebellion. Harry Apperson and Cora Batesford are lovers, but their engagement is broken off forever.

Fifty years later the grandchildren of these two become the hero and heroine of the story. Jim Apperson, who has gone west and made a fortune, returns to the south to find that Floribel Batesford is about to have her old home sold for debt and be turned out on the world. Jim tries to befriend her, but Floribel will have nothing to do with an Apperson and goes away with her old mammy to earn her living. During her struggles in the city Jim watches over her and finally succeeds in getting back the Batesford plantation. It is not until after he is badly hurt in defending her that Floribel learns to love him. Her attempt to drown herself and Jim's fight with a band of thugs is not very skillfully devised.

Belle Bennett is earnest, but lacks the youthfulness called for by the part of Floribel. Joe King is likable as Jim Apperson. Lucretia Harris is an amusing Mammy Lulu.

"THE SPOILED GIRL."

Montgomery Flagg Sketch Gives Unforgettable Portrayal of Type.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE originality and freshness with which the Montgomery Flagg sketches known as the Kleine-Edison "Girls You Know" series is imbued make them welcome on any program. The particular number entitled "The Spoiled Girl" is one of the best of these, and not only reminds us of girls we have known, but also inspires a more emphatic dislike of this type.

James Montgomery Flagg first draws his sketch of the girl, and then tearing it from its frame reveals the real girl lounging in bed with the pouting expression which is her wont. Then we are treated to an expose of her various moods and selfish acts. For instance, she allows mother to bring breakfast to her in bed, and doesn't even greet her with a smile nor trouble to thank her.

And it is nothing for father and mother to sit up until daylight to open the door for her as she returns from a dance. Finally she demands an automobile so that she will not have to bother with taxis, and in order to grant her wish some of the house furniture has to be sold. In a tantrum she takes her car and goes to her lover, and the closing scene shows her in a home of her own making life miserable for a husband. The picture contains some good comedy and will be enjoyed by the majority of audiences.

Comments

General Film Company.

TUCSON JENNIE'S HEART.—This two reel offering is about the best of the Wolfville stories by Alfred Henry Lewis which have been released by General Film Company. The manner in which two of the boys lose their hearts to the new waitress and the whole town picks out the wrong one as the favored suitor is cleverly brought out. Patricia Palmer is attractive in the title role. Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

THE PURPLE DRESS.—An interesting two-reel O. Henry story, although the continuity is not as satisfactory as in some of the earlier subjects. Agnes Ayres and Evart Overton are the principal players. The atmosphere of the original story is well maintained. Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

Advanced Motion Picture Corp.

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT (Advanced).—A five-reel offering of exceptional merit written and directed by Ralph Ince from the text for women, "Thee Shalt Not Marry Any Man Whom Thou Dost Not Love." It is a beautifully written and splendidly played picture. For a longer notice see another page of this issue.

Famous Players-Lasky.

HER FINAL RECKONING (Paramount), June 9.—Pauline Frederick is at her best in the leading role of this five-part photoplay taken from a stage drama written by Jules Claretie and directed by Emile Chautard. The story is one of love and passion, but is a fine example of its class. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

HIT-THE-TRAIL HOLLIDAY (Artcraft), June 16.—George M. Cohan in a screen version of his own stage play should prove a big card. The Yankee-Doodle comedian keeps the fun and interest moving right along, and the entire production is up to the Artcraft standard. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Fox Film Corporation.

THE BONDMAN (Fox Reissue).—A William Farnum picture of Hall Caine's famous novel. The leading man has two roles, and both are worthy of him. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

A FOOL THERE WAS (Fox Reissue).—Theda Bara's truest vampire role is in this picture of the degradation of what was once a worthy man. It is Paul Emerson Browne's story, and is noticed at more length on another page of this issue.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

THE FAIR PRETENDER (Goldwyn), May 19. — An unusually entertaining comedy-drama featuring Madge Kennedy. The story lives up to its title well. A full review of same will be found in our issue of June 15.

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

SHACKLED (Paralta).—Lawrence McCloskey is the author of this five-part picture, which tells the story of a woman who is forced to pay dearly for breaking the moral law. Louise Glaum gives a sincere performance of the part. The production is well done. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

George Kleine System.

THE SPOILED GIRL (Edison).—One of the Montgomery Flagg sketches that is unusually good. The character of the spoiled girl is well portrayed, and the picture serves as a lesson to doting parents, as well as making good entertainment. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE ONLY ROAD (Metro), June 3.—A strong five-reel story of southern California featuring Viola Dana and a well-balanced cast. The story is full of exciting action, and has strong dramatic moments. It is also beautifully pictured. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

SOCIAL QUICKSANDS (Metro), June 10.—A five-reel comedy-drama featuring Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman. The plot is a light, romantic one, with some good humorous touches strung through it. It makes excellent light entertainment. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Mutual Film Corporation.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 29 (Mutual), June 9.—This issue contains a number of items of special interest, including a parade of the veterans of '61, the motor races at Sheepshead Bay, with Ralph De Palma winning; Red Cross nurses en route to France, Schwab and Edison at Ship Christening, veterans of Civil War and of Northwest Rebellion at Toronto, Canada, the Yale oarsmen at work, Roosevelt at Detroit, and artists painting war subjects for use in patriotic endeavor from posed war scenes.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE FALSE SIGNAL (Pathe), June 16.—Episode No. 15 of "The House of Hate." In this interesting instalment both Gresham and Pearl indulge in pretended love affair in order to escape from the island on which they are held prisoners by the Terror's gang. Pearl dazzles her susceptible male guard, and induces him to change the location of the signal light. Gresham pretends to make love to Queenie Kate. The Terror, in the darkness, is thrown against the rocks by the high tide, but escapes, and the pursuit of Pearl and Gresham begins.

BRITAIN'S BULWARKS NO. 6 (Pathe), June 16.—This instalment gives some admirable glimpses of the British Navy in action, or at least some monitors, destroyers, and drifters on a raid near the Belgian coast. The maneuvers are full of interest, and give an idea of the swift travel of these war craft. Scenes on board a monitor carrying 15-inch guns are also shown. Also King George and Prince Albert on an inspection trip.

KIDDER & KO (Pathe Play), June 16.—A five-reel subject featuring Bryant Washburn and Gertrude Selby. This is a breezy little comedy in which the idle son of a dried fish merchant finally pulls himself together and makes good. He also wins the hand of a pretty girl, portrayed by Miss Selby. The story makes good light entertainment.

ARE CROOKS DISHONEST? (Rolin-Pathe), June 23.—A laughable number, featuring Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard, and Bebe Daniels. The two men play the parts of fake jewelry salesmen, and the girl is assistant to a seer. Many amusing schemes of one kind and another are pictured in this, which is one of the best in which this clever trio have appeared.

MORE TROUBLE (Pathe), July 14.—A Frank Keenan feature in which he and a competent cast do excellent work. The picture is a comedy-drama of original and excellent type—one of the best of the season. A full review appeared in our issue of June 15.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE LAST REBEL (Triangle), June 9.—Belle Bennett appears as a young southern girl in this five-reel picture, which covers the Civil War period and the present. The story has considerable appeal. The production was directed by Gilbett P. Hamilton. A longer review was printed on another page of this issue.

MADAME SPHINX (Triangle), June 9.—Alma Rubens does excellent work in this five-part detective photoplay with scenes laid in the underworld Paris. The picture was directed by Thomas N. Heffron and is full of interest. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Company.

CURRENT EVENTS NO. 56 (Universal), June 1.—With the U. S. Marines in Texas, aerial practice in America, with the Belgium troops in Chicago, launching fabricated steel ship, women as farmers, and numerous other subjects are pictured in this diversified number.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 27 (Universal), June 5.—With the "Blue Devils" in St. Louis, War Savings Stamp Festival in New York, knitting contest in Detroit, U-Boat activities on Atlantic coast, and other subjects are treated in this number.

THE MODEL'S CONFESSION (Universal), June 8.—A six-reel number, adapted and directed by Ida May Park. The cast is a pleasing one, consisting of Mary MacLaren, Kenneth Harlan, Herbert Prior, Edna Earle, and others, but the plot is of an artificial type and none too convincing. This would no doubt be stronger as a five-rel subject. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE LION'S CLAWS, NO. 11 (Universal Serial), June 10.—Another thrilling and excellently pictured instalment. Beth is rescued from the back of the horse by Lieut. Gordon, but is later captured by the four natives. Her father, Harris, and Musa search for her. The jungle scenes are again well-contrived.

A BLIND PIG (L-Ko), June 12.—This two-reel comic gets its best effects in the second reel, where some excellent mechanical feats are pictured. The humor of the first reel is of the knockabout order, and only fairly strong. But the second reel is much better, and makes the offering one above the average.

THE KNOCKOUT (Lyons & Moran), June 22.—A prize ring story, with a lot of laughs in it. Lee Moran poses as the great "Kid Mulligan," while Eddie slugs his opponents from behind the scenes with a club. This is one of the best sporting pictures made in a long while, and will make a hit with the fans.

SAMASHING THROUGH (Universal-Rawlinson).—A five-reel subject written by Walter Woods and directed by Elmer Clifton. Herbert Rawlinson is cast as the hero, a young prospector, whose rich claim is endangered by a crooked lawyer and his accomplices. The action is very swift, and contains much suspense. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

World Pictures Corporation.

THE MAN HUNT (World Pictures), June 17.—A five-reel subject based on a story by Fred Jackson. Ethel Clayton plays the role of a girl heiress who is pursued by unwelcome fortune hunters and chooses a hard-working American man. She practically forces him into marriage. The story is improbable, but the cast handles it so well that it will pass as an entertaining subject. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Fox Production "Kultur" Takes a Crack at the Kaiser

IN view of the alarm that Provost Marshal General Crowder's "work or fight" order has caused in the motion picture industry officials of the Fox Film Corporation are pointing to "Kultur," now being made at Hollywood by Gladys Brockwell, as an instance of the patriotic service which the films can perform for the nation.

"Kultur" is described as a blow at Berlin's methods of diplomacy, and is said to show in a startling way the readiness and eagerness of the Kaiser for war and the domination of Austria by Germany.

How Germany peremptorily demanded of Austria that she find a pretext for hostilities is shown with great fidelity to detail. It is said one of the remarkable scenes in the picture is that of the secret council at which the Teuton leaders plotted to upset the peace of the world.

"Kultur," said a Fox official, "is merely another example of the patriotic work which the films are doing for the country. Like 'The Spy' and 'The Pride of New York,' both of which undoubtedly performed a great service in stimulating patriotism and recruiting, 'Kultur' is aimed to arouse among the people of the United States a realization of the cynical methods employed by the German rulers."

Edna Goodrich Portrays Young Society Matron

MAIBELLE HEIKES JUSTICE'S story, "The Gadabout," upon which Edna Goodrich is now working for Mutual at the Biograph studios in New York gives the stage beauty the role of a frivolous, pampered young society matron—a part well adapted to Miss Goodrich's comeliness and her faculty of wearing gorgeous clothes.

She portrays the type of woman found in all circles of ultra wealthy society, spoiled by worship and attention, living to the very limit of her husband's resources. The plot revolves around the situation which arises when the young husband's ruin threatens and the methods she adopts to avert ruin.

Miss Goodrich is known in Europe and America for her charming appearance. Her stage successes here and abroad gave her a tremendous screen vogue, and her previous motion picture productions have been distinct box office successes.

Her new series for Mutual will open with "The Gadabout." It is being produced under the direction of Burton King, with David Powell as leading man. Mr. Powell has appeared opposite some of the screen's most favored actresses in the last year, but this is his first appearance with Miss Goodrich.

Cites Testimonials to Prove Power of "The Kaiser"

UNSOLICITED testimonials from exhibitors, according to President Carl Laemmle of Universal, through whose exchanges Jewel Productions are being released, are the most conclusive proof of the box-office value of a motion picture. As an example of his contention he cites the testimonials received from exhibitors all over the country on their success in presenting "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," which H. M. Berman, of Jewel Productions, claims has made more money for exhibitors than any picture yet released.

Notwithstanding that "The Kaiser" had its presentation in the first run theaters of the country several weeks ago, every mail continues to bring exhibitors' testimonial letters from exhibitors to the New York office, and it is seldom a day passes without the receipt of a least one telegram from a first-run house demanding a rebooking date.

The demands for rebooking are so heavy that the branch exchange managers throughout the country are more insistent in their present demands for extra prints than when "The Kaiser" first was released. The answer for these demands is given in the indorsements from the exhibitors now on file in the offices of the company.

Universal Presents Herbert Rawlinson in a Story of Concentrated Action Originally Intended to Serve as Material For an Entire Serial.

Cast.

Jack Mason.....Herbert Rawlinson
Dave Marco.....Neal Hart
Earl Foster.....Sam DeGrasse
Ralph Brandon.....M. K. Wilson
Holly Brandon.....Sally Starr
Mrs. Brandon.....Clarissa Selwynne
Stevens .....Paul Hurst

Directed by Elmer Clifton.

The Story: Running short of funds to operate his mine, Jack Maston comes East to see Earle Foster, an investment broker. Foster refuses to take an interest in Jack's proposition. In Foster's office is Holly Brandon, daughter of a rich and speculatively inclined widow, whom he takes for a stenographer. Holly is amused at this, and allows him to think so. She advances him money to enable him to return to his mine in the West, telling him that she may call on him at a later date. A few weeks later Mrs. Brandon finds herself almost penniless, having been induced by Foster to invest in a worthless mine. Her plans to recoup her fortunes by having Holly married to Foster would have materialized had not the broker been in too much of a hurry to get married. Then Jack comes into possession of information which turns the tide for him, and the conclusion shows him with plenty of money and with Holly as his wife.

Feature Herbert Rawlinson as Jack Maston and Sally Starr as Holly Brandon.

The Story: Upon her father's death Betty Hammond inherits his vast mining interests. In Europe, where she has gone, she finds herself besieged by many fortune hunters, but refuses all, for none measures up to her conception of a husband. In her effects she finds a photograph of Jim Ogden, a playmate of hers in the mining days, and decides that he is the man for her. Going to California where her property is situated she hears that Jim has become superintendent of her mines, and without revealing her identity secures a position as stenographer in his office. She falls in love with him, and asks him to marry her, but he refuses. She rebels, discloses her identity, and Jim discharges her. In order to awaken his love, Betty has Ben, one of the miners, abduct her. Jim, hearing of the abduction and believing the miner to be sincere, organizes a posse and goes in pursuit. Ben and Betty are overtaken, and Jim is about to inflict punishment upon the miner when Betty tells him of her scheme. Jim, who has really loved Betty all the time, no longer suppresses his affection, and takes the determined little girl in his arms.

"SOCIAL QUICKSANDS"

Metro Presents Francis X. Bushman and Beverley Bayne in a Comedy-Drama of a Society-Shy Man Who Fell Into the Social Quicksands of Matrimony.

Cast.

Warren Dexter.....Francis X. Bushman
Phyllis Lane.....Beverly Bayne
Mollie.....Mabel Frenyear
Dudley, Mollie's father.....Leslie Stowe
Jim.....William Dunn
Mrs. Byrd Cutting.....Lila Blow
Mrs. Amos.....Rolinda Bainbridge
Miss "Nobody Home".....Elsie MacLeod
"Englishman".....J. B. Hollis
"The Bullet Girl".....Armorel McDowell

Directed by Charles J. Brabin.

The Story: Mrs. Byrd Cutting, the aunt of Warren Dexter, wants him to marry Phyllis Lane, but he refuses. Phyllis vows that she will exact a proposal o marriage from him, and to get acquainted she plans to faint on his doorstep. When she arrives she sees Mollie, who, at the demand of her father and brother, is robbing his silver. She changes places with the girl, and when Warren appears and catches her in the act of thieving she tells him that her father and brother has made a thief of her. He is struck by her appearance, and gives her a position as housekeeper of his mountain lodge. Mollie, who had been hidden in a closet by Phyllis and had heard Warren's proposition, escapes, and tells her father and brother, who decide to follow. Warren is attacked by the crooks, but he quickly subdues them. Some time later Warren, having fallen deeply in love with Phyllis, decides to return to the city, and informs his aunt that he and "Ann Thompson," the name under which Phyllis is known to him, are to be married. But when he arrives he learns to his surprise that he is to marry the girl whom he had determined never to meet.

Feature Francis X. Bushman as Warren Dexter and Beverly Bayne as Phyllis Lane.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Comedy Photodrama of Romance and Adventure Spiced With Love's Witchery and Virile Action.
Dan Cupid's Trickery Bewitches Masquerading Lovers Into True Happiness.
Bushman and Bayne Disclosed in Roles That Suit Them to a Nicety.
Plenty of Thrills and Excitement in Swift-Moving Society Comedy.
Society Man and Social Bud Arrive at Happiness Through Adventurous Route.

Stunt Suggestions: Make heavy use of names of the stars. The names will mean more than the play title. Get the local sporting goods store to display tackle with, "Watch Francis X. Bushman catch a trout in 'Social Quicksands' at (house and date)." You can get up a lobby display with a male doll partly buried in quicksand and a girl doll throwing him a life preserver in the shape of a large wedding ring.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Herald. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

"HIT-THE-TRAIL HOLLIDAY"

George M. Cohan Presents Himself (Through Artcraft) in His Own Play of the Star Barkeeper Who Became a Temperance Reformer — and a Hustler.

Cast.

Billy Holliday.....George M. Cohan
Edith Jason.....Marguerite Clayton
Otto Wurst.....Robert Broderick
Kent B. Wurst.....Pat O'Malley
Burr Jason.....Russell Bassett
Bobby Jason.....Richard Barthelmess
Rev. Holden.....William Walcott

Directed by Marshall Neilan.

The Story: Billy Holliday, a bartender, for refusing to supply drinks to minors at the behest of his employer, loses his job. In the little country town where he has wandered in search of employment he finds two elements—one wet, the other dry. When he meets the daughter of the leader of the drys he casts in his lot with them, and when the leader of the wet faction threatens vengeance, Billy is instantly on the job. At a meeting of prohibitionists, which the brewery element seeks to disrupt by the introduction of a number of rough-necks, Holliday takes the platform and nullifies their efforts by a fiery speech. He succeeds finally in putting the wet element out of business, and in winning the love of Edith Jason. He also becomes a power in the community.

Feature George M. Cohan as Billy Holliday and Marguerite Clayton as Edith Jason.

Program and Advertising Phrases: George M. Cohan Stars in His Own Portraiture of Famous Evangelist.
George M. Cohan's Famous Stage H[illegible] Translated to the Screen.
Trust to George M. Cohan's Keen Wit to "Brighten the Corners Where You Are."
Cohan's Saving Grace of Good Humor Presents Clever Portraiture of Billy Sunday.
Speedy Photoplay Offers Whirl-Wind Exploitation of Billy Sunday's Hurricane Evangelism.
Prohibition Propaganda Expounded by Veteran Bar-Keeper Who Never Tasted His Own Wares.

Stunt Suggestions: Plunge on the Cohan name in all forms of advertising. It will bring in the money. Using his portrait one-sheets for window work. For a throw-away start off, "Hit-the-Trail Holliday never took a drink," and continue in smaller type, "But, Gee! The cocktails he used to make!" If the sprinkling carts are out use banners on their sides reading "Get on the Wagon before Hit-the-trail Holliday gets you. He's at the (house and date). Interest the temperance societies. You may be able to get their aid in the ticket sale.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

"A SQUARE DEAL"

The American Film Company Presents Margarita Fisher in Albert Payson Terhune's Popular Red Book Story.

Cast.

Alys Gilson.....Margarita Fisher
Thurston Bruce.....Jack Mower
Peyton LeMoyne.....Val Paul
Marion Hamilton.....Constance Johnson
John Gilson.....Louis M. Wells
Mary Gilson.....Nanine Wright

Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

The Story: Although her parents strongly disapprove of her action, Alice Gilson becomes a convert to the theory of "individualism" and joins the Culture Club, of which Peyton LeMoyne is the most prominent member. She meets Thurston Bruce (not a member of the society), who, with LeMoyne, becomes a rival for her hand. She finally consents to marry Bruce, but only on the basis of a square deal which insures each of them absolute liberty with the understanding that the marriage is to be dissolved if either of them finds that love has ceased to exist. In line with her policy of freedom, Alice makes her home a meeting place for the members of the society. This causes an estrangement, and Bruce tells Alice, who has been rechristened Alys by the cult, that, according to their agreement, she is free and that he is going to the woman who will make him happy. Alys confides her troubles to LeMoyne, whose true character is revealed when he scoffs at her marriage vows and makes advances. Disillusioned, Alys returns to her parents' home where she finds her husband and learns that the woman he referred to is her mother. It was a scheme to get Alice to realize the foolishness of her decision, and they begin their real honeymoon.

Feature Margarita Fisher as Alys Gilson and Jack Mower as Thruston Bruce.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Keen Satire on Sociological Fads Presented in Entertaining Photodrama.
Higher Thought and Lesser Morals Lampooned in Interesting Photodrama.
For Every "Ism" There is an Antidote as Proven in Fascinating Photoplay.
Foolish Girl Treads Visionary Paths of "New Thought" to Her Great Regret.
Margarita Fisher Puts Realism in Role of Raging and Tearful Bride.
Experimenting with Advanced Thought Fads and Another Man's Wife.

Stunt Suggestions: This story does not offer much opportunity for freak stunts, but should be played up by means of printer's ink. Tell that it is a story by Albert Payson Terhune, whose reputation is well established, and that it originally appeared in the Red Book. Play up the plot as a satire on the professional Bohemians and "serious thinkers." Ask your patrons in your advertising and on the screen if they are serious thinkers, or want to be.

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six-sheets. Banner unmounted. One, two and three-column cuts and mats. Program cover cut. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Slides. Press sheet.
Released June 10.

"RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE"

William Fox Presents William Farnum in a Vividly Realistic Picturization of Zane Grey's Powerful Novel of the West.

Cast.

Lassiter.....William Farnum
Venters.....William Scott
Dyer.....M. B. Robbins
Tull.....Murdock MacQuarrie
Jane Withersteen.....Mary Merch
The Masked Rider (Millie Erne),
Katherine Adams
Fay Larkin.....Nancy Caswell
Jerry Card.....J. Holmes

Directed by Frank Lloyd.

The Story: Lassiter, a Texas ranger, learns that his married sister, Millie Erne, has been abducted by a sect to which she has been converted recently, and goes in search of her. He hears that Millie was last seen at Withersteen's place, and arrives there as cowboys are about to administer a whipping to a rider named Venters because they suspect him of courting Jane Withersteen, the heiress of the great estate. When the men learn the identity of Lassiter, whom they know has a reputation as a deadly gun-man, they abandon their punishment of Venters and leave. Venters goes in pursuit of rustlers who have been stealing the Withersteen cattle, and Lassiter assumes the management of the ranch. The lair of the rustlers is discovered, and Venters is astonished to find that they are led by a beautiful young woman known as the Masked Rider. Still on the hunt for his sister, Lassiter invades the rendezvous of a clique of religious fanatics, and after killing Dyer, the man who lured Millie away, he rescues Fay Larkin, a little orphan. Lassiter later comes upon Venters, and the Masked Rider, whom he recognizes as Bess, the daughter of his sister. Venters and Bess leave for the minister's home to be married. Lassiter, finding that his escape has been blocked by Elder Tull and his gang, circumvents their attempt to capture him by climbing a cliff and shoving a massive bolder down upon his pursuers.

Feature William Farnum as Lassiter and Mary Merch as Jane Withersteen.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Pulsing Heart Beats Mingle With Pounding Hoofs in Great Western Story of a Man Who Was Not Afraid.
Brave Man Rode Hard, Shot Straight and Defended Womanhood.
Great American Drama Based on Zane Grey's "Best Seller."
Love, Mystery, and Strange Adventure in the Great Southwest.
Stirring Picturization of Zane Grey's Famous Novel.

Stunt Suggestions: The extracts from the book printed in the press book can be used to excellent advantage for newspaper teasers. Print them without mention of the picture for a day or two, and then add that the picture can be seen at your house on a given date. Play up the author and the novel, as well as the star, forming a combination of the three. Use the one and three-sheets as liberally as you can afford, and try and get up at least one 24-sheet stand.

Advertising Aids: Two each three-sheets and one-sheet. One each six-sheet and twenty-four-sheet. Lobby displays, twelve 8x10 black and white. Twelve 11x14 gelatins, three 22x28 gelatins. Photos. Cuts. Slides. Music cues.
Released June 16.

"KIDDER & KO"

Pathe Presents Bryant Washburn in a Capricious Conglomeration of Love, Codfish and Kiddersport, Maine.

Cast.

Cuthbert Kidder.....Bryant Washburn
Silas Kidder.....Harry Jenkinson
Julie Knight.....Gertrude Silby
James Knight.....Wadsworth Harris

The Story: Silas Kidder sends his son, Cuthbert, to college, but fears that the boy will not be benefited by the schooling, as he is too frivolous. When Cuthbert wins the New England Pool Championship his father writes him that he must not return until he has $10,000 to his credit. Cuthbert, taking the old man at his word, establishes a dried codfish business and runs in competition with his father, who has been in that line all his life. The modern methods of Cuthbert amaze and confound the old-timers, and how he builds up an enormous business, wins his sweetheart, and convinces his father that his son is a business man of to-day is entertainingly told in the climax.

Feature Bryant Washburn as Cuthbert Kidder and Gertrude Silby as Julie Knight.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Dashing Lover, Equipped with Youth and Love of Adventure, Triumphs Over Every Handicap to Happiness.
Hero of the "Skinner" Comedies Presented in Another Appealing Play.
Frills and Frolics of College Life Abandoned by the Pool Champion of New England.
When the Most Wonderful Boy Meets the Most Wonderful Girl Cupid Has a Cinch.
Dashing Youth Abandons Pool Table to Instill Novelty in the Codfish Business.

Stunt Suggestions: Play up Bryant Washburn in a new studio connection, and make a generous use of his portraits if he is popular with your patrons. Use "Codfish" as the catchline for a throwaway, adding details of the story to hook up. Get your grocers to use

"NEWMAN" Brass Frames and Rails
A FEW REASONS

why "NEWMAN" METAL FRAMES have been chosen by all the big circuits and best class of theatres.
1—Because the constant exposure to all sorts of weather conditions cannot affect "NEWMAN" NON-CORROSIVE METAL FRAMES.
2—Because of their richness in beauty and design, they liven the entrance and render the lobby more inviting than any other kind of frames.
3—Because they will outlast a dozen wood frames. They are practically un-wear-outable.

"WHICH WOMAN?"

Bluebird Presents Ella Hall in a Screen Version of the Story by Evelyn Campbell in the All Story Weekly.

Cast.

Doris Standish.....Ella Hall
Cyrus Hopkins.....Edward Jobson
Jimmy Nevin.....Eddie Sutherland
Mary Butler.....Priscilla Dean
Peter Standish.....Andrew Robson

Directed by Harry Pollard.

The Story: Doris Standish is compelled by her mother and her uncle to marry Cyrus Hopkins, an aged millionaire. A gang of crooks plan to rob him on his wedding day, and Mary Butler, a member of the clique, secures a position as maid in the Hopkins' home. Jimmy Nevins, to get revenge on old Hopkins for driving his father's business to the wall, agrees to act as chauffeur for the crooks. At the appointed hour in the evening he goes to the Hopkins' residence. Shortly after he sees a girl with a suitcase come running out of the house. He thinks it is Mary Butler with the jewels, and drives off with her. But he learns later that he has helped Doris, who has decided not to marry Hopkins, to escape. He decides to protect the girl, and takes her temporarily to the thieves' den. While Jimmy has gone out for food Doris escapes, but not before the crooks have recognized her. They send for her uncle, Peter, and old Hopkins, and tell them that they must hand over money for information concerning the girl. The police arrive, and the crooks are arrested, and Jimmy and Doris realize that they are really more than friends.

Feature Ella Hall as Doris Standish and Eddie Sutherland as Jimmy Nevin.

"TO HELL WITH THE KAISER."

Screen Classics, Inc., Presents a Cast of Stars in a Startling Story of What Might Have Happened in Berlin.

Cast.

Kaiser, Robert Graubel.....Lawrence Grant
Alice Monroe.....Olive Tell
Ruth Monroe.....Betty Howe
Winslow Dodge.....John Sunderland
Professor Monroe.....Frank Currier
Crown Prince.....Earl Schenck

Directed by George Irving.

The Story: In the spring of 1914 the Kaiser and his war council decide to break the treaty with Belgium. Prof. Monroe, an American, in Belgium with his daughters, Alice and Ruth, has perfected a wireless invention which will enable messages to be sent without interception. The Kaiser fails in his attempt to secure the discovery, and later when the Germans commit all sorts of violence, and Ruth is killed, Prof. Monroe denounces them, and is shot. Alice vows vengeance. She returns to Berlin, and tells Winslow Dodge, an attache of the American legation, of the tragedy. Another suitor for her hand is Robert Graubel, an actor, who sometimes has to impersonate the Kaiser. The United States declares war on Germany, and the Kaiser, in partitioning the various countries of the world, gives America to the Crown Prince. Through Graubel, Alice is introduced to the Crown Prince, and he tries to force his odious attentions upon her. She kills him, and then gives Dodge, who has entered the American aviation corps, the signal, and the Kaiser's forces are defeated by the Americans. The Kaiser is captured and sent to a barren island, where he goes mad and leaps into the sea.

Feature Olive Tell as Alice Monroe and John Sunderland as Winslow Dodge.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Seven Acts of Blood-Tingling Revelations That Picture the Hun in His Hellish Degeneracy.
Screen Fiction Combined With Proven Facts Show Hun in Beastly Reality.
While the Hun Brings the War to Our Shores the Screen Carries Kaiser's Fiendishness to Our Doors.
Stirring the Patriot's Blood While Yankee Soldiers Make the World Safe for Women and Children.
Screen-Craft Calls to Patriotism While Fiendish Hun Is Banished to His Final and Fitting Exile.

Stunt Suggestions: This story is so melodramatic as to approach travesty in its plot, and should be billed and treated as such rather than as a straight propaganda story. The paper is vivid, and should be used liberally in preference to special stunts. Work it on a wagon through the streets, and post several stands. If you can hire a devil masquerade suit dress the driver of the wagon in the costume. Care should be taken not to present it as a companion to the more serious propaganda stories.

Advertising Aids: Four styles one-sheets. Three styles three-sheets. Two styles six-sheets. One twenty-four-sheet. Photos. Slides. Music cue sheets. Special heralds. Special hand colored lobby displays. One, two and three-column ready made advertisements. Scene cuts.

"HIS ENEMY THE LAW"

Triangle Presents Jack Richardson and Irene Hunt in a Curiously Interesting Study of Inherited Traits.

Cast.

Captain Jack / John — Jack Richardson
Sarah Catherwood / Sally Randolph — Irene Hunt
Arthur Mason — Jack Livingston
Jim Dawson — Graham Pette
Lane Allen — Dorothy Hagar
Mr Catherwood — Walt Whitman
Girl of Six — May Giraci

Directed by Raymond Wells

The Story: The father of Sarah Catherwood objects to her marrying Capt Jack Rogers, a young Confederate, upon his return from the war because he lacks sufficient funds. Jack goes west to make money, and when he has attained a little fortune he hears that Sarah has become the wife of another. Jack then marries a widow, but they are unhappy. Finally they separate and Jack takes his son with him. He becomes a bandit and supports himself and his boy by robbing stage coaches. When he is killed his son, John, is adopted by the sheriff. A number of years later, John, who has become a lawyer, is beseeched by Sally Randolph to save her lover, accused of murder. He wins an acquittal, but soon after the lover is murdered. Then John learns that Sally is the daughter of Sarah Catherwood, who was his father's first sweetheart and who married Mr. Randolph, and they plan an early wedding.

Feature Jack Richardson, who plays both Capt. Jack Rogers and John, and Irene Hunt, who portrays the roles of Sarah Catherwood and Sally Randolph.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Strange Revelations in a Gripping Romance that Tells of the Wild West and Its Opportunities.
Surprising Outcome of War-time Romance that Finds Fruition in the Circumstances of Rare Chance.
Gripping Story of Romantic Adventure Replete with Thrilling Scenes and Episodes.
Dashing Career of Romantic Bandit Brought to a Halt by Rarest Chance.
Love's Strange Reunion Amid Stirring Episodes and Rare Adventure.
Children of an Old and Faithful Love United Under Happy Circumstances.

Stunt Suggestions: The story will not work well on special stunts, but can best be advertised in the papers and through throwaways, dwelling upon the peculiarity of the young lawyer in fighting to defeat the law. Make it clear however that the story is one of vivid action.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.

"SAY! YOUNG FELLOW"

Artcraft Presents Douglas Fairbanks in a Smile Story with Acrobatic Trimmings, Planned by Joseph Henaberry and Elaborated by the Star.

Cast.

The Young Fellow — Douglas Fairbanks
The Girl — Marjorie Daw
The Villain — Frank Campeau
A Sweet Spinster — Edythe Chapman
A Kindly Bachelor — James Neill

Directed by Joseph Henaberry.

The Story: In this production Fairbanks plays the part of a young reporter who smiles a grouchy millionaire out of his bad temper and gets an interview that makes his reputation. He is assigned to unearth a fraudulent scheme in a nearby town and does the job, but not until the girl in the case sets him on the right tracks. As an acrobatic detective "Doug" is, if anything, funnier than in his earlier pictures. He never knows a quiet moment, and he manages to make it just as lively for the others until Justice emerges triumphant from the wreckage and Cupid follows her a close second.

Feature Douglas Fairbanks as the Reporter and Marjorie Daw as the Girl.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Cub Reporter Playfully Toys with Sensational News Tip and Follows Into Thrills and Adventure.
Actor-Acrobat Exploits New and Daring Deeds in Latest Thriller.
A Young Fellow, a Girl, a Villain, a Sweet Spinster and a Kindly Bachelor Contribute to a Regular Fairbanks Feature.
This Series of Thrilling Exploits Will Demonstrate the Fact that There's No End to the Actor-Acrobat's Activities.
Daring "Doug." Dashes Into Dangers with Devil-May-Care Dexterity.
Nothing Can Come Too Quick, Too Hot or Too Fast for This Agile Actor.

Stunt Suggestions: This is a case of the name being the biggest draw in most sections. Use paper and throwaways in addition to newspaper displays to announce the coming of Fairbanks in another comedy of action. If you can get a man with a persuasive smile and a nice manner, let him work the streets, stopping people with the advice to smile more, and thrusting into their hands a card reading "Its the smile that wins. Study Douglas Fairbanks in "Say! Young Fellow, at (house and date). See how its done and GO DO IT."

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three colums on star and production. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

Jim Manning — Lee Hill
Kitty Manning — Gloria Swanson
Stephen Morton — Arthur Millett
Mrs. Stephen Morton — Nellie Allen
Theatrical Manager — Ward Caulfield
Mrs. Rothfield — May Walters
Squaw — Diana Carrillo

Directed by Arthur Hoyt.

The Story: Kitty Manning, the wife of Jim Manning, a telegraph operator at an isolated railway station, tires of the monotony of her existence. The birth of their baby relieves the dullness of her life, but it is only for a short time, as the infant dies, and the mother, again plunged in solitude, becomes a member of a theatrical troupe. Jim, alone, works energetically, and is rewarded by being given an important executive position. Meanwhile, Kitty has become acquainted with Stephen Morton, president of the road for which her husband is working. Kitty at first refuses to do Morton's bidding, but finally assents to his plan, and they arrange to meet in San Francisco. On the way Kitty's machine break down, and she stops for a few days with the wife of a flagman. A severe storm comes up and Feature Gloria Swanson as Kitty Manning and Lee Hill as Jim Manning.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Sensational Screen Drama Carries Fateful Lesson in Self Sacrifice.
From Obscurity to Fame in Quick Transition Turns Foolish Girl from Happiness.
Vain Woman Disillusioned by Fickle Fate Is Restored to Happiness.
Thrilling Race Against Death Ends in Victory and Content.
Gripping and Sensational Melodrama Provides Nerve-Tingling Thrills.

Stunt Suggestions: The title and the railroad locale give plenty of opportunity for novel handling. Print up imitation railroad tickets to "Station Content," "good only for date stamped. Must be validated at the box office of the Dash theater accompanied by a fee of fifteen cents," or whatever the price of admission is. You might be able to borrow some railroad material from the station agent for lobby decoration. In the newspaper advertising tell enough of the story to make it clear that this is not wholly railroad story, using such lines as, "She ran away with an opera troupe—but she has a return ticket."

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.
Released June 16.

"THE HOUSE OF GOLD"

Metro Presents Emmy Whelen in the Story of a Girl Who Married for Love, but it was Love for the Other Man.

Cast.

Pamela Cartwright.....Emmy Wehlen
Douglas Martin } .....Joseph Kilgour
Gilbert Martin }
Frank Steele.....Hugh Thompson
Mrs. Stanley Cartwright...Helen Lindroth
Mrs. Alicia Temple.....Maud Hill

Directed by Edwin Carewe.

The Story: Pamela Cartwright becomes the wife of the wealthy Douglas Martin at the urgings of her mother. Her husband's carousing and dissolute habits are repugnant to Pamela, and she slips away for a few moments with Frank Steele, a lawyer, to whom she had been engaged, and whose reputation had been jeopardized by Martin. Finally Pamela revolts at her husband's continued indulgence in drunken orgies, and upbraids him. They struggle, and the lamp is knocked over. The room is plunged in darkness, and when the lights are turned on Martin is found dead and Pamela unconscious. She is arrested as the murderer, but Steele secures her release for lack of evidence. On the day that she is to be wedded to Steele she sees at the window the face of Martin. The ceremony is postponed, but at night she is awakened by a noise in her room, and beholds Martin standing before her. He tells her that he is the twin brother of her dead husband, that he had been unjustly confined in a lunatic asylum, that he killed Douglas, and that he is going to prevent her marriage to Steele. She screams, and her mother and Steele, who is in the house, appear. The two men grapple. Martin falls over the balcony and meets his death, and happiness at last comes to Pamela and Steele.

Feature Emmy Wehlen as Pamela Cartwright and Hugh Thompson as Frank Steele.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Crime and Infamy Fail to Tarnish Pure Soul Forced Into Degradation.
Love Endures as Flaming Hope Amid Devastating Influences.
Married Against Her Will Brave Girl Holds Fast to True Love Through Storm and Stress.
Unholy Passion and Relentless Vengeance Makes Hell on Earth for Persecuted Heroine.
Stirring Melodrama Revealed in Gripping Scenes and Nerve-Tingling Thrills.
The Way to Happiness Leads Through Valley of Dispair.

Stunt Suggestions: The stills showing the revels in the Martin home are apt to prove of greater advertising value for window and lobby work. Make the most of them and play this feature up in your press work, holding back on the rather conventional story. Play up, too, the name of the star.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.
Released June 17.

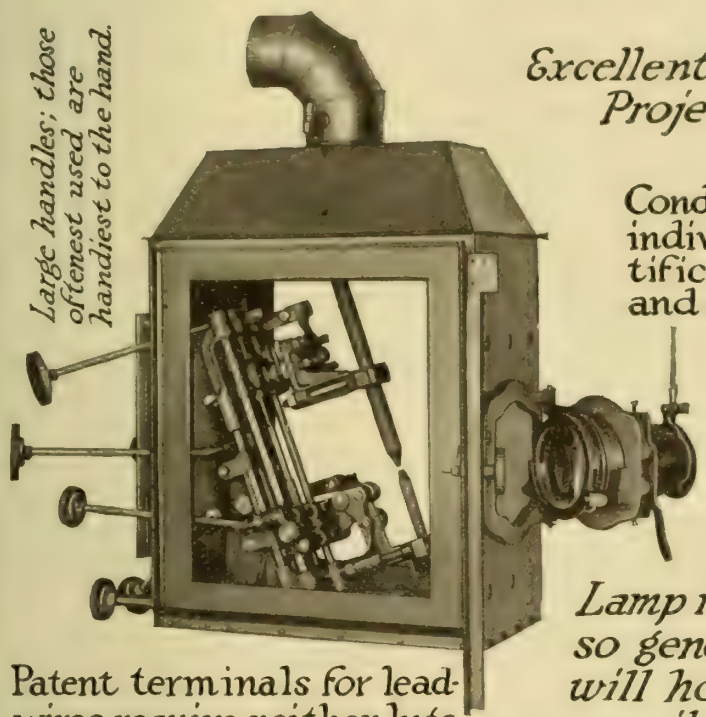
Simplex

Why the Operator is so fond of the Type "S" Simplex Lamphouse

Large handles; those of finest used are handiest to the hand.



Excellent ventilation. Double doors. Projection Room kept cool.

Condensers quickly accessible, and individually held in rings scientifically designed to expand and contract same as the lenses. reducing breakage to a minimum.

Patent terminals for lead-wires require neither lugs nor solder, and yet provide carrying capacity ample for the most extreme needs.

Lamp is built like a machine, and so generously designed that it will hold a larger arc than can possibly be required.
Can draw 150 amperes or more.

These are only a few of the reasons. In every detail this outfit is one that makes the Operator dissatisfied with any other. And it can be had only on the Simplex Projector.

The Simplex Mechanism insures projection of unequaled steadiness
The Type "S" insures clear-cut pictures, unequaled in brilliancy
It's a combination that produces profits for you—if you use it

Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.

The Management of this Theatre
desires the co-operation of its patrons in providing good clean entertainment.
We want no "legalized" censorship of moving pictures

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

KNOWLEDGE BRINGS SUCCESS

Messrs. Exhibitor, Exchangeman, Operator, and Film Men Everywhere:—The moving picture business is one of the youngest but one of the leading industries of the world to-day. We may well be proud to be connected with it. Are you keeping up? Do you know all about it? It will yield larger returns for an equal amount of work to the men who know. Each weekly issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD contains more up-to-date information than you can get from all other sources. Subscribe now if not already on our mailing list. You will get your paper hours earlier than from the newsstand and it costs $4.80 less.

have long been considered standard equipment by the leading motion picture machine manufacturers. The product of America's greatest lens specialists, who have been producing high grade lenses of one type or another for 65 years, they are unexcelled in the clear-cut, evenly illuminated pictures they produce on the screen.

Because of the demand made upon our resources for some of the Government's most important military needs, we are unable to make projection lens deliveries for the present. GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

Will Improve Your Projection 100%

READING IS BELIEVING

Mr. John H. Kunsky, Michigan's biggest operator in Moving Picture enterprises, writes:

"We have been trying to get a screen which would meet with our approval and have tried out almost every make on the market. Your screen is the first we have been able to find which gives a perfectly clear picture from all parts of the house, and we are indeed delighted with it."

Mr. Frank Baker, Manager of Marine City's (Mich.) popular Family Theatre, writes:

"Your screen is giving me excellent service and is saving on my electric light bill and also saving me a large amount of carbons and improving my pictures about 75 percent. By my experience I would advise all managers to put in one of these Gardiner Velvet Gold Fibre Screens and they will find to their own advantage its saving."

Mr. Wm. I. Bogett, Manager Battle Creek's (Mich.) beautiful Photo Play House, The Majestic, writes:

"We truly consider that it is between thirty and forty percent better than any other screen we have used, although we use alternating current, by using the A. C. White Light Special Carbons with the Gardiner Velvet Gold Fibre Screen we get such good projection that most exhibitors that call on us think we have the D. C."

Mr. M. W. McGee, Managing Director of The Majestic, one of Michigan's finest and largest Picture Theatres (Detroit), says:

"We are being complimented all the time on how wonderfully defined our pictures are projected on the screen—the satisfaction of sitting anywhere in the auditorium and seeing good pictures at their best, we believe to be one of the reasons for the increasing popularity of The Majestic."

Mr. J. B. Hunter, of Grand Ledge's (Mich.) Palace Theatre, writes:

"My A. C. projection on the Gardiner Velvet Gold Fibre Screen is much better than some D. C. I have seen on other makes of screens. When Mr. McCoy was here with 'Redemption' he said: 'You have the most perfect A. C. picture I have ever seen. I don't believe your screen can be equaled.'"

Mr. B. F. Dillard, of The Rex Theatre, Auburn Neb., writes:

"We receive compliments nightly on the brightness and steadiness of our pictures—your screen is a great improvement."

A Paramount Picture

AN INSPIRATION to the WOMEN AT HOME

"MISSING" is one of the finest of all the war plays, for it is first of all a tremendous drama of love and sacrifice. Mrs. Humphry Ward's famous novel uses the great war as a setting for a story as big and as vital as the war itself.

Your patrons are going to welcome this J. Stuart Blackton production, for it brings a definite message to the people back of the line—the message of solace that every wife and mother is vainly groping for.

"Missing" is the motion picture of the hour, the very play America needs—a comfort and an inspiration to the women who have to stay at home.

Goldwyn Pictures

You Must Read This

If You Never Read Anything Else!

BACKED by a year of kept promises, by a year of clean-cut, look-you-in-the-eye business integrity, by a year of splendid production achievements which have made the name Goldwyn powerful and respected everywhere, I am now making our second annual announcement to the exhibitors of America.

One year ago in June Goldwyn deliberately challenged the attention of the nation's exhibitors by announcing its readiness to distribute the then-new Goldwyn Pictures under the great mercantile slogan:

"The customer be pleased!"

Today—twelve months later—5,148 contract customers of our company bear witness to the revolutionary success of the Goldwyn principle and the Goldwyn productions.

We have proved in a year to the industry at large that it is wise and profitable to operate under a policy of human-being service. We have regarded our exhibitor-customers and all other exhibitors with friendliness and respect instead of with cynical contempt.

We have been enabled to do this because I have around me the finest and most loyal organization ever created in the motion picture industry; men of ideals—clean, powerful, able people who set out to build good will for Goldwyn because they knew that nothing in the world can be permanently successful unless it possesses the unquestioned good will of the customers it serves.

In a year, with a very small percentage of mistakes, which any new organization is bound to make, Goldwyn has been a pace-maker; a blazer of new trails, the discoverer of new brains, the offerer of big stars, powerful stories, fresh, new personalities and the producer of the newer types of stories which the popular tastes craved and world-conditions made desirable.

In the literary markets of America today the agents and venders of screen material are being urged by other producers to "get us the kind of stories that Goldwyn is producing." This means that for twelve months exhibitors of Goldwyn Pictures have had the good fortune to possess the forms of screen entertainment the public was most anxious and eager to buy.

Having grown amazingly—having led the way for a year—another Great Advance is at hand.

The Goldwyn organization which was equipped in its first year to give you 26 productions, is ready in the coming twelve months to double this number of productions, giving you and every other exhibitor in the country more freedom and independence.

A great California exhibitor said to me the other day: "It has been a fine thing, and a lucky thing, for the exhibitors of this country that Goldwyn was in existence during the past twelve months. Goldwyn was formed just in time to keep America's exhibitors from being ground to pieces."

If a company with but 26 productions accomplished this for the exhibitors of quality pictures in its first year of existence, think how much greater freedom and independence Goldwyn will bring you in its second year with its productions doubled to in excess of fifty.

Just as there is required in the big world A BALANCE OF POWER, just so is a similar balance imperatively necessary in motion pictures. The more than 14,000 exhibitors in the United States would be in sorry straits if they found themselves at the mercy of any one motion picture organization.

An organization that has GERALDINE FARRAR, PAULINE FREDERICK, MAE MARSH, MABEL NORMAND, MADGE KENNEDY, REX BEACH'S stories, TOM MOORE and other stars to be announced, has in its possession to give to you the star names and values and popularities to make any exhibitors in the world successful.

We have all of these great assets to give you in our second year—and still more. We have created a Goldwyn magnetism, a Goldwyn power of attraction and there surrounds this company's name a feeling of exhibitor trust and confidence that is making the great stars of the screen wish to become a part of our growing organization.

SAMUEL GOLDFISH,
President.

My dear Sir:

Confirming my verbal statement to you, I take pleasure in advising you that our showing of "MY FOUR YEARS IN GERMANY", which we ran all of last week was the most successful of any picture we have handled in the last five years.

Our business opened up on Monday with an attendance of 1245 and we felt a little blue, but the record for the balance of the week was as follows:

Tuesday, 1532. Wednesday, 2069. Thursday, 2113
Friday, 2324. Saturday, 4032.
Making a total attendance of 13,335

Easton is down in the census as having a population of 28,500. Of course, we advertised the picture in the surrounding towns and drew part of the attendance from them.

As we were the first motion picture theatre in Pennsylvania to show "MY FOUR YEARS IN GERMANY", I take pleasure in giving you the above figures and hope it will help you to place the picture in other towns throughout the state.

Yours sincerely,

The progressive exhibitors of the United States are thoroughly aroused to the need of sounder business principles and practices in the industry. They realize that, bound together in a unity of command and strength, they can do collectively what they are unable to do individually.

This fact is evidenced by the large number of inquiries which have been received regarding the Hodkinson Co-partnership Plan. A recent folder setting forth seven specific reasons why the Hodkinson Co-partnership Plan merits the investigation of every thinking exhibitor, for instance, brought back requests for more detailed information from exhibitors in 687 cities.

If you are one of the many picture theatre owners, who are keeping their ears "close to the ground" these days, this action of your fellow exhibitors will not be without its significance for you.

WARNING!

To all theatres running attractions three days to a week

SIX months ago Metro warned you to keep your house free to run big specials that would make you money.

Metro warned you that otherwise you would be unable to book these productions, or would be forced to pay for those you had to put on the shelf.

It was true then, it is true now, it will be true all next season!

No big house closed to special attractions can compete. Every successful week-run Exhibitor will book open time.

Take heed of this second warning. Next season is the season for big pictures. Pick from the open market!

Keep your houses open!

TRIANGLE

U-BOATS!

EVERY evil practice in the motion picture business is a U-Boat to the industry.

"SINK ON SIGHT" is the only policy to be adopted toward the evil practice.

AS thoroughly and effectually as the United States sweeps the seas of the pirates of the deep, Triangle sweeps aside practices that tend to torpedo the profits of exhibitors.

STAR-EVIL, Secret-Agreement-Evil, Reel-Tax-Evil, Competitive-Bid-Evil, Waste-Evil—they have all gone down before the quick-firing, cool and practiced gunnery of the Triangle flagships.

GENTLEMEN, there are men in charge of the Triangle who know what your needs are, what your problems are, what your reward should be.

THESE men are proceeding with clear vision, far-sightedness and a keen sense of your requirements to make the Exhibition of pictures something more solid than a gamble.

UP to date, enormous success has attended the Triangle efforts.

TURN which way you will on the high seas of motion picture progress, you will meet Triangle exhibitors who are glad we are here to serve them.

EXCELLENT pictures? Yes.

LOWER rentals? Yes.

INCREASED patronage and the respect of all those elements in the community who demand CLEAN pictures? Yes.

GENTLEMEN in charge of every exchange? Yes.

EVERY reason in the world exists for your using Triangle service.

GRACE VALENTINE
IN OLIVER MOROSCOS MOST BRILLIANT DRAMATIC SUCCESS
THE UNCHASTENED WOMAN
BY LOUIS K. ANSPACHER. SUPPORTED BY FRANK MILLS AND AN ALL-STAR CAST. DIRECTED BY WILLIAM HUMPHREY

A remarkable picture of a worldly modern woman, drawn with all sympathy of insight but with no palliations, is "The Unchastened Woman"—unquestionably one of the most successful screen-plays ever produced.

"Consistently fascinating. The unchastened heroine is the most fascinating study of curious womankind that has been offered in many a day."
—Burns Mantle, in N. Y. Eve. Mail.

"Remarkable for the creation of a character that in sheer brilliance is little short of sensational."
—Louis Sherwin, in N. Y. Globe.

"A play of intense emotional force of passion and of pathos. It has tense situations and homely truths driven home by sledge hammer blows."
—Dramatic Mirror.

"A most brilliant and interesting achievement. The author has taken his people out of the social life of the day and limned them with a master hand."
—N. Y. Review.

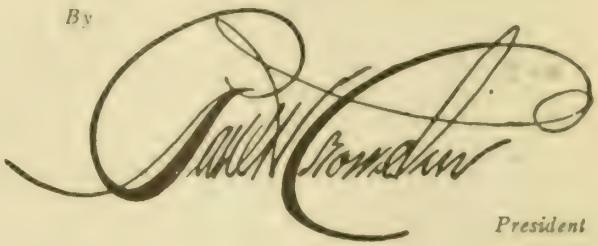
"All South America Went Like That"

Little Talks with Foreign Buyers—No. 14

By



President

RECENTLY we started a sales campaign in behalf of Paralta Plays in every South American country. Selling a whole line of features—an entire program—is a different matter from disposing of a SINGLE feature. But all South America went like that! The buyers fairly gobbled the contracts up! Paralta quality and our recommendation were irresistible. Now, why does Inter-Ocean's recommendation have weight with you, the Foreign Buyer? Solely and simply because it IS TIED TO QUALITY. You know that we tolerate nothing else! You know that Inter-Ocean has time and again turned down films for distribution (to YOU) because they failed to reach a certain standard. You know the slogan of "No-junk" that we have made famous. Inter-Ocean will not attempt to struggle with questionable quality when its recommendation of perfect quality means instant sale, as in the Paralta instance.

ERNEST H. HORSTMANN

As Their Candidate for

President Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America

Organized Vermont, Maine, Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, State Branch of M. P. E. L.

Five years President of Massachusetts State League.

Two years member of the National Executive Committee.

Present treasurer of the National Organization.

His Platform:

He believes that there should be but one National Organization of Exhibitors; that the Exhibitors League should belong to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and should pay their just proportion of dues to that body.

That the board of directors of the National League should be elected and not appointed.

That the President of the League must be a bona fide exhibitor and should devote his whole time to the interests of that body and have no other affiliations.

He believes in the absolute freedom of the screen and the use thereof for seven days of the week.

Facts and Comments

MOTION picture trade papers which are edited by the business manager find many excuses for printing objectionable advertising, the rejection of which would decrease the amount of the week's cash receipts. It ill becomes a trade paper to put money above principle and there is no truth in the statement that it is impossible for the publisher of such a paper to vise every bit of advertising copy offered for publication by him whether it comes early or late. No trade paper is obliged to accept advertising that is of an objectionable character and there is no time in the course of the work of putting an issue of a paper together that objectionable matter may not be excluded from that particular issue. Some more substantial excuse must be found if an erring publisher would entirely clear his skirts.

WHILE the MOVING PICTURE WORLD made its position quite plain on the subject in a previous editorial it desires to reiterate the expressed belief that there is no valid necessity of changing the title of a picture to be reissued. There is but one reason for changing a title, and that is to lead the uninformed to believe that a new picture is being shown. That the old title is printed in very small type under the new one is for the purpose of carrying out the deception without seeming to and is a device well known to all showmen. It does not change the original purpose, which is to deceive. Reputable business men should not resort to such methods.

IN its issue dated June 15 the Exhibitors' Trade Review, founded by Lee Ochs and controlled by his friends, declares that the exhibitors of this country want amalgamation and organization. It prints the statement boldly thus:

> We believe that the exhibitors of this country want organization—that they are anxious to see an amalgamated exhibitors' body which they can join with confidence.

Our esteemed contemporary is undoubtedly right in its conclusion that exhibitors of this country are anxious to see an amalgamated body which they can join with confidence. It is because of lack of confidence in the men who control the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America that there are two organizations today, and unless the Trade Review has become totally blind in its partisanship it knows the exact reason for the existing lack of confidence and it also knows the precise remedy for the conditions it pretends to deplore. Confidence can be restored and amalgamation effected in but one way: the selection of men who have the confidence of the entire industry to direct the affairs of the National League along legitimate lines. If the Trade Review is really serious in its desire for a united trade organization it should begin by recognizing the indisputable facts and being honest with the trade.

While we hold no brief for the American Exhibitors' Association we do know that the leaders of that organization stand on practically the same ground they occupied at Chicago a year ago. At that time they left the National League as a protest against the bulldozing methods of the Ochs crowd. Nothing has happened in the interim to change the situation. Ochs is still in the saddle and is still planning to continue his grip on the organization. It is apparent to exhibitors everywhere that he has done nothing for the organization during his two years as president, and there is no promise that anything will happen in the future toward the betterment of the National League. If the men who are chosen at Boston to administer the affairs of the League can give sufficient guarantee that they will conduct the organization for the benefit of its members, and not use it to exploit their personal schemes, there is a possibility of gaining the confidence of all exhibitors, after which amalgamation will be easily effected.

THUS far the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has consistently refrained from showing preference for any one of the men mentioned for the office of president of the National League, but a statement has just come to its notice that is reported to have been made by E. H. Horstmann of Boston, who has been mentioned as a candidate for that office. Mr. Horstmann is credited with this statement:

> Mr. Horstmann, in declaring his platform, said that the National president should be free from all entangling alliances such as trade papers and film interests and stated that within a week he would be entirely free to devote all his time strictly and impartially to the best interests of the League if elected national president.

While Mr. Horstmann was hand in glove with the Ochs crowd at Chicago last year and has since been interested in some of Ochs' private projects, he is a bigger man than Ochs and is not dependent upon the success of any of those projects. He is a man of large mentality as well as large means and, if he could assure the exhibitors of the country of his singleness of purpose in behalf of the National League and his complete severance of all connection with disturbing elements and "entangling alliances" mentioned by him, he would be able to accomplish great good for the exhibitors of this country if elected national president. If Mr. Horstmann is in earnest when he says that he will sever all such connections he should be able to convince all the trade of that determination because he is a forceful man and a man of his word. We shall see.

In the Long Run

By Edward Weitzel.

AN ideal condition for the exhibitor would be to show nothing but exceptional features. Unfortunately, as the name indicates, their output is limited. When one is booked, however, there is an excellent reason for extending its run, aside from the monetary return shown on the exhibitor's books. This consideration is of vital importance and should spur the theater manager to force as many profitable week's business out of a sensational feature like "The Kaiser," "My Four Years in Germany" or "Tarzan of the Apes" as his house will stand.

The engagement of a phenomenally successful picture is bound to have a favorable effect on the business of the picture following it. Leaving out the facts that during its extended run the exceptional feature never fails to make new patrons for the theater and that the old clientele will have experienced the added satisfaction that always accompanies the showing of a big winner, the time that elapses before the patrons of the earlier weeks of the run are offered a new attraction is sure to find them hungry and eager for the next photoplay.

All the supporters of a moving picture theater do not attend it every week. If, in place of booking fifty-two features a year, the manager of the one week run house extends the engagement of certain pictures so as to limit the number of his bookings to forty he stands that much better chance of getting the cream of the releases and of giving his patrons an opportunity to vary their amusement diet without missing any of the pictures shown at his theater. This rule holds good, in a different degree, in every class of house where the usual engagement can be extended.

No possible aid to attracting patronage should be overlooked. Constant repetition will, in time, dull the edge of even a movie fan's appetite for the screen. Whet his desire by filling his favorite seat in your theater with new patrons as often as possible. He will be the more anxious to be among those present when the next picture goes on. The new patron will come under the same influence.

Passing Along the Torch

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

IF you inculcate an idea in your play," wrote Clyde Fitch, "so much the better for your play and for your audience." This is also the opinion of Augustus Thomas, who believes that the theater is of vital importance only when visualizing some idea in the public mind at the moment. Therein lies nearly all rational pleasure of the drama.

To do this naturally, sympathetically, or thrillingly, the author must be an artist as well as a thinker. He vitalizes Truth.

Every fine drama can be compared to a soul feast.

The drawing power of the billboard is that of the printed menu.

"Come in and enjoy yourselves, ladies and gentlemen."

"This looks good on the bill of fare—let's go in and try it."

Is it fair to give people stale food, half-cooked, badly-served?

You know very well that fresh material is the most palatable.

You know very well that what is old and trite, tales timeworn and threadbare, may not have been spoiled by age, nor even worse for the keeping, so far as the ingredients are concerned, but there has been lost the sparkle that gave them flavor and they now taste flat and insipid. In presenting a picture of humanity and its problems, the audience naturally prefers those being solved, or which are to be, rather than those well-forgotten.

It is particularly the tendency of the newspaper-reading public of this country to watch with keen interest what is going on now and to speculate upon results in the future of present-day action and conduct.

We are great believers in our self-realization as a nation.

We are aroused at this time by new and serious thoughts.

The screen drama can be made one of the most powerful mediums on earth.

It can visualize ideas in the public mind at this crisis.

Powerful drama would be that presenting our spirit of sacrifice.

It would be a great torch to light the way of those who follow.

It would illumine the path of many future generations.

It would bring comfort to hearts now almost despairing.

Why not visualize what is in our minds at this trying moment?

Here we are a great and intelligent nation, engaged in upsetting all our methods of life and systems of social control, submitting to restrictions of personal freedom after a go-as-you-please existence of many generations, turning over our tremendous railroad system to Government control and kicking out the presidents, attempting food conservation and coal regulation, giving generously to the Red Cross, subscribing our best to Liberty Bonds, paying income taxes, taxes on excess profits, all with a realization that the nation must be supported, and that its rights are supreme at such an hour, providing in almost every act of our lives high dramatic material, live stuff, fairly throbbing with big themes—why not visualize it on the screen?

What happened before the war now seems ages ago.

Why not vitalize ideas in the public mind at this time?

Why not show the spirit which is stirring all America?

All around us are characters beautiful with new enthusiasm, comic with it in some cases, tragic in others. We are amused at ourselves, surprised at ourselves, proud of ourselves—what we are doing is in our minds—it is the "vital" stuff that Mr. Thomas speaks of, that which strikes home to audience receptivity, whether by direct methods or by those more subtle. Let us see ourselves as we are on the screen.

Other generations will read by the torches we light now.

Every play fired with spirit will kindle that of the present public.

We are showing a spirit opposed to nature and instinct, opposed to individualism and grasping selfishness, not because we fear the integrity of our nation is at stake, not because our ideals are on trial, but because there is a great sense of justice and right within us all, that the freedom we have so fully enjoyed under enlightenment should be denied no hungering soul or aspiring nation on earth. Why not let our great light of sane principle and lofty unselfishness shine now before men and for all time to come so long as liberty shall endure.

Maids of the Millions

By Robert C. McElravy.

You may cut, you may alter, the film as you will,
But the charm of the girlies will hang round it still.

THAT is not the way the poet wrote the lines, but it is undoubtedly what he meant. You have to interpret poets that way, because if you took their exact wording for anything, it would land you nowhere in particular. This is especially true of some of our modern bards.

But we started out to talk about moving picture actresses and not about poets.

It is a task not to be lightly undertaken. It is like entering a garden of roses and saying, "This is a beautiful rose and that is a beautiful rose," while all the time there are other roses of equal beauty blossoming about one. To attempt to discriminate is to invite disaster. No doubt it would be far wiser simply to retrace one's steps and say, "This is a magnificent garden," and let it go at that. As applied to moving picture addresses, it would be an undoubted truth, and when truth is all-inclusive it is bound to be pleasant.

We should say, without reservation, that about 51 per cent of the success of moving pictures has been due to the superior charms of its actresses. This will more than balance the dramatic, the comic, the educational, the historical and all of the other attributes of the films put together. What is going to happen to the girl? That is the consuming problem we are all worrying about. It is all very well for the villain to contrive his nefarious schemes to attract our attention; it is all very well for the hero to strut and pose before our admiring gaze; it is all very well to explode bombs and burn up buildings and run automobiles over the cliff—but what about the girl? We can have no peace of mind until we know everything is well with her.

Without a proper feminine interest it is safe to say moving pictures would have made slight progress as general entertainment. And when posterity takes up the moving pictures that have been handed down by the present age it will no doubt be quite as interested in the way Mary Pickford did up her hair, when it wasn't hanging in curls, as in anything else. Posterity will be no more grateful for a record of our first struggles with the airplane and submarine than it will for having immortalized the gentle curves of Mabel Normand's ankle and Kitty Gordon's back!

What a wealth of feminine roses there are in this great moving picture garden to be sure. It would be a rash individual who attempted to enumerate all who have loaned their irresistible appeal to draw millions of daily observers to the films. But there can be no great harm in going part way, at least.

We could mention, for instance, the unfailing naturalness of Dorothy Phillips, the sheer beauty of May Allison, the sprightly charm of Constance and Norma Talmadge, the grace of Betty Compson, the radiance of Alice Brady, the daintiness of Marguerite Clark, the lure of Theda Bara, the pulchritude of Pauline Frederick, the juvenile freshness of Mary Miles Minter, the bloom of June Elvidge, the magnificence of Irene Castle, the vivacity of Carmel Myers, the comeliness of June Caprice, the winsomeness of Mae Marsh.

We could mention the stately appeal of Ethel Barrymore, Elsie Ferguson, Mary Garden, Alice Joyce, Rita Jolivet, Olga Petrova, Virginia Pearson, Clara Kimball Young and Nazimova; we could speak of the daring grace of Pearl White, Marie Walcamp, Helen Holmes and many others; we could name for their brilliant attractiveness Bessie Barriscale, Lina Cavalieri, Mary MacLaren, Jewel Carmen, Enid Bennett, Billie Burke, Louise Glaum, Viola Dana, the Dolly Sisters, Dorothy Dalton, Vivian Martin, Mae Murray, Madge Kennedy, Jane and Katherine Lee, Florence Reed, Emmy Wehlen, Lillian Walker, Charlotte Walker, Helen Ware, Emily Stevens, Olive Thomas and Edith Storey.

But you can see how absurd it is to make the effort. It begins to sound like a roll call, and besides there are no more adjectives left. It is sufficient to say that the film world knows what it owes to its actresses and is duly appreciative.

As for the actresses themselves, they may miss the applause of an immediate audience, but there are many compensations in acting for the screen. Not the least of these is the knowledge that their performance is as accessible to the small towns as the larger ones, and that their fame is of world-wide rather than of merely local appeal.

Is This the Open Market?

By Epes W. Sargent.

LATELY an editorial in these columns suggested that a manager seeking blood and thunder stuff might obtain it through the State Rights renters. Most readers remembered the gory State Rights subjects of five and six years ago and realized that these were what were meant, but one objector remarked, "The State Rights film is at least the nearest approach to the open market," and he is right. Perhaps it is the nucleus of the eventual open market.

The State Rights dealer is merely an exchange permitting the manager to select his own film from the stock in hand, if we except the efforts of the salesman in writing "permitting." The manager does not have to take the entire output to obtain one desired subject. The program exchange is nothing more than a State Rights dealer who, under the pressure of the companies whose films he handles, can sell only his entire program, or at least, only series of films and not single titles. The program exchange has but a single merit to plead. It insures the steady delivery of film of an average standard. The exhibitor does not have to worry as to the supply for next week or next month. Were it not for this fact, the program exchange would have become extinct long ago.

The State Rights dealer, plus the booking agent, seems to be the real solution to the problem, or at least a possible solution. The booking agent representing the house hires film in accordance with his judgment, matching the film's "open time" as well as he can to make easy the jumps. He books on his own initiative or at the direction of his client, but he looks where he can get the film and deals with all agencies instead of one or two.

The success of such a scheme will depend largely upon the honesty and good judgment of the agent employed, but while there may arise many evils, out of those evils may come eventual good, for then only the good films will be purchased for the exchanges and only the best of these shown in the houses. It will largely do away with stuff released merely because it has been made, and the producer might as well spend a few hundred dollars additional trying to get back the thousands already spent.

In England the film hirers and circuit agents are doing practically the same thing now, and the system seems to work well. It may also be the answer to the American problem.

Criticisms and Comparisons

By Robert C. McElravy.

COMPARISONS are said to be odious, but it is often difficult to see just why they should be so considered. In criticism they must be indulged in as a rule, for comparisons are almost the basis of criticism. Without contrasting the relative values of books and plays we might never get a clear understanding of them. And if one work of art appears to suffer in this contrast with another, it is unfair to blame the comparison itself, for it is merely an accessory after and not before the fact.

The writer of this article has been subjected to some adverse comment for pointing out so assiduously the present ascendancy of moving pictures as compared with literature and the stage. If the writer has sinned in this respect, it has been with no intention of being unpleasant, but rather the contrary. There is no use blinking and dodging conditions when they exist. The best way is to look the facts squarely in the face and see if this does not aid in applying a remedy.

We must confess to a certain pleasure in trying to get a fresh measure of the strides that have been made in the production of moving pictures. But if we have had occasion to mention the rather debilitated conditions of the sister arts, it has been largely because they are forms of entertainment which make comparison inevitable.

The success of moving pictures, to our way of thinking, has been something in the nature of a revolt against the artificialities of our literature and the legitimate stage. Moving pictures are a going and a growing art; they are alive with human sympathy and are up with the times. They attack problems, reflect life and awaken intellectual curiosity. They are not commercialized in the ordinary sense of the word at all, though they are often erroneously said to be. A great deal of money has been gathered together at times to exploit them, but it has been spent lavishly and often thrown away in foolish and unprofitable exploits, by fresh hands in the business. But the screen itself has never been held down to the fixed and woodenish rules which prevail so largely in the sister arts.

If we have at times mentioned the shortcomings of the stage and literature it has been with no idea of announcing a discovery. They have been mentioned before, quite pointedly, and by the very persons most concerned with this condition. Almost every creative artist in this country, engaged in the writing of fiction or plays, has recorded some sort of a protest against the existing situation. Only a year or so ago the New York Times, in its Sunday book department, ran a series of articles in which leading authors lamented openly the unsatisfactory state of American literature. Many publishers joined in this outcry, and playwrights and theatrical producers have frequently expressed themselves in a similar way with reference to the stage.

There should be no disposition on the part of moving picture interests to rejoice at the flattened condition of these other arts. All are interdependent to a great extent, and the situation is at most merely temporary. The screen is yet new and has no necessity for shaking off the mossgrown and artificial methods that cling to the established arts. It knows nothing of the difficulties of breaking fresh ground with tools dulled by long usage. Its own tools are sharp and adapted to the virgin soil it is tilling.

Some day there is going to be a break in the theatrical and literary world. The pressure of these new times, with their unparalleled problems of heart and soul and mind, will not be denied expression in artistic form. The authors and playwrights who have in the past been held down to cold, commercial standards will produce novels and plays written to suit themselves, and the publishers and producers are going to bring them out, just so.

When this revival of the great arts comes the moving picture will find its real test of worth. That it will meet the test is not for a moment to be doubted, for it has already won a distinctive and lasting place in the hearts of the public.

Now for the War Savings Stamps

FRIDAY, June 28, has been named as War Savings Stamp Day and in the meantime it is urged that all loyal citizens will so adjust their affairs that they may pledge themselves to invest a maximum amount of their savings in War Stamps. The grand total to be raised through this popular form of security is $2,000,000,000. At this time but little more than ten per cent. of that amount has been taken. The campaign which ends on June 28 is expected to complete the two billions. President Wilson has issued the following appeal, which indicates the necessity:

I earnestly appeal to every man, woman and child to pledge themselves, on or before the 28th of June, to save constantly and buy regularly Government securities. The person who buys War Savings Stamps transfers the purchasing power of his money to the United States Government until after the war. May there be none unenlisted in the great volunteer army of production and savings. WOODROW WILSON.

Now is the time to commence. How much can you turn over to Uncle Sam each week? Figure it out carefully and then sign your name on the dotted line for that amount each week for the rest of the year. You will get it back with interest compounded in five years. The more you put in now the more you will have when the war is over.

Active Work for Film Exporters

Volunteer Body Journeys to Washington to Present Difficulties—New Exporters' Association Also Meets for Second Time

THE second meeting of the New York colony of film exporters, managers of export departments of producing organizations, managers of the foreign departments of film accessory houses, and foreign buyers either now on a visit to New York or having permanent buying offices here was held Thursday, June 13, at the Hotel Astor. Much was accomplished toward furthering the completion of the newly created association.

First of all the title was selected, so that henceforth the body will be officially known as Film Exporters of America. Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, of the Arrow Film Corporation and Thanhouser interests, was elected temporary treasurer to complete the temporary officers selected last week. These were David P. Howells, temporary chairman, and Harry G. Kosch, temporary secretary. Every firm represented at the meeting contributed an equal amount to the "preorganization expense" fund. It was decided that a charter be drafted, and that the association incorporate under the membership corporation law of New York. The committee to take charge of this detail comprises Dr. W. E. Shallenberger as chairman, Louis R. Thomas, and Harry G. Kosch. It was decided that these temporary officers continue in office until the charter is drawn up, and all members of the exporting fraternity of the world have been formally invited to the next meeting, when the permanent officers are to be elected. This event has been scheduled for next Thursday, June 20, in the evening at 8 o'clock at the Astor. Every exporter should make it his duty to attend this most important session.

The committee consisting of David P. Howells, chairman; Louis R. Thomas, Sidney Garrett, Harry G. Kosch, and Joseph R. Miles, which was appointed for the purpose of conferring with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry regarding an affiliation, reported that Secretary Frederick H. Elliott, of the National Association, had called a meeting of the executive committee of the latter body, which was in session at that very time considering the situations created through the existence of the Film Exporters of America and its overtures toward establishing an affiliation.

Later it was learned that this executive committee had further appointed Messrs. P. A. Powers, Gabriel Hess, and Walter W. Irwin to serve as a committee constituted with full powers to meet with the committee of five representing the Film Exporters of America and make final decision in the matter and method of affiliation as the Export Division of the N. A. M. P. I. This division already exists, though at present consisting only of a few members, among which are Reginald Warde and Paul H. Cromelin, of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, who presides as chairman of this branch. Up to the time that this article was written the National committee of three and the exporters committee of five had not arranged their joint session.

A period of the afternoon was devoted to the report of the group of six men consisting of Paul H. Cromelin, who served as chairman; P. A. Power, of the Universal; Reginald Warde, Millard Johnson, of the Australasian Films, Limited; Sidney Garrett, of the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., and David P. Howells, of the firm bearing his name, who volunteered to journey to Washington at the recommendation of the N. A. M. P. I., and did meet with various heads of the War Trade Board, Bureau of Public Information and Customs Bureau.

Those assembled expressed their appreciation at the way in which the committee handled the situation in Washington, and agreed that the peculiarities of the motion picture industry had been so effectively set forth by Chairman Cromelin and his associates that relief was even already in evidence. For those who were not in attendance at the meeting, as well as others not directly members of the exporting fraternity, who, nevertheless, are interested in the activities of the committee during their two days' stay in the nation's Capitol, the following statement by Mr. Cromelin to the Division of Customs is herewith presented:

Washington, June 11, 1918.

HON. FRANK HALSTEAD, Chief Division of Customs, Treasury Department, Washington.

Dear Sir: Referring to the interview granted by you today to the committee representing the export division of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, as promised, and without elaborating or repeating the reasons orally presented and which we feel were you fully cognizant, we repeat the several points which have given rise to [illegible] and ask to which we rely upon your putting in force such administrative rules as will work the least hardship upon our export business.

1. We have your assurance and appreciate the promptness with which you have undertaken to notify the various collectors at the principal ports where motion pictures shipped prior to receipt of the notice of June 6 are being held to release all such shipments, thus preventing the new regulation from being enforced retroactively.

In respect to the broad general question of the necessity of requiring all motion pictures sent to Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, or any of their possessions, or to any other countries allied to us, to be subjected to censorship before dispatch you have indicated that this is the action of the War Trade Board, and that any effort with a view to its modification should be addressed to that board. You promised, however, to endeavor to work out a plan for the actual administration of the order, while it remains in force, in the manner which, while accomplishing the desired results, will be framed with a view to avoiding the imposition of unnecessary burdens upon the industry.

In this general connection permit us to submit the following:

1. If the new rules require that for each and every shipment of multiple copies of any given subject to different foreign countries the same motion picture must time and time again be submitted to different committees who may be called upon to view it and pass upon whether it is to be permitted to be exported it will result in great and unnecessary multiplication of labor in respect to the same subject matter.

2. If an exporter must order from the manufacturer and pay for all the copies of any given subject intended for export to any particular country, have each and every print of the same subject censored, and the case sealed prior to making his application for export license to the War Trade Board, which license may or may not eventually issue for that particular territory, it would result in practice in putting most of the smaller exporters out of business:

(a) They could not finance the transactions;

(b) If the license were refused they would soon be ruined, for they could not afford the luxury entailed in standing such losses. They purchase and pay for the rights to and prints of a given subject for a limited and restricted territory.

If the license is refused they would be absolutely unable to ship the production to or use it in any other territory or within the United States under heavy penalties.

It is in this respect that the motion picture differs broadly from any ordinary article of merchandise.

All motion pictures issued in the United States are eventually exported to a greater or smaller extent dependent upon their international appeal. We suggest that the pictures be censored for export by the custom officials at the time they are passed upon for use in the United States by the National Board of Review. That if approved for export without deletions or alterations, or if with certain deletions or alterations, the manufacturer be licensed and each given picture passed as approved by giving an export license number. The manufacturers could then dispose of as many prints as may be required for each of the respective foreign markets, guaranteeing to the exporter that he is delivering a motion picture which, in the form delivered, is exactly as licensed by the customs.

The department, if it saw fit, might require each and every print to be resubmitted for examination, or it might require the manufacturer to deliver it to the exporter sealed and under guarantee that the film was an exact copy of the motion picture previously censored and approved under No. ....., and this particular copy or copies might be deposited without being opened by the exporter in a shipping case with other licensed films which it was desired to export and sealed in the presence of the customs authorities if such a course seemed necessary or desirable and in the public interest.

Another and an entirely practical method would be to submit to the customs one copy of a motion picture as to which an export license is desired. If approved, an application would be filed with the War Trade Board for the necessary permit. When this is actually received, assuring the exporter that his application is approved, he would then order the number of copies of the subject required in the country to which he wished to export. These copies, when received, would be exhibited to the customs officials, and, after examination, sealed and exported. Such a method would seem to be entirely practicable, working but a minimum of inconvenience to the exporter, and would seem to accomplish all that is being sought.

2. We have pointed out how desirable it would be, having in mind the peculiar contractual relations existing in the motion picture industry which require films to reach foreign countries in time to be used to fill contracts entered into, to have such an order deferred in its application until some future date as would give us time to get notice to our foreign clients and a cabled reply, but meanwhile not holding up and delaying the prompt dispatch of such films as are now on order. We suggested that the new rule go into effect as of July 6. You have promptly indicated your intention immediately to meet us to the extent of honoring all licenses which have heretofore been granted by the War Trade Board without requiring the films to be subject to further censorship, and for this we wish to express our appreciation.

3. In respect to negatives shipped abroad the only country to which these are sent to any extent is Great Britain. There are commercial reasons which make it desirable and to a certain extent imperative to send negatives to England if the American manufacturer wishes to compete in the British market. The negative usually remains in England for four to six months. To subject it to a screen examination by running it through a motion picture machine would mean to run the risk of ruining it. Every scratch and defect caused thereby would appear in each print made thereafter. These defeats, when magnified thousands of times when the positives made from such a negative are thrown on a screen, would in all probability cause the manufacturer to refuse to permit shipment of negatives at all, and thus a large, important, and growing business would be destroyed.

As a practical method of meeting the situation the exporter ought to be permitted to submit a positive copy of the picture, the negative of which it is desired to export, and the manufacturer and exporter make oath that the negative sent is an exact negative of the positive motion picture submitted and approved.

In conclusion permit us to remind you of the very strict British censorship now in force, which would make it quite impossible to send to England for exploitation there a negative containing anything which might be considered inimical to Great Britain or any of our other Allies.

Once more thanking you for the courteous and kindly interest you have displayed in the matters presented, and with every assurance of the desire on the part of the members of the committee and of all of the motion picture industry to co-operate with yours and the other branches of the Government in these critical times, I remain,

Very respectfully yours,
For and on behalf of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Export Division,
PAUL H. CROMELIN, Chairman.

In addition to the above results secured through Mr. Cromelin and his associates a definition as to the Government's interpretation of "educational films," which are hereafter to comprise 20 per cent. of all shipments made to foreign countries, was sought. The definition as it will finally apply seems to be a most liberal one, which, though differing considerably from the accepted film version of the word "educational," nevertheless provides for considerable scope in character and availability of product.

More details will be forthcoming concerning the relief obtained through the volunteer Washington delegation as George Creel, head of the Committee on Public Information, is due in New York, where he has arranged a conference for certain of the representatives of the film industry, on Saturday, June 15.

As matters stand, Mr. Cromelin's report that the representatives of the film industry were everywhere received with appreciation and courtesy should go far to allay the needless worries of the exporting fraternity. The Government is not unmindful of the patriotic and efficacious service the film industry is rendering and will continue to render until victory in the war has been achieved. It shows a decided disposition to make its new and necessary regulations disturb the tenor of the business as little as possible.

Present at the meeting on Thusday were Gabriel Hess, of Goldwyn; Jacobo Glucksmann, New York representative of Max Glucksmann, Argentina; Dr. E. W. Shallenberger, of the Arrow Film Corporation; Messrs. T. Oswald and F. J. Bird, of the Nicholas Power Company; W. E. Kesting, of the Western Import Company; Sidney Garrett, of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc.; Ben Blumenthal, of the Export and Import Film Company; Frederick Knocke and Manuel Zone, of the Cuban Medal Film Company, West Indies; Joseph R. Miles and E. S. Manheimer, of Miles & Manheimer; Jose M. Aragon, of Gillespie Brothers & Co.; H. R. Habicht, of the Piedmont Pictures Corporation; Chester E. Sawyer, of the Caribbean Film Company, Havana, and Central American Film Service, Central America; E. Wineberg, African Films Trust, Limited; Leroy Garfinkle, representing Sociedad General Cinematografica of Argentina, Spain and Portugal; C. P. Mattson, John Olsen Company, Scandinavia, and H. Mayer, of the Corona Film Corporation.

Ruppert Plans a Film Clearing House

Beer and Baseball Man Believes He Can Eliminate a Lot of Overhead in Picture Distribution.

THE rumors that have been floating around filmdom to the effect that Colonel Jacob Ruppert, brewer and owner of the New York American League baseball club, had been attracted to the industry received confirmation last week in the announcement of the incorporation on May 6 last of the Film Clearing House, a New York corporation, with Colonel Ruppert as president. The purpose of the organization is to eliminate the vast distributing overhead expense that is said to make the exchange end of the business unprofitable in too many instances.

Colonel Ruppert made this brief statement: "I think I have a plan that will improve the film distributing situation. But it is a little more than a plan. It has already been presented to some of the leading exchange systems, and is receiving their serious attention. And I am still investigating. Until my investigations have been completed and the entire field sounded, I prefer to say nothing further."

The Moving Picture World learns that the Ruppert company plans to consolidate the shipping work of the exchanges—to act as a complete forwarding service to the exhibitor without touching the sales end of the exchange business. Colonel Ruppert is said to feel that one "clearing house" in a locality can do the physical portion of the distributing work now accomplished by fifteen to twenty branch exchange offices. He expects to eliminate the necessity for these fifteen to twenty branch offices with his single "clearing house"—at which the sales staff of each exchange system represented will have its separate headquarters. For at no time does Colonel Ruppert, according to this information, intend to sell film—just to distribute it. His attention is said to have been originally called to the need of such a clearing house by an item in a trade paper to the effect that one city with thirty theaters had twelve branch exchanges.

The World's informan said further that none of the exchanges which had been mentioned in connection with consolidation plans for similar "overhead saving" purposes was financially interested in the new organization, nor indeed was anyone other than Colonel Ruppert. The latter had realized, said this man, that no company could hope to act as the clearing house of a number of competing exchange systems unless it was clearly independent in a proprietary sense of all of them. Col. Ruppert is said to be going into this venture for the sole purpose of making a permanent business of it, as with his other lines.

Along with exchange systems independent producers will be represented. Negotiations are pending with three such, who already have arrangements for selling and therefore require distribution only. A temporary office has been opened at 18 East Forty-first street, New York. Other officers announced are Fred Dennett, vice-president and general manager, and Colonel Ruppert, Asbel P. Fitch and William M. Seabury, directors.

American Films Kill German Propaganda

Interesting Letter from Traveler in South America Describes How Kaiser's Agents Distributed German Subjects Under Spanish Titles.

THE insidious manner in which Germany sought to push its propaganda in South America through films made in Germany, retitled in Spain and sent to South America from Spain and of the manner in which American films have ousted the German propaganda pictures and established a much more cordial feeling toward the United States in all South American countries is interestingly told in a letter received by World-Pictures from John E. Moore. Mr. Moore penned the letter at Punta Arena, Chile, while held up in that city during the time that his vessel coaled before proceeding through the Straits of Magellan.

"During this trip of mine through these South American countries," wrote Mr. Moore, "I have made some interesting discoveries regarding the manner in which Germany was able to distribute its propaganda films through South America so thoroughly despite the fact that she was cut off from any direct intercourse. The propaganda films were made in Germany, then shipped to Spain, where they were retitled in Spanish—the prevailing language down here—and then shipped here from Spain. Many of the films were given to theaters free of charge; others were placed with theaters by German commercial travelers, who, while ostensibly not connected with the German government, plugged for the propaganda films in town after town after completing their regular day's work. Naturally the German films were widely distributed in this manner.

"Now, however, I am glad to say that American films have pushed the German pictures into the discard, and it will be a big satisfaction to American producers to know that it is the superior entertainment value of films over any other make which has done this. South Americans like our films; in fact, I may say that they are crazy about them. This delight in American films is doing far more than any diplomacy could possibly do in cementing the friendship of the United States and South America.

"In this connection," Mr. Moore concludes, "you will be interested in knowing that World Pictures are represented in all the picture theaters I have so far attended here in South America."

Mr. Moore is a prominent New England business man, whose interests make it necessary for him to take yearly trips to South America.

MRS. BOILEAU SUPPORTING LOUISE HUFF.

Mrs. Philip Boileau, wife of the late artist, whose beautiful magazine covers and illustrations made him famous from one end of the country to the other, has been signed by World-Pictures to support Louise Huff in her World production, "T'Other Dear Charmer." Mrs. Boileau, who posed for her husband constantly and who is known as a most beautiful woman, screens perfectly, and it is expected her appearance in "T'Other Dear Charmer" will make a decided impression.

Film Exports Show Steady Decline

Figures Compiled by Department of Commerce Reveal Inroads of War Conditions on Business of Industry.

WITH the film exporters more or less at sea to know just what the government is going to do in the matter of permitting motion picture films to leave the United States, and under what conditions, the figures just compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce on our foreign trade are of exceptional interest.

There has been a continuous falling off in our film exports. In each of the following statements the figures are for ten months ending with April of the year named. France, which in the 1916 period bought from us 14,154,383 feet valued at $359,177, bought only 8,417,149 feet valued at $321,694, in the 1917 period. During the ten months ending with April, 1918, our exportations to that country amounted to only 1,734,897 feet and for this France paid $166,125.

England, our other great ally, bought from us during the 1916 period 93,868,224 feet of exposed film. That was 50 per cent more than the total of our sales to all the world during the 1918 period. She paid us $3,797,288 for the stock. American-made films were prime favorites in Great Britain, but the war cut down its demands until in the next period there was sent over there but 28,246,319 feet, valued at $1,985,531, and even this volume of trade was cut in half during the ten months ending with April, 1918, the figures being 12,633,260 feet and the value $1,264,920.

Our Italian trade during the 1917 period took a big slump, for while our shipments to that country totaled 15,855,240 feet, valued at $412,917, during the ten months ending with April, 1916, during the ten months ending with April, 1917, the exportations had totaled but 5,752,941 feet, valued at $152,159, and during the ten months ending with April, 1918, the figures were 1,704,199 feet, valued at $49,274. The dearth of shipping space and the various import embargoes are plainly apparent in the figures covering our trade with all of these European countries.

Canadian Situation More Satisfactory.

The Canadian situation is far more satisfactory, although the increase in our business with that country does not by any means make up the losses sustained in the falling off in the purchases of European countries. However, Canada bought during the ten months ending with April, 1916, 8,971,994 feet of American film, paying $685,162; during the ten months ending with April, 1917, these figures were increased to 11,503,038 feet and to $879,581, while during the ten months ending with April, 1918, the total went to 12,961,974 feet, with the value placed at $966,269.

Newfoundland and Labrador, during the 1916 period, bought 1,631,050 feet of exposed film, valued at $104,469. The next ten months' period showed only a slight falling off, the figures being 1,614,370 feet, valued at $78,299, but during the period ending with April, 1918, the footage totaled only 786,418 and the value $17,668.

Australia during the 1916 period bought 5,291,338 feet, for which she paid $374,252. The 1917 period found this increased to 7,808,751 feet, valued at $581,008. A slump came during the ten months ending with April, 1918, and there was exported to that country but 3,589,605 feet, valued at $279,463.

Our total sales during the ten months ending with April, 1916, amounted to 141,508,027 feet, valued at $5,929,699. Of this 11,838,097 feet, valued at $457,192, went to countries other than those mentioned above. This total showed a considerable falling off during the ten months ending with April, 1917, the footage amounting to only 109,964,110 feet and the value to $5,648,676. Of this 36,519,252 feet, valued at $1,389,646, went to countries other than those mentioned above. The ten months ending with April, 1918, showed the greatest slump, the total being 68,247,869 feet, valued at $4,414,407. Of this amount 34,837,516 feet, valued at $1,670,688, went to countries other than those mentioned above.

Our exportations of unexposed film for the ten months ending with April were: 1916, 62,601,495 feet, valued at $1,830,108; 1917, 27,616,288 feet, valued at $716,453; 1918, 37,464,732 feet, valued at $968,187.

Raw Stock Imports Show Decline.

Figures have just been completed by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce showing the value of our importations of films for the ten months ending with April, 1918, together with a comparison for a like number of months ending with April, 1916 and 1917.

While our purchase of raw stock during the 1918 period exceeded that of the 1917 period, the figures show a falling off as compared with our importations during the 1916 period. This trade, like that of all other industries and lines, has fallen off due to lack of transportation space, slowing down of the domestic demand to some extent, and export and import embargoes. During the 1916 period there was brought into the United States sensitized but unexposed motion picture films to the extent of 52,730,606 feet, valued at $663,827. During the 1917 period the importations totaled 40,373,010 feet, valued at $624,018. During the 1918 period these figures were increased to 43,642,403 feet, valued at $675,240.

The importation of negatives during the 1916 period reached 627,270 feet, valued at $166,535. A big jump came during the 1917 period when we brought in 835,768 feet, valued at $434,199. During the 1918 period the negatives reached 635,091 feet, valued at $157,576.

Of positives there was brought into the American market during the 1916 period 5,854,747 feet, valued at $199,210; during the 1917 period, 3,111,556 feet, valued at $146,728, and during the 1918 period, 2,874,402 feet, valued at $142,183.

CLARENCE L. LINZ.

Frederick Truesdell

FREDERICK TRUESDELL, who plays the role of Malcome Gaskell, in the new Metro production, "A Man's World," starring the talented actress Emily Stevens, is one of the best known actors of the day on the American stage. His versatility has gained him fame in light opera as well as on the dramatic stage and his success in the motion pictures is the result of his achievements in other lines of acting. His theatrical career was begun in stock, where he had the thorough training which has helped him to his present laurels. One of his best known successes was gained in "Daddy Long Legs," the Henry Miller production with Ruth Chatterton. In this play Mr. Truesdell created the leading role. He also will be remembered for his excellent work in "On Trial," and in "The Three of Us," which later became the first picture to be produced by Metro.

Frederick Truesdell.

Among his earlier roles in light opera were those in "Alma," "The Show Girl," "The Pink Lady," and "His Highness the Boy."

His screen career has also been unusual in its rapid success and he has many big roles to his credit. He has been seen in the Metro picture, "The Great Power," among others, and for other companies he has played in "The Man Who Forgot," "The Beloved Adventure" and "The Marriage Market."

Mr. Truesdell's work in "A Man's World" is strong. The role in which he is seen is that of an unscrupulous man who believes that there is one code of morals for a man and another for a woman. He plays this part with distinction and force which is most convincing.

LILA LEE NOW IN CALIFORNIA.

Lila Lee. the new fourteen-year-old star of Paramount pictures recently announced by Famous Players-Lasky, has left New York for the Lasky studios at Hollywood, where she will start work immediately on the first of the series of productions in which she will be starred under the terms of her five-year contract.

Miss Lee's first picture will be "The Cruise of the Make-Believe," a widely read story from the pen of Tom Gallon. It is said to provide a role perfectly suited to the personality and talent of the young actress who, as those familiar with her work in vaudeville are aware, can easily pass for several years above or below her actual age, as the case may be.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Yankees Frolic and Boost Horstmann

At Annual Outing New Englanders Play Games, Eat, and Raise $1,000 to Push Presidential Campaign of Favorite Son.

ONE of the most successful outings held by the New England motion picture exhibitors took place at the Pemberton Inn, Hull, on Tuesday, June 11, when 125 members of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island branches of the Exhibitors' League of America, along with their guests among the exchangemen and other exhibitors indulged in field sports, a baseball game, and enjoyed a banquet.

The dinner served as a big boost for the National exposition to be held in Boston, July 13-20, and for the candidacy of Ernest H. Horstmann for president of the National League. Over $1,000 was subscribed to the fund to boost Horstmann for National president. Mr. Horstmann, in declaring his platform, said that the National president should be free from all entangling alliances such as trade papers and film interests, and stated that within a week he would be entirely free to devote all his time strictly and impartially to the best interests of the league if elected National president.

Samuel Grant, manager of the Boston National exposition, told of the grave problems now facing the industry—the Government classification of the industry as essential or non-essential, and the proposal to double the war tax of all theaters. He asked all the exhibitors who were on committees for the convention to be organized so that when called upon they could act quickly and effectively. He said the fate of the exposition and the motion picture industry itself hinged upon what the Government intends to do as to its classification of the industry and as to the war tax.

Exhibitors Get Away Early.

The exhibitors and guests assembled at Rowes wharf, Boston, at 10:15 a. m., and boarded one of the large steamers of the Nantasket Beach line for the sail down the harbor to Pemberton.

Shortly after landing at the beach the annual baseball game between the exhibitors and the exchangemen was under way. Jacob Lourie, of the Modern and Beacon theaters in Boston, captained the exhibitors' team, and his colleague in the battery was Stanley Sumner, of the Fenway theater in Boston. Samuel Moscow, of the United Film Corporation, of Boston, and J. Jennings, of the Pathe exchange, were the battery for the exchangemen.

On the sidelines the din was like that of a bombardment. The exhibitors gathered on one side and the exchangemen on the other. About twenty-five pitchers were "booed" out of the box before the game was over.

The score by innings was:

Exhibitors .....3-5-5-7-0—20.
Exchangemen .....6-7-0-0-0—13.

The results of other contests were as follows:

Fat men's race.—Won by Robert Clark; Stanley Hand, second.

Three legged race.—Won by Edward McAvoy and Harry Segal; second, Harry Campbell and Elmer Daniels.

Hop, step and jump.—Won by L. A. Fabre; Harry Segal, second.

440-yard dash.—Won by H. Meyers; J. B. Levine, second.

Tug of war.—Won by the exchangemen.

100-yard dash.—Won by Edward McAvoy; N. Meyers, second.

Walking race.—Won by P. F. Lydon; M. Berstein, second.

The committee in charge of the games was Harry Wasserman, Bert Cornell, and Abe Montague. The general committee of the outing was Ernest H. Horstmann, Harry Wasserman, Stanley Sumner, Abe Montague, Jacob Lourie, and Elmer Daniels.

At 4:30 o'clock, Mr. Horstmann announced dinner. A bevy of cabaret girls started making merry, and kept the banqueters in good humor during their fine repast.

Wants Exchangemen Back in League.

P. F. Lydon, president of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island branches, opened the exercises after dinner with a short speech. He advocated the getting together again of the exhibitors and exchangemen. He said it was a mistake at the last annual meeting to throw the exchangemen out of the exhibitors' league. He said there was a fine spirit of co-operation and good fellowship between the two branches of the industry in New England, and he hoped that at the next meeting of the exhibitors the matter of reinstating the exchangemen who wish to become members of the league and all others closely allied with the industry would be carried through. Mr. Lydon's plan met with the instant approval of all present.

Manager Grant was called upon for a speech. He said he had just returned from a very important conference in New York. He said that two grave questions confronted the motion picture industry; first, whether the Government would declare the industry essential or non-essential; second, whether the Government would double the war tax now in force.

Mr. Grant said that these questions were so vital to the industry that he was compelled to give up his business in regard to the exposition and wait the Government's decision upon these matters. He said that if the industry was found non-essential it meant that 80 per cent. of the motion picture operators would be drafted into some kind of war service. He said the chances of the Government declaring the industry non-essential were about ninety to one, but still the developments of the war from day to day were such that few could foretell what might happen.

A vote was taken declaring Mr. Horstmann the unanimous choice of the gathering as candidate for the national presidency of the league. Mr. Grant paid high praise to Mr. Horstmann as the logical man for next president of the league.

Mr. Horstmann was introduced, and was greeted with loud cheers. He spoke briefly of his career, and said that if the industry was declared non-essential that the price of film would go up 100 per cent. He said it would be impossible to import film into the country. He made an earnest plea for the closer co-operation of the entire industry and the getting together of the exhibitors into one body.

Jacob Lourie followed Mr. Horstmann, and declared Mr. Horstmann the right man for president of the National League. He called for donations for a campaign fund for

Mr. Horstmann. There were several cries of "I'll give $25." The donations came so fast that for a time all was confusion, and they could not be tabulated.

Manager Harry Campbell, of the Fox exchange, urged a big fund for Mr. Horstmann, and spoke feelingly of the debt the industry owed to Mr. Horstmann. He concluded by saying, "I'll give $100." Manager Mullen, of Universal, equalled this amount, and Harry Asher, of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange, gave $150.

Inside of 15 minutes over $1,000 was donated for the campaign fund. The exhibitors spent several hours in social gatherings, and at a late hour returned to Boston declaring the outing the greatest ever.

Before the party broke up it was voted to hold another outing later in the season for the joint pleasure of the exhibitors and exchangemen.

National Association to Meet July 19

Second Annual Session Will Be Held in Boston—Four Companies Elected to Membership.

THE second annual meeting of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will be held at the Copely Plaza Hotel, Boston, on Friday, July 19, in accordance with the resolution which was adopted at a meeting of the executive committee of the association held on Thursday, June 13.

Prior to the annual meeting the four branches of the association, comprising the distributers, producers and exchanges, supply and equipment companies, and the general division which includes individuals, trade publications and exporters, will each meet for the purpose of nominating seven directors to be elected at the annual meeting in Boston. Authorization was also given for the preparation of proxies for all members so that they may be represented and instructed to vote at the annual meeting, at which time the Board of Directors for the ensuing year will be elected. The directors so chosen elect all of the officers.

That there is evidence of a desire to support the National Association in all of its important activities, especially during the present crisis, is proved by the fact that four important companies were, June 13, elected to membership. The Baumer Films, Inc., and the Educational Films Corporation of America were assigned to the producers' division; the Australasian Films, Ltd., was assigned to the exporters' division and the Exhibitors' Trade Review was assigned to the trade paper publications' division. Announcement was made that six other companies had given their assurance that they would file their applications for membership and there is every reason to believe that all of the few remaining companies which are not actively identified with the work of the association will soon be enrolled as members.

Consideration was given to the application of a number of exporters who desire to affiliate with the National Association, and it was decided to refer the matter to a committee consisting of Walter W. Irwin, chairman; P. A. Powers and Gabriel L. Hess, with full power to act on behalf of the Executive Committee.

Virginia Showmen Hold Convention

American Exhibitors' Association Also Conducts Exposition in Richmond Which Is Attended by Players—Jake Wells Re-elected President.

By Sam Spedon.

THE convention and exposition of the American Exhibitors' Association of Virginia was held at the Grays' Armory, Richmond, June 13, 14, 15. The first session of the convention was scheduled for 2 p. m. of the 13th. In the absence of Jake Wells, the president, who was unable to attend on account of severe sickness, Manager Harry Bernstein, of the Colonial theater, as his representative, addressed the handful of exhibitors present. At Mr. Wells' request he suggested that the opening of the convention be deferred until 2 p. m. the next day. This suggestion was agreed to.

In the evening the exposition was formally opened by Mayor George Ainslie of Richmond. He complimented the exhibitors on the educational value of the pictures they were showing, the great work they are doing in co-operation with the Government and the fine patriotism displayed by them. He especially commended them on the example they had set other communities by reviewing their own films and eliminating any objectionable features in them. In conclusion he extended a hearty welcome to the visiting delegates, and expressed a sincere wish that the guests would enjoy themselves and make the exposition a success so that the motion picture people might see fit to repeat it.

Manager Bernstein, chairman of the entertainment committee, announced that the proceeds of the exposition would be given to the sick babies' milk fund, the committee of which expressed a hope that it would realize the necessary balance to total $1,500 needed before midnight of the closing day.

Booths representing the Pathe, World, Metro, First National, Vitagraph, Super Features, Inc., Select, Paramount-Artcraft and Nicholas Power Company were assigned prominent space and brought into notice by their individual decorations. In addition to these were many other booths representing local interests, as well as candy and light refreshments, flowers, and booths at which visitors were asked to take chances in winning a doll or some other souvenir of an amusing nature.

The hall was artistically and tastefully decorated with the allied flags and Chinese lanterns. At one end a large stage was set as a forest scene, with running waterfalls made brilliant with colored lights. On the stage a jazz band of ten pieces discoursed seductive music, to which the guests danced almost incessantly. At the other end of the hall was hung a large screen, on which were shown moving pictures, viewed by those in the galleries, uninterrupted by the dancers. The festivities were continued until midnight.

Convention Opens on Friday.

The convention was called to order at 3 p. m. Friday by C. E. Goeghegan of Chase City, treasurer of the A. E. A. Charles E. Toney, of the Theato, Richmond, secretary, was about to read the minutes of the previous convention, but, on motion, these were dispensed with until a later session. Mr. Goeghegan occupied the chair because of the continued illness of Mr. Wells and the non-attendance of the vice-president.

The chairman set forth the objects of the convention and then called upon C. C. Pettijohn to address those present, and he urged upon the delegates the necessity of holding state conventions annually to set forth the power of organization as a demonstration of the strength of the motion picture exhibitors as a united body.

Mr. Pettijohn explained the merits of affiliated booking, and gave in brief the plans of the Affiliated Distributing Corporation. He stated that already there were sixty subscribers to the local unit from North and South Carolina, and needed forty more—thirty from Virginia and ten from Tennessee—to make up a necessary unit of one hundred.

Mr. Pettijohn said in conclusion he would arrange a special meeting, at which he would explain the plans in detail and answer the questions of those who might be interested and cared to subscribe. This annonucement was received with approval.

Rose Tapley, at the request of the chairman, addressed the meeting and urged the need of promoting the pictures by the exercise of individual censorship. She also appealed to the exhibitors to show nothing but the best pictures, thereby strengthening the influence of them in the great work that might be accomplished and already demonstrated in the aid they had given the Government towards a victory in the present conflict for universal democracy.

Dan Oestrecher of Petersburg moved that a committee of exhibitors be appointed to review all pictures to be shown in Virginia to avoid all possible objection. The chairman suggested that the matter should be deferred until the evening session, which, after motion to adjourn, was set for eight o'clock.

A sightseeing tour at 4 p. m. was arranged for the stars who arrived on the 7 a. m. train. Eight automobiles drew up at Murphy's Hotel and drew away with the following well-known picture favorites: Edith Storey, Marguerite Snow, Lillian Walker, Madge Evans, June Elvidge, Marguerite Courtot, Rose Tapley and King Baggot. At 6:30 a banquet was given the stars and their guests in the Gold Room of Murphy's Hotel.

Friday Evening's Session.

The eight o'clock meeting of the convention was called to order by Presiding Officer Goeghegan. The main subject discussed was the settlement of Attorney H. L. Kelly's bill for services, rendered in connection with the state censorship question, which was held in committee at the adjournment of the state legislature of last spring and the passing of the license bill at the same session. This license bill was of considerable importance to the exhibitors of Virginia, whereby their license fees were changed from $15.75 a week where there was an admission charge of 15 cents to to a yearly license fee of $25 to $60. For example, take a town of from four to twenty thousand inhabitants the license is now $60 a year instead of $15.75 a week. In towns from one thousand to four thousand inhabitants the license fee is now $25 a year instead of $15.75 a week, or $819 a year, with the privilege of charging as high as 30 cents admission. Mr. Kelly's bill was referred to the ways and means committee for settlement. After calling for a report from the rules and by-laws committee the meeting adjourned until Saturday morning 9:30 o'clock.

Upon the return of the moving picture stars from making a tour of the various theaters in behalf of the W. S. S. drive, at which they disposed of a large number of the stamps, they were presented to the large attendance at the exposition hall. There were at least a thousand persons in attendance, and toward the close of the general merriment the prizes were awarded to those who were chiefly concerned in the affairs of a "country store."

Jake Wells Re-Elected President.

The closing session of the convention was called to order at 9:30 a. m. It was hoped that Jake Wells, the president, would preside at this meeting, but by the advice of his physician he had to return to his home at Norfolk, where he is reported to be a very sick man. A full quorum of members being present the convention proceeded, with the election of officers for the ensuing year as follows: Jake Wells, president; Mrs. A. E. Thorpe, of the Hippodrome, Richmond, vice-president; Harry Bernstein, secretary, and C. E. Goeghegan, treasurer. All elections were unanimous.

A motion made by R. D. Craver that the convention recommend to the A. E. A. members of Virginia the affiliated Distributing Corporation and that they join in completing the unit of its section was unanimously carried by those present.

The convention, on motion, adjourned to reconvene at Ocean View, Norfolk, on August 25 and 26 to transact uncompleted business and inaugurate the new officers.

At the exposition hall in the evening, where the grand ball was held, the throng was so great it was uncomfortably crowded, and it was remarked that never before had Richmond beheld so many people under one roof. Much credit is due Harry Bernstein, as chairman of the entertainment committee, for his successful management of the exposition and his untiring efforts in making it so. The presence of Governor Davis and Mayor Ainslie in the grand march, with all the picture stars, added much to the brilliancy of the closing exercises.

All the stars remained over Sunday to participate in the public meeting held at the Coliseum by the war stamp auxiliary of Virginia.

DETROIT EXHIBITORS HOLD MEETING.

There was a fairly good attendance of exhibitors present at the meeting Thursday, June 6, at the Hotel Tuller, Detroit. M. W. McGee presided and King Perry acted as secretary. C. C. Pettijohn was the guest of honor. Owing to the small attendance, it was decided to postpone the annual election until June 13.

The plan of the Exhibitors' Booking Corporation was also discussed and the members showed a great deal of interest in the proposition. It was announced that nearly seventy-five exhibitors had subscribed for stock.

New York Rectifies Delegates' List

Special Convocation of State Exhibitors' League Chooses Representatives for National Assemblage.

FRIDAY morning, June 14, at the Hotel Astor, representatives of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York met for the purpose of rectifying the list of delegates and alternates to the Boston convention of the National League. President Sydney Cohen was in the chair. In addition to assigning representatives to the Hub, two important resolutions were adopted.

William Brandt, of Brooklyn, proposed the following resolution which was unanimously carried:

"That the exhibitors of the State of New York in convention assembled go on record as indorsing the movement to develop the special children's matinee on Saturday mornings in the motion picture theaters in each of the cities of the State into patriotic community rallies."

The following resolution was also introduced by Mr. Brandt and was passed with enthusiasm:

"That the exhibitors of the State of New York go upon record as urging its members to help in every way possible in the sale of Thrift Stamps in the motion picture theaters throughout the State and to make Thrift Stamp Day on June 28 a very successful drive, and that the secretary be instructed to notify William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, and other necessary officials regarding this resolution."

Sydney Cohen moved that the convention go on record as indorsing the movement inaugurated by the Bureau Council recommending that Governor Whitman be asked to recommend to the next Legislature a constitutional amendment providing for self government by all cities. The motion was passed.

The following is the official list of delegates as decided upon: Messrs. Howard, Manheimer, Hartstall, Charles Haring, Edelstein, Roberts, Elliott, Buettner, Lederer, Stockhammer, Levine, Grossman, Sanders, Cole, Gersen, Vinegrad, Wittman, O'Reilly, Sydney Cohen, Rhonheimer, Berman, Suckno, Hilkemeier, Needles, and Linton.

The list of alternates is as follows: Messrs. H. Haring, Koenigswald, Lyons, Steiner, Weinstock, McCarthy, Powers, Cella, Shapiro, Silverman, Zuckman, Soloman, Maross, Wrightmeyer, Goodman, Hartman, Saphier, Grossman, Schwartz, Ostreicher, Anson, Sol. Coleman, Rachmein and Duffy.

Receipts from Graduated Tax Decline

Current Ten-Month Period Shows Loss of $148,591 Over Corresponding Time of Year Before.

THE amount of taxes paid by an organization or group of organizations may be said to reflect the degree of their prosperity. If this is true, then, the period between July 1, 1917, and April 30, 1918, was not particularly a prosperous one for the theaters, museums, circuses and other amusement places subject to the seating-capacity tax. This is the tax graduated between $25 and $100.

For the ten months ending with April 30, 1918, these amusement places paid into the Treasury of the United States $608,158.73. This shows a decrease from the payment made during the ten months ending with April 30, 1917, when the payments totaled $756,749.80. During the month of April, 1917, this tax netted the Government $20,028.17. During April of this year the returns amounted to $18,581.58, showing a decrease of $1,446.59 for a single month.

April was a comparatively prosperous month for the Government in the way of collections from the admission taxes, the Treasury being the richer by $3,988,868.79 for that month. For the period between October 3, 1917, the date the law providing admission taxes was enacted, and April 30, 1918, the collections reached the total of $17,804,636.87.

The motion picture industry is paying other national taxes, for it has had to stand its share of the $16,614,346.09 paid on the movement of property by freight; the $3,402,174.50 paid on the movement of property by express, during the period between October 3, 1917, and April 30, 1918. There are also the footage taxes, of which no individual record is furnished by the Internal Revenue Bureau, of the Treasury Department, which administers this law.

Toledo Fourth City in Advertising Efficiency

Goldwyn Writer So Classifies It, and at the Head of Motion Picture Exploitation He Places Edward A. Zorn

By a Goldwyn Executive.

THE right kind of newspaper advertising inevitably reflects something of the man who wrote or inspired it. If it doesn't then it is faulty and at least partially ineffective. There is an "I" element or a "me" element that has to be put into printed salesmanship, and you find this element in the two largest motion picture advertising accounts of Toledo, Ohio. The writer of this series of articles has ranked Toledo as the fourth city in advertising efficiency, and ever since doing this he has wondered if, under analysis, Toledo is not pushing Cleveland hard for third place.

Beyond question the most alert advertiser in Toledo is Edward A. Zorn, manager of the Temple and Alhambra theaters—"Edward A.," as a literary courtesy, and "Eddie" Zorn in point of fact. Zorn is of the size and dimension that make great infielders in baseball—nervous, full of vitality, rangey and covering much ground rapidly. He has the newspaper temperament and agility of mind. He plays with the plot of a motion picture as a newspaper editor plays with news. To him a picture possesses plot for the sole purpose of being transmitted to the public via the newspapers. In other words, he handles his shows as if they were news, which is, of course, the correct way of exploiting an amusement.

Zorn knows, of course, that humanity is interested first of all in itself and secondly in others. He knows that personality is the biggest and greatest human interest power in the world. He knows that Mae Marsh or Bill Farnum or Madge Kennedy or Mabel Normand are known to more people individually in Toledo than any citizen of Toledo is known to his fellow citizens. The mayor of Toledo might walk down his city's main thoroughfare unrecognized by more than a hundred people, whereas Mabel Normand or Bill Farnum would be followed by 60 per cent. of all available pedestrians and require the services of the police for protection.

Knowing all of these things, Eddie Zorn and H. C. Horater, his co-manager, advertise on a large, liberal and able scale to the people of Toledo, whose patronage they seek. In the Toledo Blade on Saturday—almost every Saturday—you find the Temple carrying 200 lines deep by five columns wide or 225 lines deep by five or six columns wide. In the Toledo Sunday Times you will find this space duplicated, and in the Toledo News Bee space of large dimension. There are three papers in the town, and Zorn and Horater use them all. On the same days the Alhambra carries as large or larger space, not as an occasional departure, but regularly.

Zorn Has Stimulated Other Showmen to Advertise Big.

Since the development of the Zorn advertising other showmen of Toledo have been stimulated into carrying big space and into selling a show according to the best of modern merchandising methods. From the moment that the Valentine theater passed under the Marcus Loew management it took rank with these other two houses, and today it is the most liberally advertised of all the houses owned by Mr. Loew—on a scale even larger than his Stillman theater, Cleveland. The other houses in Toledo that are big users of newspaper advertising space are the Princess Paramount theater, the Colonial and the Hippodrome.

Exhibitors in certain "hard towns" would consider the newspaper co-operation given in Toledo almost ideal. As a matter of fact, as intelligently as newspaper co-operation has been developed there, it is still limited more than it should be and more than the revenues derived from motion picture advertising warrant. This is true with the single exception of the Toledo Sunday Times, which carries an eight or ten page section devoted primarily to the screen and secondarily to the theater. Incidentally, the theater in Toledo is effectually and finally drowned by the more progressive motion picture exhibitor, who has cast dignity and dry-as-dust traditions to the winds and learned to be human in print.

The lessees of the Toledo Blade, an old and distinguished newspaper, known to all Ohioans, carry a huge volume of advertising copy from their local picture theaters, but restrict the editorial co-operation within definite limits. These lessees are Nat C. Wright and Harry S. Thalheimer, also owners of the Detroit Journal and the Newark (N. J.) Star-Eagle, both of which are friends of the screen and beneficiaries of newspaper advertising from the picture theater. In point of editorial co-operation the News Bee could be much stronger than it is, and this co-operation, if further developed, would directly benefit the paper's revenues from amusement advertising.

Toledo and Cleveland are virtually on a par with regard to the number of daily newspapers, but the Toledo exhibitors are superior advertisers in point of volume of advertising copy used. Naturally more theaters in Cleveland advertise, but the few that advertise in Toledo equal—on Saturdays and Sundays—in volume of space the larger number of advertisers in the larger city.

Zorn and Horater have had great value outside of their home city. They have been pointed out to exhibitors elsewhere for several years, and their skilful exploitation has influenced many other exhibitors in other towns to sell a motion picture to the public as Toledo sells it. These two men have attained, through working together, a remarkable co-ordination of thought and action. They constitute in their field a team as skilled as were Alexander and Killifer in baseball. The one has watched the advertising and exploitation unceasingly and the other has shown the greater interest in house showmanship and management. Two remarkable, successful houses pay tribute to their skill.

Gillstrom on From the Coast

ARVID E. GILLSTROM, until recently associated with the King Bee Film Corporation as director of their star, Billy West, has been in New York for the past week or two. He plans to return to the coast in the near future.

Across seven years Mr. Gillstrom has had an interesting experience in the picture business. Originally a mining engineer working in Colorado, Mr. Gillstrom had gone to the coast to rest and happened to be in Los Angeles at a time when the Universal was looking for a chap willing to earn $500 by "taking a Brodie" from the top of a ship's mast just as it was being rocked to sleep by a charge of dynamite. Gillstrom thought he had never had a chance to earn the same amount of money with as little effort before and enlisted for the stunt, which he successfully accomplished.

Arvid E. Gillstrom.

Gillstrom continued with Universal for some time before joining the Kalem forces on the coast as assistant director. A three and a half year engagement with Mack Sennett, directing Fred Mace and Fred Sterling under Mr. Sennett's supervision, followed. Mr. Mace's sudden death while in New York in company with Mr. Gillstrom a couple of years ago upset the director's then future plans to a considerable extent.

While with the King Bee company Mr. Gillstrom directed West in twenty-two two-reel pictures in a period of forty-six weeks. His future connection has not yet been announced.

Fischer of Milwaukee Has Ideas

Works Clever Plan to Bring Young People to His House. Helps Mothers, Too.

DO YOU know that many of the exhibitors know more about their own business than some of us think they do. We can learn a whole lot that is new and surprising if we get out among them, listen, look and learn. Theory is speculation, but practice makes perfect. We are convinced from observation that some exhibitors are practicing the ideas which some of the wise ones who, in the recesses of their sanctums, believe they are discovering.

Theater Parties in Milwaukee.

At the Alhambra Theater, Milwaukee, George Fischer, the manager, has tried to provide the maximum of service at the minimum of cost. He has made many innovations which he has brought to such perfection; they deserve more than passing notice. His young people's heater parties not only furnish a service that is a boon and accommodation to many mothers, but in addition makes the Alhambra one of the most popular places of entertainment in the city. These parties make it possible for any Miss or young man to entertain a number of their friends at luncheon and afterwards at the performance at a moderate sum, under the most favorable circumstances. There is a special reception room for these parties, beautifully furnished, and a cafe service equal to the best hotel or restaurant. The host selects his or her own menu, which varies in price according to the number of dishes selected. Each party has its own menu card with spaces for the autographs of the guests and remarks.

The Nursery.

The nursery is another feature, while not a new idea, it is so complete in its appointments it meets a modern and popular need. In one part of the room there is a sand box, with shovels and pails; in another hobby horses and all sorts of toys and in another section are white cribs dressed in immaculate sheets and coverlets. Two trained nurses are constantly in attendance. When the mother leaves her child in the nursery, it is tagged and a duplicate tag is given to the parent with a corresponding number. If the mother is needed in the nursery during the performance the number appears on a transparency at the left side of the screen and without interruption the mother repairs to the nursery. There is direct electric communication from the nursery with the operator's booth and he flashes the number on the transparency.

These are some of the modern improvements that are setting the pace for modern theater construction and making the motion picture houses in some of the larger cities the nearest things to home with all the modern comforts and advantages.

Service That Advertises.

In addition to his many other innovations he has printed a service booklet which contains a set of rules for his employes, presumably, which accidentally on purpose, fall into the hands of his patrons. The apparent purpose of this idea is to place the employes on their good behavior if they wish to retain their positions and gives those who attend the theater a clear understanding of the courtesies they may expect.

World Film Insures Its Employees

Under Blanket Arrangement the Plan Applies to Branch Offices and Is Intended to Promote Team Work.

IN ITS announcement of covering the lives of its employes with insurance for the benefit of the family of employes, the World Film Corporation gives practical evidence of its appreciation of the devotion its employes have manifested to the employing company.

Beginning at its studios and going through its operating divisions covering all branches the blanket insurance principle is applied. The innovation is intended to encourage and promote team work, better service and absolute permanency of occupation, all tending for increased efficiency.

Contracts have been negotiated between World Film and one of the great life insurance companies under the terms of which the lives of all employes, including those in branch offices, are covered by insurance in substantial amounts. The plan includes all except department heads, for whom special arrangements have been negotiated.

It will not be necessary for employes to pass medical examinations, nor will they be subject to a charge of any kind, nor will the insurance given them by the company interfere in any respect with the rights of employes under the State compensation laws or other statutes for employe protection.

As soon as a man or woman enters the World service he or she becomes a candidate for the insurance, the first policy issuing ninety days after employment and continuing thereafter throughout the entire length of service, increasing steadily in amount until the end of five years, when the maximum under the plan is reached.

Reginald Barker at Work

THAT Goldwyn is all in readiness for Geraldine Farrar to begin her first production under the Goldwyn Pictures imprint was evidenced by the arrival in New York of Reginald Barker, Miss Farrar's director, from Los Angeles.

Mr. Barker completed his last Pacific Coast picture in Los Angeles on Sunday, June 2, and left on the following day for New York, bringing with him the scripts and continuities of three big Farrar productions which had been sent to him out west weeks before and gone over with him in all details by Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, with whom Mr. Barker signed his Goldwyn contract.

Reginald Barker.

Miss Farrar's first Goldwyn production is to be one of the big surprises of the fall season in motion pictures. No one familiar with this artist's screen career can foretell the type of story that Goldwyn has found for her. It varies greatly in type from any picture the star of the opera and concert stages has ever done on the screen, and she is quite as delighted with it as are the Goldwyn executives. With artists of Miss Farrar's importance, no producer does things without long advance preparations. For months Goldwyn has been preparing for the advent into its studios of this star. Sets have been ready for weeks, the continuities of not only her first, but her second and third stories as well have been approved to the last letter, and Hugo Ballin and his technical and art aids long ago have approved all scene designs and seen them put into work.

Mr. Barker brings with him from California Harry Schenck, his long-time aid, so that he has not got to accustom himself to any new assistants. The likelihood is that the cameras will be grinding by the time this story is printed and the entire Goldwyn organization will be examining the "takes" of her first picture with enthusiasm.

CAMERA SHOWS CANADIAN REHABILITATION WORK.

Upward of one thousand prominent citizens of Canada and the United States, including an American Educational Mission, witnessed the first presentation of moving pictures showing the work of the Military Hospitals Commission in Canada at the University of Toronto recently. Eight of twelve officials reels were shown. The views indicate the work that is being doen in the rehabilitation of returned disabled warriors to Canada and shows the handling of the convalescent men from the time of their arrival at Halifax or elsewhere until they assume civilian responsibilities.

The pictures are intended for various uses. They are to be shown to Canadian soldiers who are still in France and England as evidence as to what the Canadian Government is doing for the disabled warrior.

BRADLEY BARKER RETURNS TO UNIVERSAL.

Bradley Barker, a screen favorite of many years' standing, has been engaged by Universal to appear in feature leads. He will leave for Universal City in a few days and will begin work immediately. This is the second time Barker has been with Universal, having been connected with the company during the earlier days of his screen career. Since then he has been with Famous Players, Fox, World and Metro. The most recent pictures in which he has appeared are "The Million Dollar Dollies," with the Dolly Sisters; "Tinsel," with Kitty Gordon; "Eyes of Mystery," with Edith Storey, and "Men," with Charlotte Walker.

Goldwyn Exchanges Are a Year Old

Since Opening Its American Offices Company Has Extended Its Distributing System to Cover World.

GOLDWYN'S world-wide releasing organization, the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, has celebrated its first birthday, its offices having been opened throughout North America in the second week of June, 1917. What one year ago was but the mere beginning of a distribution system has now expanded until it covers every part of the habitable globe and not only releases Goldwyn's own productions, but independently made pictures of other producers.

At no time in film history has any company succeeded in girdling the globe in its first year of existence. The United States offices of Goldwyn are in Atlanta, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Detroit, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York City, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, St. Louis, Seattle and Washington, D. C.—nineteen offices in all parts of the country.

The offices of Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., of Canada, are operated in Toronto, Calgary, Winnipeg, St. John, Montreal and Vancouver—six in all. In England the Goldwyn headquarters are in the hands of the Stoll Film Company. Oswald Stoll is the head of this organization and Jeffrey Bernard is his managing director. The Stoll Film Company has a chain of offic s throughout the United Kingdom.

Australasian distribution for Goldwyn is obtained through J. C. Williamson Films, Ltd., with headquarters at Sydney. Hugh Ward, well known to many Americans; George Tallis, now making friends here in the States, and F. W. Thring are the managing directors of the Williamson organization.

New Zealand distribution is in the hands of the New Zealand Pictures Supply, Ltd., with the popular Harry Heyward as chairman of the board.

Scandinavian offices are maintained by John Olsen & Company, with headquarters in Copenhagen, Denmark.

South Africa is covered through the South African Film Trust; Brazil through the Companhia Bresil Cinematographica, with offices in Rio de Janeiro; Argentine, Uruguay the Paraguay through Messrs. Saenz & Gonzalez, in Buenos Aires; Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador through the Mutual Export and Import Company; Porto Rico, Santo Domingo and Venezuela through the Agencia General Cinematografica, San Juan, Porto Rico.

Mexican and Central American distribution is handled through Messrs. Lescale, Goni & Company, of Mexico City; Italy through Antonio Bonetti, of Milan; Dutch East Indies and Straits Settlements through the Unity Film Service, of Bandoeng, Java, and Egypt through Joseph A. Adda of Cairo.

French, Spanish, Portuguese, Netherlands, Japanese, Chinese and Philippine distributions are now being organized, completing Goldwyn's globe-girdling with the exception of those nations allied with Germany in the war.

How Railroad Rate Increase Hits Pictures

World Film Points Out That Many More Actors and Houses Are Available for Screen Productions.

THE tremendous boost in passenger rates, which went into effect on June 10, will prove of immense benefit to the picture industry, is the opinion of World Pictures. The World is securing many prominent stage actors who are unable to secure legitimate engagements owing to cancellation of routes of companies organized for the road. Many of the big legitimate theaters throughout the country are planning to show pictures next year and making preparations now for this change as they realize it will be impossible to keep their houses open night after night with the limited stage productions which can survive.

This condition is the inevitable result of the passenger rate increase. It will, of course, be impossible for many theatrical road companies to operate as heretofore, owing to the fact that they cannot pay the increased fares for the members of their companies and still make a profit. Just how big this increased railroad fare is, as it affects road companies, can be graphically shown by taking dramatic movement from New York to Buffalo. It is a railroad rule that twenty-five fares must be purchased to secure the use of a baggage car, and as a baggage car is needed for the companies' use the computation is made on the basis of twenty-five fares.

The rate prior to June 10, including sleeper and war tax, was $10.84. Under the new schedule the cost will be $18.80, showing an increase of $7.96 for each person.

This means for a company of twenty-five an increase of $200 in the fare from New York to Buffalo, which, of course, is prohibitive. Consequently there will be fewer attractions on the road next season, which makes it necessary for theater owners to look for other forms of entertainment wit' which to keep their theaters open. Naturally they are turning to films, and as a consequence pictures will this coming year be seen in legitimate theaters never before opened to them.

World Pictures are alertly watching the new conditions, and the World men in the field have been instructed to cooperate to the utmost with theater owners seeking to find attractions for the coming season.

Whartons Make Picture for War Charity

Plans Under Way for National Circulation of the Propaganda Subject, "The Mission of the War Chest."

A PICTURE of power has recently been completed by the Whartons—as a gift. It formed the contribution of Theodore and Leopold D. Wharton to the war chest fund, and now is busily engaged in rolling up the dollars that the fund in New York State may keep on piling up even after the campaign of the Red Cross and kindred organizations is over. Officially the picture was presented to the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Rochester, but so great has been the influence of the film for raising money that plans already are under way to make the distribution of it a national matter.

Theodore Wharton.

Work on "The Eagle's Eye" was stopped for a week while every member of the staff of Wharton was turned over to the making of "The Mission of the War Chest." King Baggott and Marguerite Snow, the stars of Chief Flynn's serial, had their part in the picture, the scenario of which was written by Theodore and Leopold D. Wharton.

The story is of a man who would not give—but who had a son who is willing to give more than money—his life. Even after the son has enlisted the father is still obdurate, and it is not until his son's letters arrive from the front, describing the work of the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, and the Salvation Army—all of which derive their money from the war chest, that the father finally sees the light and becomes a subscriber. It is largely through the son's description of the death of a chum that this change comes—and the realization of conscience that while his son has been over there, giving his all for his country, he, the father, has been doing nothing and has been more than a detriment to the nation that has formed his haven.

Large numbers of troops were used in the battle scenes, in which a reproduction of the explosion on Vimy Ridge is shown. All the scenes were personally directed by Theodore and Leopold D. Wharton.

ARTISTIC TOUCHES.

Many exhibitors are playing up their lobbies by employing a capable artist to design and produce novel and artistic displays. The additional expense is offset by the effects and result secured. In one theater we were struck by the color scheme employed in the lobby display, everything harmonized and gave one the impression that the place had been freshly and especially decorated. At a theater where "The Blue Bird" was being shown, the original display cards were of robins egg blue in gold frames on gold easels. Above the entrance to the foyer, in a semi-circular niche, was a forest scene, with a sunset effect produced by an electric light behind the back drop and several cut-out blue birds on strings swinging among the trees. This display was in a miniature model scene set. Only an artist could produce these displays, but, nevertheless, they are quite the vogue. In some places two or three theaters employ the same artist, particularly where they play weekly runs.

Theaters Are to Aid in Coal Saving

While There Is No Talk of Closing Houses Exhibitors Will Be Expected to Conserve Fuel Where Possible.

WITH a view to eliminating any possibility of necessity for more workless days in 1918 the United States Fuel Administration is mapping out a plan for conservation that will, however, include lightless nights to a greater extent than previously ordered. Events at the front have changed all of the Government's plans, it is understood, and make necessary greater savings in fuel.

The need for conservation was outlined by Dr. Harry A. Garfield, United States Fuel Administrator, to a group of newspaper men at a special conference. He pointed out that the situation was serious. It was estimated that all non-war industries would have to give up 40,000,000 tons of coal; now it is found that the requirement will be something more than 100,000,000 tons.

As far as could be ascertained by the Washington correspondent of the Moving Picture World, who was present at this conference, no real demands will be made on the moving picture theaters of the country other than that they observe the lightless nights that are sure to be ordered.

Exhibitors are to be urged to save all that they can in the heating of their houses. They may have to resort to soft coal, and it is recommended that the theaters lay in as much as they can conveniently house as soon as possible.

There is no talk of closing the theaters. That is, there is no move on foot in the Government departments. There has been some activity on the part of cranks to bring about various reforms, but they will not get very far, for the motion picture theaters are recognized as something of a war aid.

But the big rows and circles of flaming electric lights set in the fronts of the theaters will have to go out of existence.

New Big Theaters Must Fill Public Need

War Finance Act Is Interfering With Sale of Stocks Where Expenditure of $100,000 Is Required.

EXHIBITORS and others planning the establishment of motion picture or other theaters, requiring the expenditure of $100,000 or more, if that money is to be raised through the sale of stocks or bonds, will find themselves confronted by the provisions of the so-called War Finance Act. It develops that there are few concerns of this nature who understand the law.

Before starting on such a project, the parties interested should submit the facts to the Capital Issues Committee at the Treasury Department in Washington. The applications for permission to conduct the proposed enterprise must show that they are to serve a section wherein there is no theater or where there is no theater near enough to care for the residents therein.

There are few set rules covering the issuance of permits. Every case is considered and decided upon its merits. There has been no expression as to the attitude of the committee toward any particular lines of industry or toward any organization engaged in any industry. But the committee holds to its original decision not to approve applications and issue permits for organizations or things for which there is no actual need.

There have been several applications for stock issue by theater organizations, and most of these have been turned down, it is understood, because it was not shown to the satisfaction of the Capital Issues Committee that the theaters proposed would serve any war-time need. On the other hand, a permit was recently granted for a stock issue covering a theater to be located near an Army camp.

The committee is not endeavoring to restrict enterprise, to curb commercial activity, but it is trying to divert it to such projects as there is real need for.

CORNELIUS MANAGING NEW ORLEANS STRAND.

D. L. Cornelius, who has for several months past successfully filled the office of publicity manager for the Saenger Amusement Company, Inc., of New Orleans, has recently taken over the position of manager of the Strand theater in that city, in connection with his other work.

Maurice Barr, who was manager of the Strand, is now a member of the National Army, having been drafted on May 28. Mr. Barr was for many months the right hand man of E. V. Richards, Jr., secretary and general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company, and much of the prosperity that the Strand has enjoyed was due to his zeal and initiative.

President Wilson Corrects a Title

Where Others Failed to Note Slip in "Pershing's Crusaders," Keen Executive Eye Caught It—It's All Right Now.

DURING the presentation of "Pershing's Crusaders" at Poli's theater, Washington, D. C., which was attended by President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson and most of the nation's official dignitaries, President Wilson discovered a grammatical error in one of the sub-titles. This is rather an amusing evidence of the keenness with which the President watched the production and also shows his wonderful powers of observation, as thousands of other people had witnessed the production during its engagements in New York and Boston without discovering this slip on the part of the title editor.

The President communicated his correction to George Creel, and Mr. Creel immediately remedied the solecism. "Pershing's Crusaders" is being distributed throughout the United States by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Nell Shipman, Australian Favorite

FROM far Australia an order for another screen story has come to Nell Shipman, motion picture star and author. Miss Shipman states that if the strenuous work now being done under the direction of David Smith permits she will take on the contract.

This will not by any means be the first story Miss Shipman has constructed to order for Australian producers, as she wrote the first scenario ever produced by an Australian company, and her form of continuity was used for a time by the Sydney Morning Herald to illustrate the methods of construction to stimulate a local interest in this department.

Nell Shipman.

A Sydney firm has also purchased the rights to her first book, "Under the Crescent," and Millard Johnson, New York representative of the Australasian Film Association, states that her screen successes are in considerable vogue south of the equator.

Nell Shipman has recently constructed two strong screen-dramas, which will be exploited in the open market. The first, "The Tiger of the Sea," is now in course of manufacture, and the second, "The Coast Guard Patrol," has been passed on favorably by the strongest distributing organization in the field.

LOUIS WALDMAN DROWNED IN HUDSON.

Louis Waldman, twenty-four years old, for many years in the employ of General Film Company at various exchanges—his most recent employment being as booker at the Albany exchange—was accidentally drowned in the Hudson River on the evening of June 5. While returning to Albany from Troy on a steamboat, he undertook the feat of swimming from the boat to the shore. Discarding some of his clothing, he jumped into the water and was making good progress when he was seized with an attack of the cramps and was drowned. Mr. Waldman's parents live in Brooklyn.

KELLEY MANAGING GENERAL'S DALLAS OFFICE.

James B. Kelley, otherwise known as "Smiling Jimmy," has been appointed branch manager at Dallas for General Film Company, according to an announcement made this week. He has been serving as special representative for General Film product out of the Dallas office, where he served as a salesman several years ago. He is one of the best known film men in the southwest and south.

"Mexico Today"

Five Reels of the Educational Films Corporation of America's Splendid Series Divulge Secrets of Border Land.

AT LAST we are permitted to learn something of Mexico as she really is, thanks to the screen, to George D. Wright and his photographer, I. W. Gobbett, who brought to us twelve reels of characteristic scenes from there, and to the Educational Films Corporation of America, their distributors.

Of these twelve reels of pictures we have thus far viewed five, entitled respectively "The Heart of Mexico," "Mexico's Floating Gardens," "Pulque, the National Drink of Mexico," "The Most Useful Plant in the World," and "Necaxa, the Power Plant of Mexico."

Scene from "Mexico Today" (Educational).

The first of the number has already been reviewed in these columns, and covers Mexico City in an illuminative manner. The second "Mexico's Floating Gardens" shows us that there are at least a few Mexicans who are not lazy. These gardens, which originally floated about on the Mexican lakes, now form the banks of the Viga Canal. Here not only an intensive method of gardening is used, but also scientific methods which the natives follow singularly enough without knowing why. The careful planting of seeds, the rearing of the plants, and the gathering and washing of the fruits and vegetables for the market is shown. These gardens are about thirty miles from Mexico City. The small boats en route to the city, and arriving in the early dawn, and also the transporting of the garden product in various ways to the market or shipping port present picturesque scenes.

"Pulque, the National Drink of Mexico," the third number, and "The Most Useful Plant in the World," the fourth number, are unusually interesting inasmuch as they acquaint us with the multiple virtues of the century plant, known in Mexico as the maguey plant, and which yields the Mexican food and drink, covering for his house and material for rope. Pulque, the national drink, is extracted by gouging a hole in the heart of the plant where the tender new leaves are about to unfold the blossom, which if allowed to grow would shoot up into the air a distance of thirty feet. Into this cavity the plant deposits its sap at the rate of two or three quarts daily which is gathered into a gourd by suction caused by a vacuum created by the drawing of the air from the gourd through a small hole pierced in its upper end. The sap is then taken to the brewery where it is left to ferment for several weeks in cowhide which has the hair side turned in. The pulque, which is rich in alcohol, is then sold in the streets or in saloons. This drink cannot be imported for the reason that it will not keep longer than two days. The fourth number shows the making of rope from the leaves of the plant, the use of the fresh green leaves cut into pieces as fodder for cattle, the covering of the roofs of houses with the leaves of the maguey plant and also the repairing of roads with the dried leaves.

The fifth reel covers all details in connection with the location, construction, and workings of the great power plant of Mexico, Necaxa. The great reservoirs and the mechanical part of the plant which supplies electric power to practically all of interior Mexico, with views of the great water pipes and all of that now remains of the former falls of Necaxa is shown in the picture. The reservoir of Tenango, back of the hills, and also the village of Necaxo, populated principally by engineers, are included in the illustration of one of the most remarkable engineering feats of which we have evidence.

This series of pictures is one of the most interesting and informational that the market has to offer. No one who has an opportunity to see it should fail to do so. Others of this series, which will be reviewed in these columns at a later date, are as follows: "Market Days and Festivals"; "A Modern Mexican Hacienda"; "In the Silver Country" (silver mining at the famous Puchuca camp); "Picturesque Industries of Mexico" (fly catching, adobe brick making, and Mexican feather work); "An Indian Village in Mexico"; "Mexico, Historic and Architectural"; 'The Mexican Venice."

Interesting Educationals

One Military Subject, One Travel and Three Industrial Pictures.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Britain's Bulwarks" (Pathe).

MONITORS, destroyers and other British war craft are pictured here in a raid on the Belgian coast. This installment will change the ideas of persons who think the British navy has been lying idle during the past year or two. The maneuvers of these war craft are astonishingly swift and well ordered. Scenes are pictured from on board one of the monitors, which carries 15-inch guns. King George and Prince Albert are shown on an inspection trip. The installment is very entertaining.

"Pines Up and Palms Down" (Goldburg-Outing-Chester).

The sixth of the Outing-Chester travel scenics takes us first to the Florida everglades, where, in the marsh, a baby otter makes his appearance and has a run-in with a young alligator, which he treats to a proper nipping. The Seminole Indians here reveal some of their customs, and the big cypress trees afford fascinating scenes. Then we take a long step north into the wilds of Quebec, where, over the camp fire among the pines, the members of a party which has just arrived via canoe spin yarns to the night winds. In the morning they start off on their quest for game, portaging the canoe to the next body of water. On their way across a lake they discover a young moose, which has come to the water to escape the flies. Here it feeds on the roots of the lilies; but on the approach of strangers it makes a hasty exit from the scene. An old moose swimming across a river presents a highly picturesque appearance. The closing scene is a beautiful one of mirrored waters.

"Machine Guns for Pershing's Boys" (Universal).

In the 76th issue of the Screen Magazine we learn how the machine guns with which America's boys in France are becoming famous are made. The details shown are as follows: Making the handle-lock, machining the tripod mount, grinding the recoil plate, grinding the lock frame, boring, rifling and straightening the barrels, inspecting the lock, and finally the firing test.

"The Florida Crawfish or Spiny Lobster" (Universal).

The 76th issue of the Screen Magazine makes us acquainted with the Florida crawfish or spiny lobster. Closeups convince us that he is first cousin to the lobster. He grows even larger and is also a rival in flesh and flavor. He is an easy catch with the "bully" net after the keen eye of the fisherman has spied him through the clear water. He lacks the powerful claws of the Northern lobster and relies for protection on sharp spines which project from his body in every direction. He has also spines to protect his eyes, and a wonderfully constructed tail makes him a swift swimmer, a feat which he performs backwards. His mouth reveals heavy grinders which are worked by powerful muscles and are useful for crushing the smaller shellfish on which he feeds.

"Women in the World of Work" (Paramount-Bray).

In the Pictograph No. 124 another of the avenues for the industrial ingenuity of women is depicted. In this number we have some excellent examples of the results of expert needlework. Various beautiful articles are shown, as well as the actual working of them, from pincushions to the larger and more elaborate accomplishment of the theater curtain.

South American Expedition Filmed

Col. Theodore Roosevelt's Journey into South American Wilds Shown on Strand Screen.

STRAND theater patrons had an unusual opportunity during the past week of glimpsing the habitation of the natives of the interior of Brazil. The exhibition of the first of a series of pictures entitled "Col. Theodore Roosevelt's Expedition into the Wilds," introduced us to the Parecis Indians, the Nahmbirquaras Indians, and the Coronado Indians, showing their industrial capacity, and their feasts and religious ceremonies.

This number opened with views of Rio de Janiero. From here the party journeyed to Asuncion on the Paraguay River, and along its palm-clad banks to Corumba. There was considerable sport to be had shooting alligators in the Paraguay; and finally the Barros ranch was reached, from whence at sunrise the party started out on a jaguar hunt. Views of the hunt have not been included in the collection, however, and we have to be satisfied with a close examination of a beautiful jaguar skin, one of the trophies.

Then there are scenes on the River Tapirs, showing the beautiful Salto Bello Falls and the river below the falls. Tapirapoan, the headquarters of the telegraph commission of this district, is also shown; and from here they start off, accompanied by a quarter load of quinine into a land of unfamiliar sights and fever germs. The Parecis Indians, a type of fine physique, are fairly industrious, judging from scenes showing the making of flour by a laborious primitive method, and weaving, cooking, etc. The women are able to carry 100-pound basket loads on their heads. Like the other tribes shown in the picture they wear little or no clothing. Then come the Nahmbirquaras Indians in the Burity River section. Here are also fine samples of long-horned cattle, which are driven in large herds through the river, presenting a remarkable sight. The Coronado Indians are shown fishing in their primitive way, the exits of the river being blocked and the fish being lured to the surface with food. Previous to going on their fishing expedition they perform a remarkable ceremony, of which a strenuous round of dancing forms a part. The burial of an Indian chief is one of the most interesting features on this part of the picture. The men decorated by their wives for the occasion present ludicrous sights, "all dressed up" for the funeral. In this ceremony is included dancing and the carrying of the Wheels of Ike by strong men of the tribe. These wheels weigh each 180 pounds. The pall-bearers, whose naked bodies are painted with clay or charcoal, have a dance by themselves. After the ceremony a celebration takes place, which includes the drinking of sugar-cane juice. Theaters Present Attractive Programs

Rivoli, Rialto and Strand Alive with Matters of Special Interest.

THE week of June 2 found the three leading New York moving picture theaters vieing with one another in presenting to the public matters of entertaining, educational and current interest. For instance, seldom have we in one week three such excellent feature attractions as "Prunella," "Believe Me Xantippe" and "Cecilia of the Pink Roses." Nor do we often find on one program as at the Strand such a bevy of educational and semi-educational subjects as "Pines Up and Palms Down" from the Outing-Chester series, "Character Analysis" and "Out of the Inkwell" (the latter presenting the latest thing in cartoon animation), from the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, and "Capturing a Huge Bear" from the Bob Bakker series. In fact the Strand is to be congratulated on the informational character which its programs of recent months have presented.

The Rivoli during this particular week inclined to the exquisite, making a play for artistic effects. June roses were in evidence, and the atmosphere of the theater supplied a confirmation of the leading feature's title that the play itself had failed to do. The Rivoli Pictorial presented some unusually pleasing features, among them "Hunting Wild Geese." This latter exhibited scenes taken on the farm of Jack Miner near Kingsville, Ontario, Canada, where protection is provided for wild geese which flock in large numbers at a certain season of the year to the lake on the Miner farm. Some amusing scenes showing the anger of one of the geese who has been induced to hatch her young in capitivity, when the farm dog puts in an appearance. Colored studies in floriculture arranged from selections contributed by the Educational Films Corporation of America and the Beacon Films, Inc., were also much enjoyed and included the primrose, the double tulip, garden anemones, roses and other flowers with closeups of buds in the act of opening.

The Strand presented among other interesting things the Ditmars subject, "Wild Babies," one of the most remarkable features of which is the hatching of frog's eggs. "Out of the Inkwell" and "Studies in Character Analysis," from the Paramount-Bray Pictograph No. 123, were also among the features of the Strand Topical Review. From the Outing-Chester series "Pines Up and Palms Down" gave glimpses of the Quebec section of Canada, where the pines grown in profusion, and also of the Florida Everglades. Bob Bakker with his interesting picture in which he captures a bear was one of the most enjoyable numbers.

The Rialto presented a series of interesting scenes from the Virgin Islands, released by Pathe, and included in its Animated Magazine scenes on the sheep industry on the San Clemente island, off the Californian coast. In this subject are shown the bathing and shearing of the sheep, each of which yields about ten pounds of wool or enough for three soldiers' uniforms, and also hundreds of sheep in the range. Patriotic scenes also formed a large part of the magazine.

Ten Montreal Exhibitors Are Fined

Court Imposes Penalties Ranging from Ten to Fifty Dollars for Admitting Unaccompanied Minors.

TEN more moving picture exhibitors of Montreal have been found guilty in the local police court of permitting unaccompanied minors to enter their theaters. Fines ranging from $10 to $50 were imposed. A week previous another assortment of Montreal exhibitors had been haled to court for the same alleged offence, and the activity of the authorities is credited to the agitation of Archbishop Bruchesi of the Roman Catholic Church against the admission of children to moving picture theaters.

In the last cases the following fines were imposed: Manager E. Thomas, Maple Leaf theater, $50; N. Law and N. Tabah of the Dominion theater, $25 each; Joseph Sperdakos, Alhambra theater, $10; N. Lawand; Lawand theater, $10; N. Berzanski, proprietor of the North Star and Boulevard theaters, $10 for each theater. The following were ordered to pay costs only: Joseph Boutara, Sol Saad and F. Maker of the Napoleon theater and Arthur Bourget of the National Biograph.

CHANGES AMONG CANADIAN THEATERS.

The Princess theater, Sherbrooke, Quebec, one of the theaters affected by the Sunday closing order of the Sherbrooke court, has been sold to J. A. Bayeur by R. L. Vallee. The theater has been temporarily closed for repairs and redecorations.

Along with the larger legitimate and vaudeville theaters of Montreal, a number of local moving picture theaters have closed down for the summer months. The largest of the picture theaters to close is the St. Denis. Another is the Rialto theater, which was managed during the past months by Mr. Allison. The Rialto will be reopened in a few weeks under new management. Messrs. Heller and Rosenberg, owners of the Victoria theater on Mount Royal avenue, Montreal, has also been closed for the summer months.

Another Montreal change affects the Canada theater. Manager Brady of this theater has enlisted in the Canadian army, and the management of the house has been taken over by Joe Block, manager of the Globe theater.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

As Mr. Middleton Sees It.

A. L. MIDDLETON, of the Queen, De Queen, Ark., is one of those managers who do not write their own obituary every time they write a letter to the trade press. Lately he offered to make the price ten cents instead of fifteen if the people would come frequently so as to keep the same amount of money coming into the house. They did not meet the offer, and so he not only went back to the old prices, but he put in an orchestra and better films two nights a week, and hoisted the price to a quarter and the war tax in addition. And he is making good with the stunt just as Steve Farrar and others made good. He persuades the people that they should be willing to pay more for stronger attractions a couple of nights a week. They are willing, as a rule, but they do not know it, and must be properly approached with convincing argument. Here is one of Mr. Middleton's program talks. There is no spread eagle lying, just plain facts that the patrons know to be facts:

AS PATRONAGE INCREASES

we respond with a better show. That's why Gray's Orchestra has been engaged to play at the Queen theater every Tuesday and Wednesday hereafter.

Because of our large seating capacity—because the people come out and occupy these seats, and because we know how to buy pictures we are delighted to present these big dollar attractions at an admission price of 25 cents.

We were unable, even with our large seating capacity, to handle the crowds on these big Wednesday night attractions, and that's why we decided to run them two days instead of one.

Now we have engaged Gray's Orchestra and put in four more big ventilating fans to insure perfect comfort for our patrons on the hottest nights, and no advance in prices, for we confidently expect still another increase in patronage.

We now have two first-class operators in the machine room, G. A. Proctor and Harry Wood, and we are calmly looking about to see if there is some other improvement we can make—something else we can do to add to the entertainment and pleasure of our patrons.

Don't imagine we are getting rich. Patronage is good. We are making money. But please notice that we are spending this money for your pleasure and entertainment—improving the show. Compare the equipment and the program at the Queen now with a year, a year and a half, and two years ago. Then try to imagine what it will be a year or two years ahead. If the good patronage keeps up we promise there will be still more improvements, for we expect to spend all we make that we don't invest in LIBERTY BONDS, and a decent living, on improvements at the Queen for your convenience and pleasure.

Yours to please,
A. L. MIDDLETON.

The most telling argument is found in that last paragraph. For eighteen months Mr. Middleton has been putting back into his house a portion of his profits. He is making a regular place out of it, and he has improved even in his advertising methods. If there were more men of his type there would be less pessimism.

Nicely Done.

Will Stewart, of the Princess, Eagle Grove, Ia., sends in an announcement he prepared for the opening of the house. It is a four-page sheet with a plate depression; regular invitation stock, neatly printed in readable script and nicely worded. It is an announcement and not an invitation, so he "respectfully announces" instead of "cordially invites," and names the prices. On the back he states the house policy, and the inner pages list the notable underlines. The only possible objection to be offered is that the printer has doubled up two titles to give "Ramona—France in Arms," which will give the impression that this is not the California Ramona, but a war play. By paying attention to the details of elegance Mr. Stewart starts off with the possible patrons properly impressed. It pays to do things just right.

The Kaiser and Charlie.

Edward Hyman uses cuts of the Kaiser and Chaplin for the front page of his Victoria (Buffalo) program with the explanation that the Kaiser is striving to conquer us all with might and Chaplin captures the world with fun and laughter. The combination of the two portraits is a striking one and gets attention for "The Beast of Berlin" and "A Dog's Life." Another good wrinkle in the Kaiser ad is the use of fists in the larger type pointing down to some eight point. It will get the smaller face read where otherwise it might be passed over. Mr. Hyman gives more attention to the make-up of his program than most managers, and he gets infinitely more out of his advertising on that account. He does not adopt one formal style and adhere to that. He changes almost every issue, and in any one issue he adapts the general style to the particular film he is announcing on the page. Program copy is not merely a case of writing down titles and some description. It is a matter of writing pulling advertisements if it is done properly. Mr. Hyman makes people want to see his offerings. He does not merely tell what attraction he will have on certain days. It takes more thought, but it brings results, and that is what counts. We did not get our usual copy on white paper of this issue, so we cannot reproduce some of his neat arrangements, but they are well worth while.

With Some Novel Touches.

Will J. Glaser, of the Grand, Faribault, Minn., sends in a batch of advertisements and advertising novelties. One consists of a set of four cards for "My Unmarried Wife." These are printed in green on one side and red on the other, the cards 2¼ by 3½. Each face carries a pat allusion to the story of the play or some epigram on marriage. Probably they are printed up in sets of four and cut apart afterward, at least that would be the most economical way. There is enough cleverness to the phrasing to cause the cards to be kept. Another novelty idea is a prescription that can be adapted to any program. The signature should not read "Dr. I. O. Dine," but rather "I. O. Dine, M. D." Where time permits it would be better to have the prescription proper written out in a legible hand and use as a cut. The office hours are the times of showing and the office the Grand theater. A dual program for the Grand and Empress is in blue on blue, so we cannot show it, but it is a monthly bill, the Grand on one side of the double middle and the Empress on the other with one set of dates in between serving both. This is better, for two houses, than having the date at the left. It is not only more convenient but it looks better, making a very attractive layout. In his newspaper work Mr. Glaser uses about two nines or three fours or fives. In the three two-column displays shown the middle display covers too much ground with three changes of program. That on the right gets a better display for two, and a still more effective layout is shown on the left with but one attraction to announce. The three-column strips are apparently confined to a single title and perhaps this fact determines the use of the broad instead of long space. The first cut shows a partial box and one trusting to the column rules, but both are large enough to stand up on the page. The second pair are both boxed in with rule, though here the use of portrait cuts would help gain display.

McCormick's.

Not even S. Barret McCormick got out very good advertising for Chaplin in "A Dog's Life," but he did the best he could with the material at hand. The trouble seems to be that the comedian wants to impress his ability as a pathetic actor upon a public that wants him in slapstick. Most of the cut copy for "A Dog's Life" seems to have played up the pathetic side, and Mr. McCormick worked along with this by praising the pathos. He got more real comedy out of "Blue Jeans," which was used on the same bill. This is a play of Indiana and naturally it appealed to Indianapolis audiences. The taking up of a tobacco advertisement catch phrase is particularly apt in connection with this old-time melodrama of a quarter century ago. He had better material to work with for "The Warrior," for the Maciste stunts make fine cut copy, but the best thing in this batch of advertising was in type. It can be adapted to any other film likely to be a sell out, and it convinces as fully as does Ralph Ruffner's "Try to Get In." It reads:

WARNING!

If you can't get in the Circle tomorrow the first man you meet Monday morning that was able to get in is going to say, "Have you seen The Warrior?" Then he's going to try and describe it to you and fall down just as bad as we are telling you about it, and he'll wind up by saying, "Well, anyway, don't miss it, it's the greatest thing that ever came over—and by the way, better take along some shock absorbers for the thrills and a set of weed chains so you won't skid out of your seat laughing at it."

For Mabel Normand he had some good cut copy and made effective use of it. The three displays shown are three columns wide and from 11 to 13 inches deep. Evidently Mr. McCormick is not superstitious. The display on the left is the better of the three, since the layout here permits the name of the star and the play to go across the three columns and get the full display. Copy could have been pulled in on the right to get the same result, but here the name is clear if not large, though it is detracted from by a bad choice of type for the naming of the support. A smaller face would have given greater prominence to the star and title as well. All three are good displays because the cuts get the attention and hold the interest until the reader begins to take in the type, yet all three advertisements are a bit too full of copy for the best results.

"Tarzan of the Apes" is another picture that was a clean-up through a well-planned advertising campaign. The subject suggests the use of tropical foliage for border and the artist has made good use of the suggestion, but the advertisement on the right shows that even here we get the horrible fuzzy lettering, though this is the first time we recall having seen this style of thing in an advertisement of the Circle. This intermittent lettering is becoming a nation-wide craze, and it is just as bad now as when it started. "Tarzan" is a story best advertised by description, and practically all of the advertisements for this attraction take up one feature of the film and enlarge upon it. This is vastly better than merely announcing the title and trusting to the popularity of the "Tarzan" books to get the patron in. Direct interest aroused at the moment is always better than the reference to something grown cold, but the description must be vivid and interesting of itself if it is to work. We don't know where Mr. McCormick gets his monkey talk from. It doesn't seem to be in the dictionary of Professor Garner, but that line at the top is as good as a cut for getting interest. It is worth noting that most of the plays are helped by a ballet or song production, a ballet going with "Tarzan" to heighten the suggestion of forest life.

But Get the Names Right.

The Mikadow theater, Manitowoc, Wis., sends in a broadside for Easter week (a bit late), printed on cheap stock, the sheet 20x24, folded once. It is striking, but it has been rather carelessly prepared. "Mary MacLaren" instead of Mary McLane, is announced in "Men Who Made Love to Me" instead of men who have made love, and the secondary line for "Jack and the Beanstalk" is "1,300 children in a giant 8½ feet tall." "In" and "and" have vastly different meanings. A little care in the proofreading would have saved this. It must be remembered that there are printers in the draft and new faces in the composing rooms, and more care than ever should be exercised.

Another "Bit" to Do.

Hand it to the Majestic, Grand Junction, Cal., once more. Charles Decker is distributing the corn-meal booklets of the Department of Agriculture with an advertisement of the theater imprinted upon the back. He wrote for three thousand copies, but received only 500, with an offer to send others direct to a list of names and addresses supplied. We think that the idea might have been amplified by providing blanks to be filled in by patrons unable to obtain a copy, to be sent in by the house. The clipping tells its own story:

By co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture the Majestic Theater has received 500 Farmers' Bulletin, No. 565, which will be given to every lady free as long as they last.

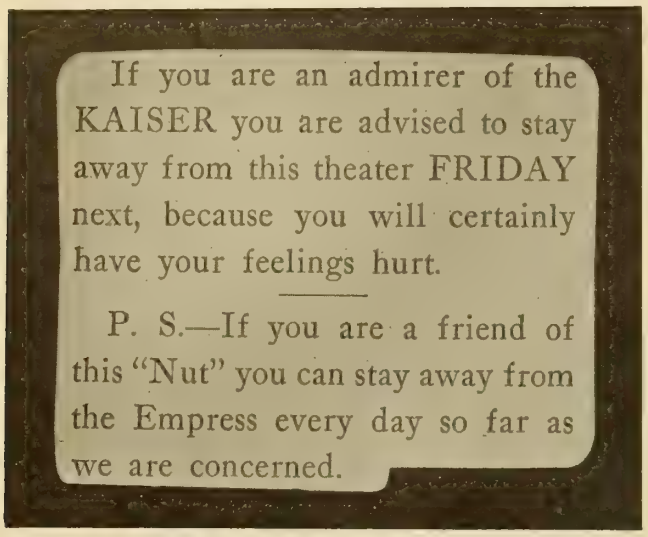
The Bulletin is a 28-page Booklet, containing 63 different receipts for the use of Corn Meal as a food and ways of using it.

Now that the food administration is only allowing six pounds of flour to each member of the family per month, this valuable little booklet should be a wonderful help to the housewives in meeting the difficult problems of cooking and baking to conserve wheat.

The department is glad to work in with local distributors and so is the Food Administration. If you cannot get booklets from one, you can probably get something similar from the other. Patrons do not realize that, and the suggestion of "official" connection is helpful to the house. Follow Mr. Decker in, now that he has shown the way, remembering that if you put an imprint on the books it should be a general house talk and not merely the announcement of a particular release. These cook books will be held around the house for a long time.

Mr. Bleich's Slides.

George A. Bleich, of the Empress, Ownesboro, Ky., sends in some slides that are evidently locally made, but so well done that we have asked him for details. We show one on The Kaiser. The postscript



If you are an admirer of the KAISER you are advised to stay away from this theater FRIDAY next, because you will certainly have your feelings hurt.
P. S.—If you are a friend of this "Nut" you can stay away from the Empress every day so far as we are concerned.

will bring a laugh and yet there is something back of the laugh. But we think we could call the Kaiser worse than a "nut." Another slide reads

Keep Your Pistol
In your pocket and don't shoot holes in our screen on Friday next when we show
"The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin."

We expect you to get mad, but don't take it out on our furniture and fixtures.

Another slide is for Mary Pickford in "The Little American," and here the same judicious appeal is made with

No 4th of July Celebration
Ever furnished half the patriotic thrills you will receive if you see Mary Pickford
in
"The Little American."

If it does not arouse and stir you then you are a poor patriot or—well, you don't just care.

From a dissection of one of the slides it would seem that Mr. Bleich uses printer's ink on the slides, probably by means of the roller scheme, but he gets unusually good results, and the finish of the slide is just as good as the wording of the copy.

Cuts for Educationals.

The Educational Films Corporation is issuing mats for its scenics and cartoon comedies. The cuts (which are sent out in mat form) are two inches wide and 2¼ long; perhaps a little too long for a small advertisement, but they fit nicely into larger layouts. Exhibitors are coming to realize that these interest pictures have a real pull with patrons and are giving them greater publicity. The mats issued will permit the showing to be improved without much cost to the Exhibitor. Another instance of real press work is the issuance of mats in three and four-column sizes of their Navy pictures and to go with a story on how cartoon comedies are made. Most editors would be glad to pay for this stuff. They certainly will appreciate getting it without charge and will give up valuable space cheerfully, for the story is written from a news-interest viewpoint. It's a step in the right direction.

Had an Extra.

Will Stewart, of the Princess, Eagle Grove, Ia., evidently believes in making his presence felt. For the opening of the house he got out a red ink extra, taking most of the front page for his announcement and advertisement. The issue seems to be the regular edition of the paper and not a special printing. There is another advertisement on the back page for a coming attraction, but advertising must be cheaper in the small towns than in the cities. We like the line "The small town house with the city program," but we are not so admiring of the stunt of the printer in announcing Hall "Cairne" and Miss "Risden." He should have read proof on himself.

A Bad Mix.

A recent program envelope also covers a circular of the opening of a new dairy in the vicinity of the theater. We think this is a bad scheme. It is all right to let the advertisement into the program itself, but such an enclosure cheapens the value of the house advertising and cannot but have a bad effect.

Owing to illness, Mr. Sargent will be unable to reply to any inquiries whether a return envelope accompanies the questions or not. No exceptions to this rule can be made, perhaps, for several months.

One of the Sinceres.

SOMETIMES men write for checks and never get them, and some men write for fame and fail in that, but the man who has some ability and more determination is apt to land somewhere, sometime. The other day we got a personal letter from an old reader, and while he was not trying to break into print, his comment has all the greater value from that fact. He was not trying to write something clever for publication. He was telling his own experience. In part he says:

> For the present I have found that I can express myself better in short stories, and I am just breaking in, although I have knocked at the editorial doors for the last five years. I do not write for money—though I take what I can get with avidity—I have by patience learned that it is unprofitable to do so. I write because I am in sympathy with this character or that. I imagine a great deal, and a part of that which is convincing and would have a parallel in the life of the ordinary man or woman I draw from and place upon paper that others may draw from it again. * * * So many writers want to know how to start. This is what I did after I had failed for three years at writing scenarios: I had been a railroad clerk, photographer and journalist. After much deliberation I got a job as usher in a photoplay theater. I saw pictures seven days a week, from noon to midnight. I got a chance to analyze them, and I did. More than that, I learned what the public thought, and it was not uncommon for a priest or a clergyman, a lawyer or a physician, a judge, a carpenter, or a bootblack to cast a comment into my hungry ears. I began to look at pictures from a different angle; to grasp some of the necessary help that was so easily gotten. I took a firmer hold of my pen as I sat down to my work and began to get letters along with rejections. My photoplays did not immediately begin to bring in remuneration, for the path of the photoplay writer is narrow, rocky and very long, yet that path can be made broad and smooth after a while.

It happened that advancement came and the writer is superintendent of one of the largest houses in one of the coast cities, but he still keeps on with his writing when time permits in spite of his advance along the managerial lines. He is getting ahead, but he keeps on writing because he has it in him to write. He writes for the love of the work, and the writer who does that is the one who finds the greatest success and the most permanent career. No one can do much without work and enthusiasm, for one cannot perform the work without the sustaining enthusiasm that keeps him at the task when seeming failure would discourage the mere check chaser.

Examine the histories of the leading writers and it will be found that invariably they have studied the technique of their work not alone from books but from the screen. They have examined and analyzed production. They know what effects to get and how to get them. They work with sureness and certainty. They know that there is something to the business other than merely sitting down and writing plays. They must know the whys and wherefores, and this comes more from the personal study of the screen than from any book, though a good text book is useful in directing the studies. And among the men who last you will find few who have not done years of preliminary work. That is the real answer. It is work plus time plus thought which brings success.

The Right Spirit.

The man who writes because he needs the money is not an author. The man who writes because he cannot help himself is more apt to prove such, though many who long to write never become recognized authors because they lack insight or education. Something within them urges them to write and they cannot resist the appeal, but instinct alone does not make the author, and a fair education plus a knowledge of the world is as necessary as ideas. We know many aspirants who would make good had they received a better education, but they did not have the chance in their youth, and the desire for expression is checked by an inability to give in words what the mind gives in thought. In other words they can think, but they cannot write. They at least are making a laudable effort and are to be encouraged, but the man who writes merely because he wants or needs the money will never make an author. He must have a higher source of inspiration than this or he cannot succeed. The other day a man announced he was going to write one story "because it was in him and had to come out." His was at least a better excuse than the man who writes one story and refuses to try another until he has sold the first and so has been assured that there really is money in the game. There never is any profit for such a man. There never will be.

De Mille Is Half Right.

In a press agent effusion from the west coast Cecil B. De Mille is made to say, in part, that the script writer is made and not born. According to the press agent Mr. De Mille has said

> "There is one important idea about scenario writers that I should like to counteract. That is that they are born and not made. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The man who does excellent work in writing scenarios is not a man who was born to the job, but one who has studied the craft painstakingly and learned to say things in the best way.
> "I say this because of the character of the scenarios that scenario editors and directors receive from most writers. They reveal potential talent, these scripts, but insufficient training.
> "Suppose a man were to try to design a house without training, just because he happened to live in a house, and because he had seen a great many houses. He'd probably make a bad job of it. Yet thousands of persons, some of them with writing ability, think they can write scenarios merely because they have seen numerous moving pictures. The result is a mass of poor work."

We think Mr. De Mille would not have said just this. We do not believe that he would, for a moment, contend that any person may be educated to become an acceptable writer. He must know that the faculty of imagination is inborn and not to be implanted through education. The author is first born and then he is educated. Both the inherent ability and the developing education are necessary. With but one the author is incomplete. The born author, without education, is merely a blunderer who irritates because his ideas are so good and his developments are so poor. On the other hand the man who is merely educated, without possessing inherent imagination, is no more than a clever but shallow trickster, working with second-hand ideas toward mechanical effects. There is no real base to his work. It is all artificial and impermanent. Mr. De Mille announces that he is constantly on the lookout for new authors. If what he says is true, he has only to put a few strange hands under long-time contracts, have them educated and then use their plays—but we do not think that Mr. De Mille really says what his press agent says he said.

Ones and Fives.

Universal is again announcing a return to one-reel dramas. It is only an announcement thus far, but sooner or later the change must come, even though it means more trouble to the exchange and exhibitor, the one in handling, and the other in advertising the product. The five-reel story should contain as much plot as the full evening play. Not all stories do, but all stories should. From fifteen to twenty film plays are released each week. It is a notable week on Broadway when five new plays are presented within seven days, and it is improbable that all five of those plays will succeed. Were there a demand for fifteen new plays a week each season of forty weeks, the dramatic stage would reach a low ebb through lack of proper material, yet the much newer enterprise of photoplay demands an excess of fifteen new plots each week. Naturally, some of them must be poor, and many worse than that. On the other hand it is easier to turn out an idea to hold the interest for fifteen minutes than for seventy-five. There are more good short stories than there are good novels, and the short stories give greater pleasure. The one and two-reel film plays are the short stories of the screen. Give more of these and the public will be better pleased once they are re-educated to an appreciation of the short story. It is merely a matter of fashion and precedent. Exhibitors welcomed the longer plays at first because they were stronger and because they were easier to advertise. Now only the latter advantage holds, for many five to seven-part stories are but one-reel ideas padded out, and the public is tired of the inexpert padding. The trouble is that exhibitors will not change policy until assured of a continuous supply of good one-reels, and producers will not make them until assured of a profitable market. There the matter stands, but sooner or later the one-reel must come back—and so will many former patrons.

Wide Appeal.

Be careful to base your stories upon matters of wide appeal. Too many writers use as a foundation some local custom that requires too much explanation to make it clear to the country at large. Make a sharp distinction between local and general customs.

The New Davy Crockett.

Be sure you are right—then write it.

Takes Time.

Rome was not built in a day, nor a five-reel feature in twenty minutes.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Operators' Notice.

I am about to make a trip as follows:

Starting April 5 or 6 to Chicago via Albany, Schenectady, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Toronto, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit and Battle Creek, returning via Ft. Wayne, Bucyrus, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Philadelphia and Trenton in the interests of the industry. It will be a pleasure to stop in any city on this route and address operators and exhibitors. My subject will be "The presentation of the silent drama upon the screen," which will include all things allied with projection, but will deal particularly with the terrific waste everywhere present in the practice of today.

It will be necessary that I hear either from operators or exhibitors at once if they desire me to stop. I will make short side trips from the proposed route if necessary. All I ask is a representative meeting of operators and exhibitors. There will be no expense to you except such as may be incurred in making the local arrangements.

F. H. RICHARDSON.

THIS IS IMPORTANT!

As editor of this department I have been requested to prepare a paper to be read at the next meeting of the Society of Projection Engineers, subject: "The Operating Room and Its Requirements." As some of the recommendations that I will make therein may be embodied in the standards adopted by the Society, I would be glad to hear from projectionists as to their views concerning the following: (A) Smallest permissible size of room, remembering that if the recommendation is adopted as "standard," then in due course of time many projection rooms will be built to conform. (B) What should be the official designation of the room? Booth is absurd; also it is a misnomer, as you may see by reference to a dictionary. "Projection Room" is my own suggestion. (D) What beside projection should be permitted inside the room? (E) Of what should shelves be constructed? (F) Should or should not a work bench be permitted inside the room, and if so of what should it be made? (G) What standard of ventilation should be set up? What should be minimum size of observation ports? (H) What forms of construction should be permitted, i. e., brick, concrete, hollow tile, asbestos board, etc.? (I) What should be the standard as to the floor? (J) What should be the standard as to fire shutters and fuse links for same? (K) Such other points as may occur to you, which you think should receive attention.

Now, gentlemen, this matter is of IMPORTANCE TO YOU. I must have this paper in the hands of the Committee on Papers not later than August 15th, hence if your suggestion or suggestions are to receive consideration it is absolutely necessary that they reach me not later than August First.

Now let's see how many of you really have enough interest to go to the trouble of setting forth your ideas. It's up to you.

He Takes Liberties.

Duane D. Signor, Cazenovia, New York, says:

> As an exhibitor of motion pictures in a small town I am taking the liberty of asking your advice concerning a trouble I am having, viz.: the picture has a tendency to jump. As shutter is adjusted as correctly as possible I do not understand where the trouble lies. It may be in the sprocket wheel which guides the film; I do not know. I am new at the business. In doubt as to whom to consult, I came upon your department in the Moving Picture World. Perhaps I am out of order in expecting an answer, but shall hope for a reply of some sort.

You are entirely in order, Friend Signor. That is one of the things this department is for. You are in a small town—too small to enable you to employ a competent projectionist. You are doing an excellent work in providing that little community with legitimate amusement, hence deserve all the aid we can give. In the first place, I would very strongly advise you to immediately send four dollars for a Handbook. See advertisement at end of Projection Department. It is precisely what you need, and need badly. As to the jump, it may be due to many things. First, be sure the intermittent sprockets (all of them, for that matter, but particularly the intermittent) are perfectly clean. Any accumulation of gum and dirt on its face is apt to make the picture jump. Second, if the intermittent sprocket is clean and the jump occurs regularly four times to every revolution of the crank, or of the crank-shaft if machine is motor driven, then the trouble lies in one of three things, viz.: intermittent sprocket itself not true (very rare in these later days), sprocket shaft bent or bushings carrying shaft badly worn. If the jump is a general unsteadiness and the picture moves up slightly on the screen when you increase speed of projector, then the tension springs on gate are not set tight enough. In increasing tension be very sure not to overdo it. See Handbook, page 463. Also jump may be caused by undercut sprocket teeth, or badly hooked sprocket teeth. Remedy, new intermittent sprocket. Jump may also be due to using very old films, in which the sprocket holes are in very bad condition. If none of these things enable you to locate your trouble, then write again, describing the "jump" in exact detail. The setting of the revolving shutter has nothing to do with the picture jumping.

The Mazda Lamp.

G. H. Stickney, Illuminating Engineer, Assistant to Sales Manager, Harrison Lamp Works, comments on a recent editorial of this department as follows:

> I have read, with interest, issue April 20, page 391, article titled: "Important to Incandescent Users," regarding careful adjustment of the spherical mirror in connection with motion picture lamps. The material for this article was evidently taken from literature put out by lamp companies in an effort to emphatize the importance of mirror setting, but the greatest reason for such accuracy lies in the additional screen illumination made possible by accurate mirror adjustment, rather than for the reason ascribed. The relatively small effect an improper adjustment has on lamp life is a secondary consideration, and I think both these items have been over estimated and given more importance than they deserve. The paragraph, as it appears, leads one to believe that, should the mirror be so set that the image falls directly on the filament coils themselves, then the lamp will fail almost immediately upon turning on the current. If this were true, then a prospective user of Mazda lamps for projection might well hesitate to make the trial, since, how could he tell before lighting the lamp just where the image would fall? No, the lamp will NOT fail immediately, or even very soon, should the image happen to fall directly on the filament coils themselves, though the life of the lamp MAY be shortened somewhat. As a matter of fact, in the thirty ampere, 750 watt lamp, more than half the reflected image of necessity falls upon the filament coils, because these coils are .085" in diameter and are separated by .02", whereas the reflected image of the coils also is .085" in diameter, therefore, with the centers of these images exactly between the actual filament coils, approximately 76 per cent. of the image, of necessity, falls directly on the coils.
> With the 600 watt, 20 ampere lamp the coil is .068" in diameter, and the space between only .043", hence about 36 per cent. of the image falls upon the coils. Tests with a 750 watt lamp, working without a mirror, showed that the temperature, with 30 amperes flowing, was 3,100° C. The screen lumens (amount of light projected through the motion picture machine lens system) (Machine running or standing still? This would make a difference of approximately 50 per cent. as applied to actual screen light, though it would not in the least affect the actual experiment in hand.—Ed.) were 420. With the mirror so set that centers of reflected coil images came exactly between the actual coils, and the current maintained at 30 amperes, filament temperature was only increased by 80 per cent. total temperature 3,180° C., whereas screen lumens were raised to 650, with mirror so set that center of reflected images fell directly on center of filament coils, current maintained at 30 amperes, temperature was found to be 3,205° C.
> You will thus see that, as the lamp is designed and tested to operate with mirror correctly set, at 3,180° C., the worst possible condition obtainable, i. e., with image superimposed directly upon filament, gives an increase of but 25° C, which is a rise of slightly less than 8/10 of 1 per cent. Such an increase may be expected to shorten the life of a lamp in the neighborhood of 6 per cent. In other words, under the worst possible condition as to mirror adjustment the lamp life would be 94 hours instead of 100. The screen illumination, on the other hand, falls approximately 10 per cent.
> WARNING: The placing of the mirror image on or between the filament coils should not be confused with correct alignment of mirror on the optical axis of the lens system. Tests have shown that with the mirror but 1/10" off the optical axis, screen illumination may fall as much as 16 per cent., hence very careful adjustment is necessary if maximum screen illumination is to be had.

It seems what is objected to is not my calling attention to the extreme importance of proper mirror adjustment, but the reason I have advanced therefor. If the article in question conveys the idea that superimposition of image on coil will act to immediately destroy the filament, then I owe the Mazda folks an apology, for I certainly meant to convey no such impression. What I had in mind was the fact (for it is a fact) that the Mazda lamp is made to last a certain, given time, when operated at a given temperature, that temperature being produced by its rated amperage. Now, if we do anything, such as to superimpose image on coil, to raise that temperature, then we automatically shorten the life of the lamp. But I had been led to suppose the matter was very much more serious than the tests cited by Mr. Porter show it to be. I must take exception, however to the remark of Brother Porter where he says, "The worst condition obtainable." The mere superimposing of filament image on filament image, with amperage at normal, is by no means the worst condition, because it may well be, and very frequently is, the condition that amperage itself is over normal. I also must question the "Life MAY be shortened somewhat," substituting "Life certainly will be shortened somewhat," because anything which raises temperature shortens filament life.

On the whole, however, it appears from the tests cited that we may very greatly modify our views as to possible filament damage through improper mirror adjustment. This does not, however, materially lessen the real importance of very accurate mirror adjustment. It merely changes the prime reason for it from filament damage to conservation of light. And, anyhow, I am rather well pleased that I made the mistake, because it has served to pry loose another bit of very valuable information, which has come in the best possible form.

And while I am at it, J. T.Caldwell, of the National Lamp Works, Nela Park, Cleveland, Ohio, also takes a punch at the editorial goat by calling our attention to what he very kindly says was "evidently a typographical error," but which was, in reality, a plain piece of editorial carelessness—oh yes, editors sometimes get careless, too, strange as it may seem. He says:

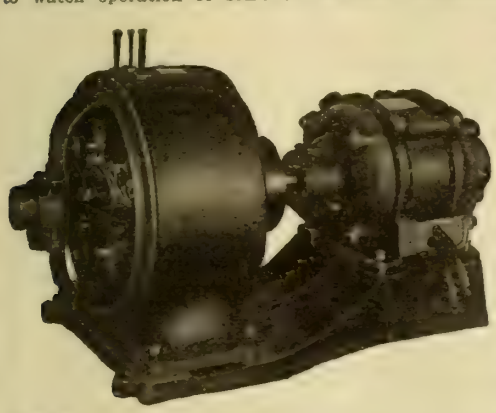
> In article titled, "He Horns In," you refer to incandescent projection lamps costing $7.00 each. List price on the 20 ampere, 28-50 volt, T120 bulb Mazda lamp is $6.00, and on the 30 ampere, 25 volt, T-20 bulb lamp it is $6.75. You also refer to the 750 watt lamp being operated at a temperature which will burn out the filament in 100 hours when 20 amperes of current flows. The current capacity of the 750 watt lamp is 30 amperes, not 20. I take opportunity of calling your attention to these two points that you may have the information; also that the projectionist may not get wrong ideas as to the lamps.

I solemnly promise to be more careful in future. Incidentally I intend to try to get a meeting of the engineering departments of the three big lamp works, viz.: the National, Harrison and Westinghouse, in the near future, that we may try to arrive at a basis for harmonizing the claims of the companies as regards Mazda lamps. What this department seeks is real information as to the Mazda projection lamp, its possibilities and limitations. We desire to aid, if we may, in its development, but to prevent the publication of claims which cannot be substantiated, which is hard to do, with each company making different claims for what are essentially the same goods.

"A Corking Good Machine."

On my Eastward journey, I made my initial visit to the City of Fort Wayne, the home of the Fort Wayne Works of the General Electric Company, to which is delegated the manufacture of current rectifying devices for motion picture projection other than Mercury Arc Rectifiers. I shall always be pleased with myself that this visit was made; this for several reasons. In the first place it resulted in adding to my list of acquaintances and friends S. P. Hirsch, commercial engineer in the fractional horsepower motor department; T. W. Behan, manager of the commercial department; A. J. Sorem, designing engineer of compensarcs; R. J. Hoffman, foreman of the general testing department, and Stewart Herring, tester of compensarcs—the latter being also a practical operator and a member of the Local Union 466 of Moving Picture Machine Operators, a bunch of bright, brainy men, all members in good standing of the Ancient and Accepted Order of Good Fellows.

Under the guidance of Mr. Hirsch it was my privilege to make a tour of the works. I have visited many factories, but here it fell to my lot to watch operation of some of the most interesting machines I have ever seen. The Fort Wayne Works manufacture many small motors, and some of the machines used in armature winding and field winding seem almost human in their intelligence.



The company employees about 4,000 men, women and girls. Its machinery and buildings are thoroughly up-to-date. The real purpose of my visit to the plant, however, and in fact my stop in Fort Wayne was to examine and test the new type A. C. to D. C. Compensarc, which has been on the market for quite some time and is meeting with much favor from exhibitors and operators. The electrical characteristics of the new type Fort Wayne Compensarc follow very closely along the lines of the well known characteristics of the Transverter which has won such favor during the past few years. In starting the second lamp for change-over the new compensarc doubles its voltage, while the amperage remains to all intents and purposes the same. The machine is of what is known the "constant current type." The arcs are, by the manipulation of a single switch, placed in series with each other for change over. In other words, in order to make the change over the projectionist merely moves a conveniently located enclosed switch, which is a part of the outfit, first having brought the carbons of the idle lamp into contact with each other. The movement of the switch places the two arcs in series so that when the carbons of the second lamp are separated and the second arc struck the two arcs are burning simultaneously in series with each other. This operation does not alter the amperage delivery of the compensarc. Instead of the amperage doubling the voltage doubles, so that if we have one arc operating at 55 volts, 50 amperes, we would have two arcs operating at 110 volts, or thereabouts, and 50 amperes. I made tests on change over, and found that, although the machine was in the rough, taken off the factory floor and not as yet even tested, the amperage variation was only about two when the second arc was struck, and this is fine enough regulation for any one.

Another test I made was as follows: I set the arc at 52 volts and 30½ amperes, and then let it burn until the arc voltage reached 70. The amperage changes during this test were as follows: At 60 volts (a rise of 8 volts from the start) the amperage reading was 41, a rise of 1½ amperes. At 66 volts the amperage was 43, a rise of 14 volts, and only 3½ amperes. At 70 volts the amperage was 43½, a rise of 1½ amperes from the last test, and a rise of 4 volts. This is, I think, as good a showing of the constant current characteristics as any one need ask for. The machine at the time was working at considerable over-load. It will run a matter of 5 minutes pulling both arcs, or in a pinch longer, which is ample for all practical purposes such as the burning in of craters, etc.

I did not personally make an electrical efficiency test, but the company claims an overall efficiency of 63 per cent. for the single phase, and 70 per cent. for the two and three phase machines. This is for a 35 ampere lamp at 55 volts. For other currents and arc voltages the efficiency will vary, so the company claims, from 60 to 72 per cent. I am not so much interested in the exact efficiency of the machine as I used to be, because I find that not in one case in a hundred does a motor generator set deliver its maximum efficiency if it has been in the operating room for even as much as 30 days, which is rather a sad commentary on the skill and knowledge of the men in charge of these machines.

The new type Fort Wayne A. C. to D. C. Compensarc occupies a moderate amount of floor space, and is equipped with steel cabinet panel arranged for conduit wiring and two short circuit switches—one to be mounted on each projection machine. With each machine is sent a very complete instruction book covering its operation and care. The machine is rigid in construction, and the fact that it is put out by the Fort Wayne Works is sufficient guarantee of mechanical excellence.

From the tests made I am glad to say I can approve heartily of the Fort Wayne A. C. to D. C. Series Type Compensarc, which is the endorsement and recommendation of the projection department.

Motor Dope.

From Massachusetts comes the following:

> We have just installed a new Power's motor drive machine, and I must have a special license to operate it. In this state, in order to secure such a license the projectionist must not only know the projection machine, but must have some knowledge of motors; that is to say, the various types, their parts, care, etc., On page 506 of the Handbook you give detailed, illustrated instructions on Power's Speed Control, but there is nothing as to the motor itself. Have you a fourth edition containing this information, or can you tell me where it may be obtained?

No, there is no fourth edition. I did not include motors, because that subject requires a book to itself. You have committed the error so very many projectionists do, viz.: waited until you are in actual, dire need of information and knowledge every projectionist should equip himself with as an integral part of his equipment, before making any effort to acquire it. I would recommend that you purchase "The Electric Motor," by Burns, published by Joseph J. Branch & Company, 608 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill. Am not sure as to price. Send $2.00 and tell them to return any balance there may be, or send $1.00 and ask them to send parcel post C. O. D. for balance. And next time don't wait until the last minute before starting to study such things as you may be called upon at any time to take charge of. That is not the way the really successful man does business.

Preddy Gets Into the Game.

Our old friend, Walter G. Preddy, that Prince of Good Fellows, who deals in motion picture supplies out in San Francisco, says:

> Dear Friend Richardson: Note that occasionally you are asked, through the department, as to who is putting out Mazda lamp outfits for projection. Well, we are doing quite a bit in that line, and wish to place our name before you as a manufacturer of such apparatus. We hope to receive some of your consideration.

You may just bet your last and only collar button that you will, friend Preddy. Why? Well, because I've known Preddy for quite some several years, and he is one of the squarest men in the business. I haven't seen his Mazda lamp outfit, but I'll back Preddy up to satisfy a customer or give him his coin back. Walter is a friend of mine; also, he is on the level, and that last is the best recommendation any living man can possibly have.

From Texas.

G. A. Yager, Vernon, Texas, who expects soon to be with the colors, writes, in part, as follows:

> Desire to call your attention to article in The Electrical World, April 13 issue, titled "Light Projection with Gas-filled Lamps," by R. P. Burrows and J. T. Caldwell. Would very much like to see it reprinted in the department and commented on by you. Claim is made therein that present tendency is to decrease screen illumination. Is this a fact? If so, it is the first time I have heard of it. The article agrees with you as to permissible size of picture with Mazda lamp projection. It also says the Mazda does away with the "objectionable flicker common with the arc lamp." It also says the prismatic lens of the Fresnel type utilizes a 76-degree solid angle of light, as against a 45-degree solid angle of light from a condenser used with an arc lamp. If this is so, then why is not the type named used with the arc lamp? The article lays great stress on the fact that mirror should be so focused that it will not reflect the light back on the filament, in order to get a solid light source, but say nothing about the improper condition shortening life of lamp. With regard to left hand machine, I am not at all certain it would work out well. It might simply offer excuse for a smaller operating room, and Heaven knows they are small enough now. A projectionist may work between his machines as they are now, except when threading, or when film is in such bad shape that he has to be continually resetting loops. Are the papers read at the meeting of the Society of Projection Engineers to be printed in booklet form? What is the address of St. Louis local? Want to get into union if I may, but they are not as a rule very good at answering letters. Expect soon to be working for Uncle Samuel, but intend to continue to study projection, for I know an awful bunch of knowledge has thus far eluded me. Most likely I have demonstrated that fact in this letter, but I find the best way to get at a thing is to expose your ignorance and trust to one who knows for enlightenment.

No, brother Yager, you have not exposed any alarming ignorance. In fact, your letter is indicative of a wide-awake, progressive mind. As to the union, you must join the one in whose jurisdiction you are, and that is the one nearest to you in actual miles, which might be Oklahoma City, Dennison, Sherman or Ft. Worth. A reliable (official) map, such as your county officers should possess, and a scale, will determine the matter. Address of locals are as follows: Oklahoma City L. U. 380, Harry Baker, secretary, Box 380; Sherman, Texas, Ed Bonham, secretary, 1111 West Houston street, Local 468; Dennison, Texas, L. U. 280, W. T. Looney, secretary, Box 228; Ft. Worth, Texas, L. U. 330, V. Wood, secretary, Box 543. I am sure you will get courteous reply from them all. As to the Mazda, I do not wish to discuss it very much right now. Am to have a meeting with the engineering departments of the three lamp companies in early June. Will have more to say after that. Will, however, say this: Modern photography demands brilliant illumination to do it full justice. There is tendency to reduce abnormal and largely useless amperage, but slight tendency, if any, to reduce actual screen illumination, except where slight increase is had at absurdedly out-of-proportion cost (excess amperage). I do not think my friends, Burrows and Caldwell, referred to arc flicker. When illumination is decreased the flicker due to revolving shutter is automatically decreased, which is equivalent to the well understood proposition that as you increase screen brilliancy you also increase tendency to flicker. Would rather not discuss the lens matter—yet, except to say that very much of the matter lies in ability to bring the Mazda light source closer to lens than is possible with arc. As to mirror focusing, would refer you to soon-to-be-published article, "The Mazda Lamp." As to left hand machines, I hope the intelligence of the worth-while theater managers has reached a plane where they understand at least something of the importance of a reasonable size projection room, and that they have ceased to regard its walls as a mere housing for certain machinery. Yes, the papers will be in pamphlet form. This department will advise you when they are ready for distribution, or you can write C. Francis Jenkins, President S. P. E., 712, Eleventh street, N. W., Washington, D. C., asking that a copy be sent you by post. Send 50 cents stamps. Any balance will be returned. Price heretofore has been 25 cents.

Trouble With Motor Drive.

J. Lindsey, McGregor, Texas, is having trouble with his motor drive. He sets it forth as follows:

> Have a Power's 6-A and have trouble with the fiber bushings in which the fiber disc shaft runs. Motor runs fairly cool, but this shaft gets very warm. Bushings seem to start melting and then the shaft sticks, stopping the motor altogether. Up to now have been unable to locate the trouble. Would appreciate your advice very much. I just couldn't do without the "World" or the Handbook. Would like to see the questions and answers put into book form. Referring back to the trouble, both armature and fiber disc shafts seem to be in perfect alignment; also fiber disc seems to be fairly true and smooth. Makes no undue amount of noise when running.

Many thanks for your kinds words of appreciation of the "World" and the book. Delay in reply due to absence from city. Sorry. As for the bushings "melting," why fiber bushings cannot melt. What you see is the grease with which the material is impregnated frying out under the action of heat. The trouble is most likely due to one of two things, viz.: (A) field coils burned out, which causes the current to go through the armature, with very high speed as a result. Have local electrician test field coils of your motor. (B) Disc wheel loose on shaft. You can determine this item for yourself. I think you will find your trouble in one of these two things. If not, then you will have to crank by hand while you send the speed control to the factory, or to a competent repair man for examination and adjustment.

His Goat Captured.

O. J. Parker, Sherman, Texas, is having trouble with his goat, as follows:

> Am sending samples of carbons which have gotten my angora. Looks to me like fault in manufacture. You will notice a hole in the core, which same causes a brown ghost on the screen. To make certain it was not in the optical train (the ghost trouble, I mean) I have had the lamphouse back as far as 20 inches, using a 6½-7½ condenser combination and a 6-inch projection lens. Project a 12-foot picture with 40 amperes D. C. This defect seems to be worse in the late carbons. In the older carbons I found maybe two or three bad ones to the bundle. My manager just got a shipment, and about half of them seem to be as per samples. Same trouble occurs whether ⅝ cored or ¼-inch solid lower is used. Yes, I use the solid below, though it makes a fellow keep his hand on the trigger all right. But, as you say, that is what we are there for. In my opinion the light is the main thing in projection, and I have been studying hard for six years past that I might some day be master of the arc lamp. I have also studied the other points involved in projection, and have certainly learned one thing anyhow, viz.: that I need to study more. Some of the other men here are having the same trouble with carbons. In some cases two or three inches of the core will just "pour out." Could that be caused by dampness? Would like you to pass judgment on the matter. In closing, wish to extend to you congratulations on the good being done by both the department and the handbook. My bookcase contains a Handbook, a set of Hawkins' Electrical Guides, the Question Booklets and a Moving Picture World each week, all of which I am very proud of.

And well you may be, brother Parker, since it shows you to be a progressive man. Most decidedly moisture could not cause the core to come out in any such way. I cannot, of course, say whether the trouble is due to faulty core mixture or lack of proper pressure in forcing the core in. It could hardly be air bubbles, because the hole seems to be fairly continuous. I will forward samples and your letter to manufacturer, suggesting that your present faulty carbons be replaced by perfect ones. In any event the prevalence of the fault shows pretty rotten inspection at the factory. My regards to the Sherman men. They are a live-wire bunch. It is a real pleasure to be of assistance to the men of local 468. Incidentally, has brother Moon got lost in the clouds?

Movie Man's Bible.

T. E. MacInnis, Port Morien, N. S., arises to remark:

> Enclosed find postoffice money order for year's subscription to the Moving Picture World. Had it on trial for six months, and find I can't get along without it. It surely is the movie man's Bible. Please have Mr. Richardson publish, or mail me address of Independent Movie Supply Company! Was much interested in his description of their new electric light plant, published recently in the Projection Department.

With regard to Brother MacInnis' views of the Moving Picture World, why the man is absolutely right. We compliment him on his good judgment, which we know is good, because it coincides with our own. Har-r-umph! Far be it from us to, etc.! The Independent has been requested to forward to Friend MacInnis full description, etc., of their light plant.

Projectionists Organizing.

This department has in the past acted as intermediary by referring to the I. A. headquarters many inquirers who asked of it instructions as how to proceed to organize. Many unions, some of them of goodly size, have resulted. Just within the past few weeks the men of one middle-west city and one western mining district have asked our aid in this respect. Both were promptly referred to headquarters, and we have no doubt that organizations will result.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON.

Notice.

QUESTIONS regarding music, addressed to this department, will receive a carbon copy of the department's reply by mail, when 4 cents are enclosed. Special replies by mail on matter which cannot be answered in this column $1.00.

Getting Together.

FOR many moons we have diligently dilated upon the urgent necessity for closer co-operation between the musical director and the picture director. We have heartlessly harped upon the discrepancy of interpretation and consistently called for some action that would bring a closer unity of purpose. Motion picture directors themselves are coming forward and strongly advocating a conference with the musician. These directors realize that the leader can ruin all his painstaking preparations if it is not made clear what the underlying motive really means.

Exhibitors have expressed a keen desire to have unnecessary flashbacks and superfluous scenes eliminated from the picture in order that it may become more adaptable to music. The picture is the thing that they are showing, but without good music it cannot successfully be screened for their patrons. There are some rabid reformers that insist that pictures should fit the music, a reversion of the old conditions. This is going too far. Music can never dictate to pictures. We cannot expect the producer to first consider each scene as to its adaptabilty for music.

The time has come when music service plays as important a part in winning the exhibitor as any other form of service. We cannot say that it supersedes other forms, but every live manager considers his musical program as carefully as his lobby display or publicity matter. Every producer knows that he must have some sort of music service, and therefore a competent musician must prepare it for him. In preparing cue-sheets or scores he will naturally embody in them his personal impressions, and if left to himself will interpret the picture in his own way.

When he is doing piece work in a projection room, sometimes under adverse conditions, and always a bit hurried, he cannot give the concentration needed to turn out a good musical suggestion sheet. He enters the atmosphere of the picture totally unprepared for what is to be shown, and leaves with but a general idea of the dominant motive depicted.

There are good directors. fair directors, and poor directors of pictures. Each has his own ideas and ideals. Each works with but one object in view—to produce a masterpiece of film craft that will redound to the credit of his employers and himself. We have continually heard the howls from the bigger ones when an exhibitor cuts his film to suit the time limit of the theater. He claims that the house manager cannot cut it without killing it. Music can kill it more effectively. If the projection is bad in a house showing their picture the director will complain bitterly that his contrasts are not brought out properly, and the picture loses its color value. Music can make the picture appear positively lifeless in color.

Bearing these facts in mind and taking it for granted that the producer wants appreciation for his good pictures, why not bring the two directors together? It will mean co-ordination of picture and music that will tend to more clearly define the underlying principles involved. The day is not far distant when manufacturers will have their own musical department. Service today means more than it has ever meant as a talking point in feature selling and real music service would be hailed with wild enthusiasm by every theater owner in the country.

Consistency is another word that is well received by the buyers of film, providing the producer lives up to it. After spending thousands to make a picture, hundreds in exploitation of it, and carrying a first rate publicity department, strong in distribution, lavish with advertising and lobby display is it consistent to spend a measly few dollars for a cue-sheet and call it musical service? Wake up and look this music question squarely in the face. Later it may menace your very existence if you ignore it now.

Europe is the home of music, and bolstered up with musical lore it will naturally emphasize the musical phase of pictures, when, after the war, it enters into active commercial competition. At present we have all the advantages, but those advantages will only be useful while competitors do not see them. The instant they realize that we have deliberately overlooked or neglected to accept them they will take them away by utilization. There is a national side to this question that should appeal to all on account of its future commercial value.

Music at the Strand.

Warm weather always has its effect upon musicians and artists, as well as unduly influencing the pitch of their instruments. Summer is extremely trying to those that play pictures. The necessary grind is made so much harder by climatic conditions that it is necessary to alleviate the strain as far as possible to obtain the best musical results.

Mr. Harold Edel, always considerate of his musicians, has placed on his bill for the week of June 2 a number that required no music. "Capturing the Bear," depicted upon the screen and told by Bob Bakker, proved a distinct innovation. We could quarrel with Bob about his "lecture," but after all a fellow can't be a bear hunter and a college professor at the same time, so we must be satisfied, for the picture itself was mighty interesting.

"Prunella" was the feature shown, and little Marguerite Clark dug deeper into the hearts of the picture fans by her beautiful delineation of this well known character. The musical setting was all that could be asked for. It kept the light fairy atmosphere throughout, yet made the action live. The pizzicato effect in imitation of the guitar was well done, and so exactly timed that it did not overlap the scene. We don't know just how this was done, but would suggest to others that where a pizzicato effect must be made for a short duration and then played legato the proper method to pursue should be as follows. Select an Allegretto number in which the melody largely runs to arpeggios or broken chords. Play it with the bow until the signal is given for plucking the strings, and play pizzicato until the signal is given to return to the bowing. This method will perfectly synchronize the orchestral action with the action depicted.

"Loin du Bal" played for the stage dancing was exactly what was needed, but Carl Reiser, who was conducting at the time, did not take the tempo of the dance, which jumbled things a bit. The Chinese number, following, marked the change of location splendidly, and the organ interlude for the few seconds of irrelevant action brought this piece in on time. By the way, the manner in which the organ cooperates with the orchestra could profitably be followed by other picture theaters.

Mlle. Zentay, violinist, played the "Carmen Fantasy" as arranged by Hubay. As an exhibition of dexterity and calesthenic exercise it was wonderful. There was a tendency toward poor intonation, and her bowing was certainly not what one would expect from Miss Zentay. The results were good, but like one who can typewrite speedily and accurately with one finger the method was wrong.

The overture was Flotow's "Martha," one of those good old favorites. "Martha," an opera in four acts, was first presented in Vienna in 1847. This opera was an extension of Lady Henrietta's ballet pantomime in three acts. It was first presented in Paris in 1884, and presented in New York in 1852 at the Metropolitan Opera House. The scenes of the opera are laid in Richmond during the reign of Queen Anne, but the Italian version places the action in the 15th century and the French in the 19th century. The success of the opera is principally due to the gay action and effective combination of the solo parts. "Martha" is Flotow's masterpiece, and few operas have been more frequently performed.

Mr. Spirescu conducted this number with a keen desire to have it over with. Because of this spirit the early part of the overture suffered, and the audience suffered too. Of course, the fact that it was the second last performance of the week may have had something to do with such carelessness, for it is the most natural thing in the world that a tempermental director should become sick of a piece that he has played all week. At the same time if his men felt the same way and gave in to that feeling, the director would have just cause to read the riot act.

Few directors realize their responsibility toward their players, audience, and employers. The position is most difficult to fill, because the entire success of the musical program devolves upon the conductor, while at the same time he must hold the confidence of his men, and a pleasing personality must be reflected back to his listeners.

Taking it by and large the program was neat and well chosen for hot weather enjoyment. Mr. Edel always has some new lighting effects which are pleasing, and his back drops used during the overtures are looked forward to with keen anticipation because they are always novel.

Music At the California Theater, San Francisco.

The California theater in San Francisco, in procuring Edward Benedict, the noted organist, to assist their already fine Symphony orchestra, has indicated its progressive spirit in the showing of pictures. Mr. Benedict inherits his wonderful ability from his father, who was probably one of the best organists of his day. All his life the son has lived with the organ. The atmosphere was entirely cluttered with it, so we can naturally expect big things from him.

"In music," he says, "one must appeal to the consciousness of the multitude, and to the masses minor strains with powerfully accented rythms and with frequent use of the unvocal 'augmented second' interval invariably suggests crime just as to lovers of Beethoven and Handel six-eight rythm suggest green fields and flocks of shepherds."

Mr. Benedict is a firm believer in the efficacy of musical scores, and believes that they should be specially composed, not compiled. He suggests a difficulty that has so far escaped our notice. He claims that the use of the masters frequently detracts from the picture, and that many of the patrons are forced to cudgel their brain to recall the names and authors of the composition played. This takes their mind off the picture, and the thread of the plot is lost to them.

Benedict's solution of the difficulty is at once simple and complete. He would have a printed schedule issued to the audience on or with the programs indicating the various selections which were to be used. Thus to the one who knew the selection, but was annoyed because he couldn't recall its source, reference to the program would relieve him of the aggravating doubt and permit him to continue to give to the picture that attention which his musical doubts had distracted from the filmed story.

His claim of this new faulty presentation no doubt is based upon facts, but we think that it is bringing the picture music art into the "hair-splitting" class before it has really established itself firmly as an art. His solution places a further burden upon the shoulders of the showman which he can scarcely carry. If the music be programmed it must be done thoroughly, as even a typographical error will cause more distraction and argument than would ignorance of the number.

In connection with the class of program that should be played Mr. Benedict says, "The proper method, I believe, is to endeavor to please all comers and at the same time so assemble your programs that the cultural tendency is gradually upward. I have found, for instance, that the so-called 'low-brow' can be surprised into approving Dvorak's "New World" symphony when he doesn't know what it is, and one of the most popular of my recent selections has been the largo movement of that symphony.

"On the other hand, I have not infrequently found the so-called 'high-brow' approving a popular song when played simply and with effectual use of the stops. If the melody is cheap, but, for the time being, popular in the streets and in the theaters, I give it to my audience on the basis of the merchant who aims to please. I try, however, as best I can to glorify its trivialities with such 'registration' as my ingenuity can devise.

"Music is an essential in the presentation of pictures. The world they disclose is soundless. The world we observe is not. The picture, to that degree of its silence, becomes unreal. Here is where music comes in to make up that discrepancy and allure the mind of the observer from contemplation of the stillnesses of the scenes which in real life are vibrant with action, contact, and struggle. This music must be of a nature to appeal, for otherwise it would not beguile anybody from consciousness of the unnatural stillness. Thus the musical tastes of the auditors must be consulted in order that they be not cheated of their enjoyment of the picture to see which they have paid their good money."

Under the able direction of Conductor McKinney the orchestra has developed into a fine body of men, and the music presented in this theater is of the highest standard. Our best wishes for continued progress and greater success goes out to this beautiful home of the motion picture in the city at the Golden Gate.

Musical Synopsis Suggestions.

FIND THE WOMAN (Vitagraph—Five Reels)—Theme—Andante. Suggest Peacefulness—Borch, Roma—Edwards, or Souvenir—Geehl.

This picture deals with the dramatic side of operatic artists in New Orleans. It is filled with action, and requires many excerpts from well known operas. At "T. Sol Robbins classed all—" use the intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana." When the direct cue, "T. The Great Jewel Aria," appears use the "Jewel Song" from "Faust." A splendid effect can be obtained by using a phonograph back stage playing an operatic melody when Madeleine starts the Victrola. You will also need a few misteriosos, a furioso, and some dramatic tension stuff. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Vitagraph exchange.

FIREBRAND, THE (Fox—Five Reels)—Theme—Andante. Suggest Arioso—Frey, Dawn of Hope—Casella, or Extase—Ganne.

This story is one of particularly dramatic value, and will need all the big stuff that you can get into it. Be sure that you give variety, because the feature will drag otherwise. Many agitatos, misteriosos, hurrys, dramatic tensions, and furiosos will be needed. Long themes will fit this picture better than anything else providing they have the requisite depth of feeling to them. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Fox exchange.

HIT-THE-TRAIL HOLLIDAY (Artcraft—Five Reels)—Theme—Unnecessary.

Light music again, a few agitatos, hurrys, and one misteriosos. You may think some of these scenes will require a religious treatment. Have some ready at any rate. Use the "Fire-music" from the Valkyrie if you have it during the mob scene. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount exchange.

KIDDER & KO (Pathe—Five Reels)—Theme for the Heroine—Moderato. Suggest Basket of Roses—Albers, Bowl of Pansies—Reynard, or Dainty Daffodils—Miles.

Light music is needed for this dramatic comedy. You will require some college stuff in the early part of the feature. A big agitato may be used in the hold-up scene. Serenades, intermezzos, and love themes will play the balance of the picture. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Pathe exchange.

LEND ME YOUR NAME (Metro—Five Reels)—Theme—Allegretto. Suggest Babillage—Castillo, Babbilage—Herbert, or Basket of Roses—Reynard.

Light music will be needed for this picture in the main. There is a bit of misterioso in the beginning and a hurry when Earl sees police guns. The balance of the picture can be played with light waltzes, serenades, and polkas. Close with the theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Metro exchange.

MAN HUNT, THE (World Film—Five Reels)—Theme—Moderato Caprice. Suggest Capricious Annette—Borch, Jacqueline—Behr, or Legend—Friml.

This is a comedy-drama. It has two distinct atmospheres which it would be well to strongly contrast in your music. The locations are in Europe and an American lumber camp. The first reel needs only light music, building up a bit during the second, with a hurry in the third and fourth. The fifth reel is dramatic, and closes with the "Wedding March." In view of the strong feeling against the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn marches we would suggest that you use Grieg's "Wedding Procession" instead. Cue sheets can be obtained from the World exchange.

PATRIOTISM (Paralta Plays—Six Reels)—Theme—Moderato and Scotch. Suggest Lass O'Killean—Stickles.

The story takes place entirely in Scotland, and the atmosphere is so strong that nothing but Scotch music will effectively put the picture over. Be sure to have "The Campbells Are Coming" and "The March of the Cameron Men." These two marches are needed. During the tableau scenes you will require three short emblematic numbers, "The Hundred Pipers" for the "Hieland-maun," "Rule Britannia" for England, and "Joan of Arc" or "Marseillaise" for Joan. When Robin first sees the picture of the Kaiser in the grotto it would be most effective to have the orchestra or organist strike three harsh and dissonant chords indicative of our hatred. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paralta exchange.

SHOOTING OF DAN McGREW, THE (Metro Pictures—Five Reels)—Theme — Adagio. Suggest Adagietto — Berge, Prelude — Chopin, Reverie—Rissland.

This is the dramatization of the well known poem of the same name, and the action takes place in the Canadian Northwest. There is room for some good pastorale stuff and typical Canadian "shanty songs." There is a strong dramatic value and many scenes of intensity, so that you will require heavy music with dramatic tension qualities. The climax is reached just before the finish, and care must be taken lest you bring your musical climax too early in the feature and spoil the dynamic effect. Note the piano solo opportunities, using your judgment in their playing. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Metro exchange.

SMASHING THROUGH (Bluebird—Five Reels)—Theme for Heroine—Andante. Suggest Berceuse—Danbe, Dialogue—Meyer-Helmunth, or Even Song—Martin.

This picture is filled with action. It is Western in atmosphere, requiring the usual number of hurrys, galops, and misteriosos. It is distinctly melodramatic, with a few little touches of pathos. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Bluebird exchange.

SQUARE DEAL, A (Mutual—Five Reels)—Theme—Allegretto. Suggest Le Secret—Gautier, A Little Story—Lack, or Twilight—Bendix.

The picture opens brightly, and gradually works up the dramatic situations. Note the fox-trot in the second reel, one-step in the third, and dramatic tensions in the fourth. During the fifth there is an opportunity to introduce "Home Sweet Home" if you consider it advisable. Close with the theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Mutual exchange.

"Last Hope" In Jail.

Musicians are familiar with the account of the composition of "The Last Hope," by Gottschalk, which places the scene at Rio Janeiro, and accompanies it with an interesting account of the composer's intimacy with a Spanish family.

Some months ago a prominent California judge contributed a series of recollections to the Oakland Tribune. In the course of these reminiscences he referred to a once famous resort situated in a march later filled in for building purposes, "more famous for the wines and cuisine than for its morality." It was sometimes the subject of police raids.

Gottschalk visited San Francisco in the course of his travels and also Oakland. The story continues, "Tradition has it that Gottschalk, the pianist, was once arrested there, and that he wrote his famous 'Last Hope' while in the Oakland city jail."

Listening Feet.

A newspaper report of a piano recital in Seattle played by Josef Hofman records an interesting incident.

On the stage, about six feet from the pianist, sat a boy musician who is afflicted with deafness. In some way he had discovered that vibrations striking the nerve centers of his feet carried powerfully to his brain and produced impressions analogous to those made through the ear. In response to his request he had been allowed to sit on the stage close to the instrument with his shoes removed, so as to get the fullest possible benefit of the vibration.

He had been studying for some time Rachmaninoff's celebrated "Prelude" in C sharp minor, which Hofman had included in his program for the recital. That he received correct impressions is proven by the fact that he altered a number of the details of his own playing of the composition to accord with the great virtuoso's interpretation.

Questions Answered—Suggestions Offered.

Q. Is it true that Campanini has given Wagner operas in English in Chicago?

A. Campanini has given Wagner opera in Chicago with an all American cast, but never in English. We believe that it is his intention to give them in England with the same cast when English will be sung.

Q. Could you tell me where I could go to a whistling teacher to take a few lessons for my own personal use?

A. At the moment we are unable to give the name of a good whistling teacher. The greatest teacher, who was also the greatest whistling performer, Mrs. Shaw, has recently died, and there appears no one capable of taking her place. Claims may perhaps be made of being able to whistle and to teach the art, but hearing of such claimants shows their claims are not founded on fact. Whistling is done by forcing the breath through the contracted lips; a noise made in the throat is not whistling.

Allied Amusement Association Meets

President Peter J. Schaefer Recommends Duplication of Body in Every City and Town in the Country.

ABOUT two months ago the original Allied Amusement Association was formed and included within its ranks Chicago Local, M. P. E. L. of A.; Chicago Local, M. P. T. O. Association; the Chicago Film Managers' Association, and representatives of the vaudeville theaters and slide manufacturers.

The organization became so important to the amusement world in Chicago that the following letter was sent out to members of the Chicago Theatrical Managers' Association by Frank A. P. Gazzolo, secretary:

"At a special meeting of the Chicago Theatrical Managers' Association, held April 2, it was unanimously resolved as follows:

"That each theater now a member of the Chicago Theatrical Managers' Association join the new organization recently formed and known as the Allied Amusement Association of Chicago. This is of vital importance to every member.

"Detailed information will be imparted to each member, personally, by Peter J. Schaefer."

Peter J. Schaefer, when he was elected president of the Allied Amusement Association at a meeting of its members held at the Masonic Temple, Friday, May 31, therefore became president of the organization.

Peter J. Schaefer.

At the recent sale of Third Liberty Loan bonds the organization assisted greatly in carrying the sale of bonds to the high figure of $900,000. That was done, it must be remembered, before the organization had been fully completed.

The Allied Amusement Association is now an organization for the mutual benefit of all forms of amusement parks, and Mr. Schaefer expects to have them included in a few days.

The headquarters of the new association will be located at 336 South State street.

"The amusement business, in my opinion, is the third greatest American industry," said Mr. Schaefer. "Incidentally, there is more money represented in the amusement business of this country than in Standard Oil and Bethlehem Steel combined.

"President Wilson is the greatest friend the amusement business can boast of, and in several of his recent addresses he has stated that the theaters of America are doing more to preserve the morale of this country than any other agency. The screens of every motion picture theater in America have been turned over to government propaganda gladly and gratuitously. Motion picture weeklies are continually spreading the doctrine of our government. In every legitimate first class theater, as well as in vaudeville and picture houses 'Four-Minute Men' have preached American patriotism. This alone, in my mind, places the amusement business among the very foremost agencies for winning the war.

"Since the tax on theaters was instituted the theaters of America have contributed to the national treasury millions of dollars. In excess profits and income tax alone, theater owners and managers have patriotically and gladly given to the government.

"It is time that this great industry should become organized throughout the country in every department, and from our beginning in Chicago it is hoped the idea embodied in the organization of the Allied Amusement Association will spread to every big city, town and hamlet. As an organization, we can do a great deal more to help our country win the war than by acting as mere individuals."

Peter J. Schaefer was born, reared and educated in Chicago and at the present time ranks on the list of Chicago's well-known business men of large affairs. During his early business life he devoted his activities to vaudeville and theatrical business and to amusement parks. His chief specialty in his early career was building roller coasters and riding devices for amusement parks.

Mr. Schaefer was the pioneer of popular-priced vaudeville in this city and he reaped from this source alone a golden harvest. That was back in 1905, when he opened the Imperial Theater, on South State street, near Congress. He ran this house for six years to extraordinary business.

In 1905 he became a member of the firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, which was organized at the close of that year. On the Jones, Linick & Schaefer circuit of houses in Chicago, at the present time, are the Orpheum, Bijou, Rialto, Colonial, McVicker's, Lyric, Royal and the La Salle.

Convention of Paramount-Artcraft Men

District Managers, Branch Managers, Assistant Managers and Salesmen in Middle West Meet June 8, 9, 10 in Hotel Sherman.

A CONVENTION of the eleven exchanges in the Middle West of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was held at the Hotel Sherman June 8, 9 and 10. It was called by J. W. Allen, the special representative of the organization to exchanges, and he presided as chairman during its run.

The convention was called for the purpose of laying before the men assembled the plans of the corporation for the coming year. They were told all about the new releases for the coming fiscal year, which begins September 1, and Mr. Allen outlined the new service for exhibitors and the renting plan of the selective-star-series system of booking Paramount and Artcraft pictures. Three features a week of Paramount and Artcraft makes will be used by exhibitors in August and September. All the stars of merit employed last year, as well as all whom the organization has wished to retain, have been retained.

Among these are Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Marguerite Clark, Fred Stone (of Montgomery & Stone) and a number of new stars, about whom announcements will shortly be made in the advertising and news columns of the Moving Picture World.

Full instructions regarding sales plans was given the visiting exchange managers and also a careful outline of organization plans, showing the evolution toward improved business methods as applied to the distributing business.

The three district managers of the Middle West were present, namely, Max Goldstine, who has supervision of the Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Chicago offices; James Steele, district manager for Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit, and A. D. Flintom, district manager for Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines. Each of these district managers brought with him to the convention his entire force of branch managers, assistant managers, salesmen and office men.

At the close of Monday's meeting, each of the branch managers of the eleven exchanges made a short speech, and very enthusiastic sentiments were expressed concerning the merits of the Paramount and Artcraft service. At the conclusion of these speeches Mr. Allen delivered an address showing the wonderful possibilities of a structure of such firm foundation as their organization, and he predicted great success for the coming year for the entire force present. He also complimented the men on their fine morale and for the enthusiasm shown in their work.

The surprise of the speechmaking was furnished by Miss Lucille Goldstine, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Max Goldstine, district manager, located in Chicago, who delivered an extemporaneous speech on "Loyalty." This was followed by a forceful and compelling speech by Mr. Goldstine. James Steele followed with an address that was both helpful and inspirational to the workers.

A. D. Flintom had the honor of adjourning the meeting. In a pithy speech, which brought every one present to his feet, this old war-horse exchange man was at his best, and all present will long remember his famous "Over the Top" speech, which ended as follows: "Come on boys! Get out of the trenches! Come on over the top!"

Mr. Allen came to the city about two weeks ago and will remain in the Middle West for several more weeks. During that time he will visit the exchanges in Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

Maypole Ordinance Up Tuesday, June 18.

The Maypole ordinance will be reconsidered by the judiciary committee Tuesday, June 18. According to customary procedure it will be reported out of the committee and again brought before the City Council in the near future.

It seems as if another censorship ordinance will soon be brought before the City Council for its approval. This ordinance has been prepared by the corporation counsel at the request of Alderman John J. Coughlin, familiarly known as "Bath House" John. It is the intention to present this plan as a substitute for the Maypole ordinance, but it is very questionable if this will be done.

The Coughlin substitute ordinance proposes to take censorship out of the hands of the police department altogether, and to place supreme power in a board of three censors to be appointed by the mayor, with power to serve for two years. Each of the three members is to receive $4,000 a year.

"Missing" at Orchestra Hall.

"Missing," the fine Paramount feature directed by J. Stuart Blackton and adapted from Mrs. Humphrey Ward's book of that title, opened a week's run at Orchestra Hall Monday evening, June 10. The opening presentation gave great satisfaction to the large gathering present and the attendance has been close to capacity since. The dailies have been exceptionally liberal in their praise of the picture and of Director Blackton. Beginning Sunday, June 16, Sunday night will become the opening time for Paramount-Artcraft pictures at this house, instead of Monday night, as heretofore. "Missing" will be followed by "The Firefly of France," which features Wallace Reid.

Fine Loyalty of Rothacker Men.

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, informed me the other day he was proud of the fact that every individual member of his organization, including his studio, laboratory, service and administration departments, was a member of the American Red Cross; also that no less than twenty members of the organization had been called to service and are now with the colors. He also reminded me that Donald Thompson, the well-known war cameraman of Kansas, received his first experience at the Rothacker plant and that Lieutenants E. F. Weigle and W. H. Durborough, who made European war films which were exploited by the Chicago Tribune, had also received their early training at his plant. I. G. Ries, formerly associated with Lieutenant Durborough in the taking of foreign war pictures, is also an ex-cameraman of the Rothacker organization.

Delbert Miller Joins Canadian Army.

Delbert Miller, who has been assistant manager of the Rose, Alcazar and Boston theaters in this city for the past three years, enlisted at the Canadian recruiting station in Chicago last week and left for Toronto to join his Canadian company. Mr. Miller is an American by birth, but is beyond the United States draft age, being 33 years old. He called at the Canadian station and was so enthused by the talk given him by the officers that he immediately signed up with the Canadian forces. His Chicago friends admire him for his pluck and wish him all good luck at the front in France. His brother, Harry C. Miller, is manager of the three houses mentioned.

"Cleopatra" Continues Successful Run.

"Cleopatra" is scoring continued success during its third week at the Colonial. Among the big stirring scenes in the Fox feature are the naval battle at Actium and the sack of Alexandria by the Roman soldiers, under Emperor Octavius. The death scene of Cleopatra is thrilling, no less for the regal surroundings of the throne room than for the queenly dignity of the expiring queen.

Dorothy Gish Visits Chicago.

Dorothy Gish, the "Little Disturber" of Griffith's "Hearts of the World," came into the city Friday morning, June 7, from Los Angeles. She spoke at both the afternoon and evening showings of "Hearts of the World" at the Olympic on Friday, and also appeared at Grant Park to assist in the sale of Thrift Stamps Saturday afternoon. Miss Gish left Saturday night for New York. Before returning to Los Angeles she will make speeches in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other cities.

Chicago Office of General Film Moved.

The offices of the General Film Company were moved Sunday, June 9, from the City Hall Square Building, 139 North Clark street, to the College Building, 207 South Wabash avenue. The entire eighth floor is being occupied by the company. The 'phone number has been changed to Harrison 9574.

"Hearts of the World" to Colonial.

"Hearts of the World" will move from the Olympic to the Colonial Theater Monday, June 24, where it will be shown in the same style as at the Olympic until August 4. The prices will be the same as at the Olympic.

Camel Film Company Removes Offices.

The Camel Film Company has removed its offices and studios from 3715 Grand avenue to 950-54 Edgecomb place, where the company has an entire building to accommodate its business. This is the manufacture of cartoon films, developing and printing and everything appertaining to commercial film work. Paul Suhling, formerly of Burke & James, this city, has been appointed manager of the laboratory department. Walter Herzberg is now secretary and general manager, having succeeded F. C. Laflin.

Think Trade Should Aid Soldier Film Men

That They May Lose as Little as Possible Through Service to the Flag They Should Be Helped to keep in Touch with Business.

SIDNEY B. LUST, of the Super Films Attractions, Inc., Washington, D. C., has the right idea as to what should be done for our soldier boys. He is asking the co-operation of the other exchangemen and the exhibitors of this city to assist him. Mr. Lust tells the story to the Moving Picture World correspondent as follows:

"We have about two hundred men in the armed service of the United States who were formerly connected with the film business in Washington. More are to go. There are many of these men who want to return to the film business when they are finally released from military duty. They want to keep up with the game so that they will not suffer losses when it comes time to get back into harness.

"I do not know how better we could help these men, especially those in nearby camps, than to see to it that they are kept supplied with the trade papers. That is the best way to keep them posted on changes and new events. I have not had a chance to hear from all of the other exchangemen and exhibitors, but thus far the response to my request for assistance has been splendid.

"The film men left behind can do a whole lot for those who are going to the front. I am contemplating putting at the disposal of visiting film men in uniform one of the rooms on the second floor of my exchange at 1209-1211 E street, northwest, as a clubroom, where all of the latest issues of the trade papers may be found and where the boys can find cigarettes, tobacco and other things for their comfort.

"If my plans are successful, a fund will be started to make these things possible. It must be remembered that a man cannot do very much after there is taken from his pay the allotment that he makes for the benefit of those dependent upon him and a further draft is made on his $30 per month to pay for his insurance. There are many boys to whom the presentation of transportation from camp to home would be most acceptable."

F. M. COTNER, PLEASE WRITE!

Pell Mitchell, of the news and graphic department of the Gaumont Company, advises us that he is anxious to obtain the address of F. M. Cotner, a cameraman, to whom there is due a check for negative submitted for the Gaumont news weekly. Will Mr. Cotner please write to Mr. Mitchell, care of the Gaumont Company, Flushing, New York?

Advertising Men Enter Reissue Controversy

By Formal Resolution They Condemn Practice of Sending Out Old Pictures Under New Titles.

THE question of reissuing famous motion picture features under new titles, which has been thrashed out so fully in the trade press of late, was taken up by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the meeting held on Thursday, June 13, at Keen's.

The association was represented by twenty of its most prominent members, who unanimously placed themselves on record as opposed to the practice. The question came up for discussion, following the consideration of plans for the forthcoming second annual banquet to be held on the evening of Wednesday, June 26, at Delmonico's.

C. W. Barrell, of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, brought the matter to the attention of the association. After brief and pointed remarks in condemnation of such unethical methods of foisting old goods upon the public under new labels, John C. Flinn introduced the following resolution, which was seconded by Nat Rothstein, Julian Soloman and Harry Reichenbach:

"Resolved, That the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., emphatically place themselves on record as condemning the practice in the motion picture industry of publishing and advertising reissued features under different titles than those by which they were first shown to the public."

This resolution was passed by a unanimous vote, and Paul Gulick, chairman of the publicity committee, was instructed by President Arthur James to give the matter widest publicity in the trade press.

Rowland Writes a Letter to Williams.

During his remarks on the question Mr. Burrell read the following letter from the president of the Metro Pictures Corporation to J. D. Williams, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit:

"My dear Williams:

"Replying to your letter of June 3, I agree with you that it is a very bad thing for the motion picture business to take a lot of cutouts and attempt to make reissues. The public is led to believe that these pictures are genuine and are very much disappointed when they see them, and this has a very serious effect upon current releases.

"R. A. ROWLAND."

The letter was applauded and was one of the arguments that drove home the necessity of taking prompt action against the continuance of questionable advertising in the moving picture industry.

A resolution was offered by Allan Rock, seconded by C. W. Burrell and P. A. Parsons and unanimously carried, directing the officials of the association to bring the previous resolution to the attention of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, with the suggestion that the members of that organization take similar action against the practice.

Women May Take Road as Film Sellers

Dallas Correspondent Tells of One Exchange Manager Who Is Seriously Considering Sending Them Out.

IF you were an exhibitor and a good-looking woman with a line of films that you knew were good films should come along and offer you that line, and she talked as if she knew her business, wouldn't you be pretty likely to take on that line, everything being equal?

You would. It's human nature.

And that very bit of psychology may be the cause for chronicling the fact pretty soon that women are calling on Texas exhibitors with the latest so-and-so releases

I know an exchangeman here in Dallas who says he's very likely to try the thing, if but as an experiment. Never mind his name. He's perfectly evenly balanced and he's seen a number of instances in which women folk have made good in the picture game, and he believes they can do equally as well as sales "men." The heavy call on the men folks by the draft is the cause of it all. This exchange manager for a couple of days last week had to be porter, posterman, and short feature booker all at the same time—the draft had robbed him of those three employes all in one day. Incidentally a woman "made good" in the posterman's place right from the jump. The exchange manager, in filling the vacancies, put a young woman in charge of the poster room. The colorful advertising seemed to appeal to her sense of the artistic, and now the manager declares she's even better than the man whose place she took. D. H.

Carnival at Laskey Studio a Success

Fifteen Thousand Persons Attend Benefit for Families of Former Employes Now in Service.

THE benefit carnival at the Lasky Studios on Saturday night, June 8, was a great success. The carnival was for the benefit of the families of soldiers and sailors formerly members of the Lasky organization.

The affair was held at the big indoor studio of the Lasky plant, which had been tastefully decorated for the occasion. The sides of the walls were lined with concession booths presided over by stars of the Los Angeles film colony.

It was estimated that fifteen thousand persons were present, including every star, director and stock player on the Lasky lot, as well as hundreds of players from the other studios. The enormous stage was so crowded it was almost impossible to turn around.

It was the first time the studio has been open to the public. The program consisted of an address of welcome by Cecil B. De Mille, chairman of the folks at home fund, and special auction performances by Douglas Fairbanks, Bryant Washburn, Mary Pickford, Clara Kimball Young, Donald Crisp and others.

Booths were presided over by Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Gladys Brockwell, Edna Earle, Mary O'Connor, Loyola O'Connor, Constance Talmadge, Carmel Myers and Winifred Kingston.

Many articles were auctioned off. Among others, Clara Kimball Young, who appeared in evening dress and wearing a magnificent hat, auctioned off her wearing apparel, delivering the hat and gloves at first hand, and thereafter retiring behind a screen, over the top of which she sold her dress and some other garments, and whence she emerged following the sale mysteriously clad in street clothes.

A western bar, presided over by William S. Hart and his cowboys, did a rushing business, although very mild drinks were served. Douglas Fairbanks and Fred Stone staged a drinking bout and staggered away after the fifth ice cream soda.

Douglas Fairbanks offered to box Kid McCoy, but the fight closed after the second round for the simple reason that Doug, in the heat of the contest, fell into the swimming pool on the platform adjoining which the dance was held.

Mrs. Lillian Brockwell gathered in money to the amount of about two hundred dollars up to the point, in fact, when the footbridge across the little stream beyond which her candy booth was situated fell in owing to the heavy traffic.

Among others who took an active part in the program were Wallace Reid, Jeanie MacPherson, Wilfred Buckland, Ann Little, Blanche Sweet, Mildred Harris, Charley Murray, William A. Bishop and Billy Mason. A unique comedy feature was introduced by Fred Stone.

Madame Aldrich, the celebrated opera singer, contributed a dignifiedly patriotic flavor to the occasion by singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Universal City Forces Are Busy

Many New Productions Under Way—Dot De Vore New Leading Woman for Moran and Lyons.

AT Universal City Priscilla Dean has started production on a sensational feature picture entitled "Joan of the Apaches," under the direction of Joseph De Grasse. The story was written by Harvey Gates.

Mae Murray's latest Universal special feature production, made by Director Robert Z. Leonard from "The Big Little Person," the novel by Rebecca Hooper Eastman, has just been completed.

After ten days passed at Seven Oaks, one of the famous mountain resorts near Los Angeles, Carmel Myers, the charming Bluebird star, and her company have returned to Los Angeles to finish the production of a film version of Margaret Widdemar's novel, "Why Not?" Seen in Miss Myers' support are Thomas Holding, Kathleen Emerson, Harry V. Meter, Philo McCullough and little Elizabeth Janes.

Dot De Vore, musical comedy favorite, has been engaged as the new leading woman for Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, the Universal funmakers.

"Should a Woman Tell?" is the tentative title of a sensational sex problem drama just started at the Bluebird studios under the direction of Douglas Gerrard.

Brunton Gives Dinner for Eugene Farnsworth.

A dinner party was given on June 4 at the Los Angeles Athletic Club by Robert Brunton, head of the Brunton Studios, with F. Eugene Farnsworth, president of the Mastercraft Photoplay Corporation, as the guest of honor.

The dinner was to celebrate the completion at the Brunton Studios of the Mastercraft super-feature, "The One Woman," a screen version of Thomas Dixon's novel of the same name.

Banquet Given by Robert Brunton for F. E. Farnsworth.

Among the guests were the principal members of the cast, the heads of the various departments of the Brunton Studios, and several of the Paralta stars. Among these were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brunton, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse D. Hampton, Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth, Miss Bessie Barriscale, Miss Louise Glaum, Miss Clara Williams, Miss Adda Gleason, W. Lawson Butt, Herschall Mayall, Joseph J. Dowling, Howard Hickman, J. Korn, J. C. Okey, R. J. Kern, Charles Kaufman, J. E. Woodbury, Thomas Little, Bert Crossland, Albert Cody and R. B. Kidd.

Harold Bell Wright Forms His Own Company.

E. W. Reynolds, publisher of the Harold Bell Wright books, arrived in Los Angeles on Friday, June 7, and has made the first authentic statement of the plans of the new Harold Bell Wright Story Picture Corporation, which has been incorporated in California with a paid-up capital of $100,000.

Mr. Reynolds, who earned fame through the salesmanship he put behind the Wright books, is president and general manager of the new company; Charles M. Stone is treasurer; George L. Belcher, secretary, and Harold Bell Wright, director general.

The first story to be filmed, "The Shepherd of the Hills," will be made on the scenes of the tale. For three months the author has been at work on the scenario, and together with Mr. Reynolds, E. J. Vallejo, cameraman; Guy Brooks, property man, and Jack Holden, scenic artist, he has gone to the Ozarks to plan for the making of the scenes. L. F. Gotschalk, of Los Angeles, will be assistant director.

"The Shepherd of the Hills" will be made in seven reels and released on the state rights market.

Aristo Is a New Film Producing Company.

Aristo Productions is the name of a new film producing company soon to start work in Los Angeles. Julius Frankenberg, well known motion picture director, is director-general of the company; Elmer E. Everett is the general manager and Logan S. Paine, business manager. The company has a suite of offices in the Hollingsworth building, at Hill and Sixth streets.

Leona Lamar, a headliner on the Orpheum Circuit, has been engaged as the leading woman. Her first appearance will be in a Secret Service story, in seven reels, entitled "A Princess of the U. S. A."

Miss Hazel Boone, a talented player and a descendant of Daniel Boone, will also be a featured player in the Aristo Productions.

The company expects to release its pictures on the state rights market.

Hayakawa Company Films Scenes at Coronado.

Sessue Hayakawa is now well under way on his second production, "The Temple of Dusk." The company is at present at Coronado, where a number of scenes are being filmed in the Japanese tea garden on the Coronado Strand, owned by George T. Marsh, merchant of San Francisco, who gave permission for its use. The garden is a replica of one of the most attractive places of the kind in Japan and is one of the real show places of Southern California.

In addition to Hayakawa and Director James Young are Jane Novak, Sylvia Breamer and Lewis Willoughby, who play leading roles; twelve geisha girls, eight Japanese, Studio Manager George Stout, Cameraman Del Clawson and Assistant Director William Carr.

Francis Ford Producing at Christie Studios.

Francis Ford has leased stage space at the Christie Studios and is producing a six-reel state right feature and six one-reel pictures to be released on the General program. The first of the series, entitled "Madam Delirium," with Elsie Van Name and Duke Worne as principals, has already been shipped to the General Film Company's Eastern offices. "Solitaire," in which Mr. Ford plays the principal part himself, is in the making. "The Isle of Intrigue' is the name of the six-reel state right feature. Miss Edna Emerson, who came from New York with the Ford Company, is playing opposite Mr. Ford.

Dustin Farnum Adopted as Big Brother.

Honor has been conferred upon Dustin Farnum, as evinced in a telegram received by him on June 1. The message was from Major W. A. Jolley, commanding the 115th Sanitary Train of the Sunshine Division, stationed at Camp Kearny, and says: "The officers and men of the 115th Sanitary Train of the Sunshine Division have unanimously decided to adopt you as our big brother. We hope you may be able to visit us soon and get acquainted with all the members of this organization." Needless to state, Farnum was elated.

The 115th Sanitary Train includes the entire medical organization of the Camp Kearny Division. It consists of four field hospitals and four field ambulances. The train includes over a thousand men and fifty-nine officers.

Farnum left Los Angeles June 11 for San Diego, to visit the 115th Sanitary Train. It is his intention while at Camp Kearny, to make a picture showing the work of the Sanitary Train, from the time reveille blows in the morning until taps are sounded at night, in order to make clear to every person in the country who has a relative engaged in the war just how efficiently their men are cared for upon the battlefields of France by the men of the medical divisions. It is proposed that Mr. Farnum shall donate this film to the officers and men of the 115th Sanitary Train, as well as have it released under the auspices of the Red Cross, providing the Government acquiesces to the plan.

Clifford Photoplay Company Starts Production.

The W. H. Clifford Producing forces are engaged in turning out what Mr. Clifford claims to be one of the most thrilling stories of the year. It is entitled "A Prisoner of War." One of the scenes is a fight between a German aviator and Shorty Hamilton, who pays the part of a Scotch aviator. To get the real thing Mr. Clifford went to the expense of hiring an aeroplane factory at Venice. Ruth King and William Colvin appear in support of the star.

Japanese Active in Liberty Loan and Red Cross.

Sessue Hayakawa is in receipt of letters from several of his friends in Tokio conveying information of interest concerning the Liberty Loan and Red Cross drives in Japan.

K. Omura writes Hayakawa that the American residents of the "land of the rising sun" have been wonderfully active in their efforts in behalf of the bonds and that the subscriptions to the war securities in all the large cities of the empire by the Americans and their allies have been large.

"The Japanese women have proceeded in a very systematic manner during the progress of the campaign for funds," says Hayakawa's correspondent, "and they have been highly commended by their American and British sisters for their splendid assistance in obtaining substantial donations from entirely unexpected sources."

Miller Sells His Main Street Theater.

Miller's Main Street Theater, one of the most popular motion picture houses in the city, has been sold. Fred A. and Roy G. Miller on Saturday, June 8, announced the disposal of their house to Carl Ray, who is to assume control next Sunday.

The Millers have their new theater well under way. As previously reported in this paper, Fred and Roy Miller and Harry Leonhardt are building at the corner of Eighth and Main streets a house seating twenty-five hundred persons. They expect to open the new theater about September 15 and contemplate unusual accommodations for their patrons and attractions of first caliber. The new house is to be one of the finest on the Pacific Coast and will offer ample opportunity for their managerial acumen.

Mr. Ray has a wide experience in theatrical business, and now controls a chain of theaters throughout the West. He will establish his own management, but will retain the present name of the theater.

Bill Hart Takes Company to Nevada.

Bill Hart has left Los Angeles for Nevada with his company for the filming of his last photoplay called for by his first year's contract with Artcraft. The story was taken from a magazine novel called "The Vengeance of Jefferson Gawne." It has been renamed "Riddle Gawne" and Hart will be supported by Miss Katherine MacDonald in the leading female role, Gertrude Short, Leon Kent, Lon Chaney, Mary Jane Irving, George Field and Gretchen Lederer.

The photoplay is one of action, concerning the lifelong search of a man after vengeance, and it is expected to rival anything Hart has produced.

S. C. Burr Promoted.

S. C. Burr, assistant to Production Manager O. L. Sellers during the H. O. Davis regime at the Triangle Culver City studios, has been promoted. With the advancement of Mr. Sellers to assistant to President H. E. Aitken, Burr is now production manager. Other promotions have made M. D. Gardner assistant to production manager and J. Scott Sayre, casting director in charge of the free Triangle booking and employment bureau, which has been opened in suite 902 Knickerbocker Building, in Los Angeles.

Ince Not to Move Companies to Brunton Studios.

Announcement has been made by Thomas H. Ince that all negotiations relating to the removal of his organization to the Paralta Studio, with the idea of procuring additional facilities for his productions, are off. However, Mr. Ince has decided to retain the old Biograph and Selig Studios, enlarging each to meet the requirements of his organization.

Hart Sends Six Thousand Sacks of Bull.

Six thousand sacks of Bull Durham smoking tobacco were sent to the men of the 159th California Infantry on June 1 by their godfather, Bill Hart, and Bill has an idea that if the men knew the difficulty he had in securing that many sacks, now that the government has taken over the Durham factory, the soldiers would doubly appreciate the gift.

Goldstein Begins Penitentiary Sentence.

Robert Goldstein, convicted author and exhibitor of the film "The Spirit of '76," will leave at once for McNeils Island to begin serving a sentence of ten years, unless a further stay of execution is granted in his case, it has been announced by his attorney, Le Compte Davis.

According to the attorney, Goldstein's stay of execution for the perfection of an appeal expired June 1 and the probabilities are that no further steps are to be taken with respect to exercising further rights the defendant may have in order to keep him out of prison.

Carl is a Regular Doughboy Now.

Carlyle R. Robinson, formerly publicity man for Charlie Chaplin, is now a member of the Twenty-first Infantry, in training at San Diego. Robinson was taken in the draft three weeks ago.

Gerald Duffy Publicity Man for Hart.

Gerald C. Duffy is now publicity man for the William S. Hart studio. Mr. Duffy but recently came to the coast from New York City. His father was a well known magazine writer.

Government Wants Pictures of War Activities.

Have you interesting pictures illustrating war activities in Southern California? Photographs of unique Red Cross workers, sales campaigns, drilling for home defense, property destroyed by enemy aliens, arrest of such enemies, draft scenes of unusual character, public service work of prominence, food administration scenes, manufacture of equipment, entraining of troops and similar photographs are needed.

Such pictures will render a useful public service. Send them to William E. Wing, 1543 Council street, Los Angeles. All such photos should be accompanied by written descriptive matter covering fully the nature of the scenes with mention of names, if prominent persons are shown.

Mr. Wing is acting in this work for the pictorial section of the War Department at Washington.

Eddie Ring Joins the Flyers.

Eddie Ring Sutherland has joined the Canadian Royal Flying Corps and has already left to take up activities in this branch of the service. He is known in filmdom as a juvenile leading man. He is a nephew of Blanche Ring.

Tipton Steck With Universal.

H. Tipton Steck, for several years manager of production and script department for Essanay Company and responsible for many of that company's screen successes, has come to Universal City to take over the management of a newly created department, that of the Reconstruction Bureau which has as its work the "making over" of scripts.

Stage Women's War Relief Stages Camp Show.

The Stage Women's War Relief continues merrily to launch its camp shows for the benefit of the soldiers and sailors stationed at the training camps. The next event is scheduled for June 25, when Lillian Brockwell, Fox player and mother of Gladys Brockwell, will take a show to Fort McArthur.

On the program will appear William Farnum, Gladys Brockwell, William Burress, William Louis, William Scott, Ethel Davis, Chester Conklin, Ford Sterling, Harry Gribbon, Charlie Murray, Polly Moran and Alice Davenport.

Franklyn Farnum With Metro.

Franklyn Farnum has joined the Metro company and will be featured in special productions under direction of Will Davis. Anna Q. Nilson will play the feminine lead opposite Mr. Farnum.

Symphony Theater Opening a Success

Aubrey M. Kennedy Erects Neighborhood House of Unusual Attractiveness at Ninety-Fifth Street and Broadway.

THE opening of the Symphony theater at Ninety-fifth street and Broadway, New York, on Friday evening, June 14, was a decided success. It spoke well for the artistic bump of Aubrey M. Kennedy, of the Kennedy Theaters, Inc., by whom it was erected, and for W. G. Massarene, artist and architect, whom Mr. Kennedy summoned to his aid. The Symphony theater has a large seating capacity, its loges equipped with willow lounging chairs alone accommodating 400 persons.

It is not too much to say that there is not an undesirable feature in the Symphony theater. The architectural and decorative beauty of the house is a delight—simplicity, good taste, and comfort are the predominating features. The amphitheatric, gradual rise in the orchestra gives each and every viewer an unobstructed view of the screen.

The building and site represent an initial investment of $1,250,000. It consists of one sunken and two above street floors, which were the beginning of a fifteen story apartment house, plans for which were filed by Vincent Astor. It was at one time used as a modern market, and lately as a skating rink, and it was the first parcel of property that had ever passed out of the Astor family by actual sale. The walls of this theater are built of reinforced steel concrete of a twenty-five-inch thickness.

The feature of the Symphony theater which will be most welcome to residents of this section of the city is the splendid orchestra of fifty pieces which is being employed under the supervision of Carlo Ronchi, musical director, and Enrico Leide, conductor, with Harold Osborne Smith and Seraphin Albisser assisting. The musical program of the opening night was well selected and given in masterful style.

The program, which was a fair sample of what Symphony theater patrons may expect, consisted of the following numbers: 1. Patriotic tableau, The rape of Chateau-Thiery, a village near the battle front in France. 2. Symphony News Digest and Symphony War Digest. 3. "La Boheme," excerpts from opera by the Symphony orchestra. Divertissement from celebrated "Dance of the Hours," from the opera, "La Gioconda," by a selected Corps de Ballet, Mlle. Clara Tosca, Prima Ballerina; mise en scene by Signor Luigi Albertieri, ballet master. 5. Mutt and Jeff comedy. 6. "The Unchastened Woman," by Luis K. Anspacher, featuring Grace Valentine.

This program was beautifully carried out, and the fact that it was flag day was well remembered by the management. Simplex machines provided the projection.

The Symphony theater is under the management of Charles L. Cole, who opened the first theater for the famous Pantages circuit. Its program will be changed every Sunday, and will be comprised of the finest and newest in the moving picture art, including educational scenic, news, travel, comedy, and novelty films. The prices range from 25 and 35 cents and 10 cents for children at matinees to 45 and 60 cents for evening performances, including the war tax.

Winchester Joins Shipping Control Committee

Publicity Manager of Pathe to Serve the Government for the Duration of the War.

TARLETON WINCHESTER, publicity manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has tendered his resignation to Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager, to accept an appointment in the United States Shipping Control Committee. It is probable he will leave Pathe, to take his place in government service for the duration of the war, on June 22. William Lord Wright, who has been with Pathe for some time as scenario and title expert, will take Mr. Winchester's place.

Under Mr. Winchester's management Pathe's publicity department has been brought up to a high state of efficiency which has had an important part in the big things Pathe has been doing recently. He is known for his knowledge of the sales and newspaper angles of publicity, and sustained by his ability as an organizer he has built up a department which obtains remarkable results.

Mr. Winchester has been closely identified with the industry for five years. Coming to Paramount as publicity manager from the motion picture desk of the New York Morning Telegraph, he remained with that company through two years of its formative period. He left Paramount to go to Pathe, and has been there ever since, being identified with the progressive policy of the big house.

He is known as a writer of special articles and fiction and it is probable that he will continue to contribute to magazines, including those devoted to motion pictures, insofar as his new duties will permit.

William Lord Wright is a well known figure in the industry, having been publicity manager for the Selig-Polyscope Company prior to joining Pathe.

Small Towns Make and Unmake Stars

So Declares Fay Tincher, Who Points Out That in Lesser Communities Screen Is Main Amusement.

IT'S the small town demand that makes a star of a motion picture actress, declares Fay Tincher, the comedienne, who has just affixed her signature to a contract with World Pictures. Miss Tincher backs up this novel idea in a logical manner.

"In the small towns," says Miss Tincher, "the motion picture star reigns supreme. She does not have to divide attention with theaters, skating rinks, dansants, concerts and opera the way she does in the big cities. Her only competition is with other movie actresses. If the small town people like her, then a tremendous demand for more of her pictures arises from the small towns—where the bulk of the motion picture business is done—and she is made. But if the demand is from the big cities and her pictures fall flat in the small towns, then she is a failure."

"The news I await most anxiously," continued Miss Tincher, "is that which tells me how my picture is going over in the small towns. It's the small town people I work for. They are the most critical audiences in the picture business, for the simple reason, as I stated before, that in the small towns the movies form almost the only source of amusement."

Incidentally, the World Film press department remarks that the Fay Tincher comedies are "Main 1-2-3," just released, and "Some Job," released on June 24.

ANNA MEAD TO RETURN TO PICTURES.

Miss Anna Mead, who has been officially recognized as the world's youngest heroine and who has been doing benefit work for soldiers and sailors during the past three months, is arranging through her manager, Carolyn Laurence of 120 Lexington avenue, New York, to return to the screen. Anna is a charming girl with lots of ginger, and has already done some very creditable picture work.

Back Horstmann for President

New England Exhibitors Pushing Candidacy of Their Massachusetts Associate, Who Has been One of 'Em for Over Ten Years.

NEW ENGLAND motion picture exhibitors are lining up solidly for Ernest H. Horstmann for the next national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. At the annual outing of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island branches at Pemberton Inn, Hull, on Tuesday, June 11, the exhibitors of the New England section lined up solidly behind Mr. Horstmann and some important work was done toward boosting his candidacy. It is a safe guess that Mr. Horstmann will poll the solid vote of the delegates from this section to the national convention in Boston July 13 to 20.

Mr. Horstmann believes that the motion picture industry has yet to reach its real stride as one of the world's great industries. In an interview with a representative of the Moving Picture World he expressed some of his ideas regarding the future of the industry.

Ernest H. Horstmann.

"The government looks upon the motion picture industry as a more powerful agent for its new purposes and educational propaganda than even the newspaper," declared Mr. Horstmann. "The largest manufacturing concerns of the country today are using the motion pictures to demonstrate their various processes, which can be very much more aptly described than any salesman could talk. Then there is the cost of producing the pictures, which has jumped from $20 a reel in the early days to upwards of three quarters of a million dollars. I feel confident in predicting the coming exposition in Boston will prove, like the convention, the greatest in years. We are striving very hard to have with us the nation's chief executive, who, like a great many notable men, have come to appreciate the value of the motion picture both from an educational and propaganda point of view. This convention is not aimed to bring together a number of motion picture actors merely for the purpose of obtaining publicity as some may infer. On the contrary it will bring together the greatest aggregation of successful business men that the country has produced in the past decade. It will assemble here men connected with every branch of this industry and the public will be afforded the novel opportunity of witnessing the marvelous growth since achieved since the birth of motion pictures.

Horstmann an Expert Electrician.

Mr. Horstmann is one of the pioneers of the motion picture business of New England. He is a native of England, and was born in Weston-Super-Mare on February 20, 1869. He received his early education in that country. In 1890 he came to America and settled in New York City. He remained there for fifteen years, during which time he was engaged in the clock department of Tiffany's and with the Electric Time Clock Company. It was while he was associated with the latter that he chanced to come to Boston, having been assigned to the work of wiring the State House.

Mr. Horstmann's initial advent in the amusement field took place in Lynn in 1906, when he became interested in the penny-in-the-slot machines, or more commonly known in those days as the "penny arcades." His success in this venture was of such amazing proportions that he lost no time in opening other arcades in Revere. In the operation of both places Mr. Horstmann was associated with Arthur E. Lord and A. Downing. It was this trio that opened the Dreamland at Lynn at the same time that the now extinct Comique theater, the Hub's pioneer moving picture theater, was opened. Not unlike the latter, the Dreamland was one of the ground stores converted into a theater and boasted a seating capacity of forty-six seats.

Mr. Horstmann is also recorded as having been one of the first to operate a motion picture machine. This experience took place at Asbury Park, N. J., about eighteen years ago. The machine was then called a Vitascope and the film shown was a colored one and did not exceed twenty feet in length. One of the peculiar incidents to this experience was the necessity of employing twelve men to install a massive motor generator in order that the street current might be used.

Hooks Up With Howard and Gordon.

Yielding to the tremendous popularity of the motion pictures Mr. Horstmann and his partners completed plans for the construction of the Lynn Olympia theater, which was thrown open to the public on January 25, 1908, with a seating capacity of 1,240 seats. Since that time an additional 1,800 seats have been put into the theater, making it the largest theater in the shoe manufacturing city. In the course of buying films Mr. Horstmann met Frank J. Howard, then recognized as the "film king" of New England, who soon thereafter became identified with the former in the operation of the Lynn theater. At this time Nathan H. Gordon, interested in theaters in Chelsea and Worcester, made a proposition that met with general favor ,and this combination opened Gordon's Olympia on Washington street in November, 1911. Then followed other houses, notably the Scollay Square Olympia, the Olympia in New Haven and the Olympia in New Bedford.

These theaters were combined into the Olympia theaters company and operated under one management. In July, 1916, Mr. Horstmann sold out a major portion of his interest and has devoted a great deal of his time to the development of the Exhibitors' League of America. He was organizer and president for several years of the state branch of that organization. He has also lent invaluable aid in the organizations formed for Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Connecticut.

Saenger Amusement Company Under Charges

Is Defendant to a Series of Complaints Filed by the Federal Trade Commission.

THE Saenger Amusement Company, of New Orleans, which owns, operates and controls theaters in various States and which also acts as a booking agency, booking films for various other exhibitors on a commission basis, and purchasing, leasing or otherwise procuring the license of films from producing companies and film exchanges, is the defendant to a complaint just issued by the Federal Trade Commission.

The following summary of the charges is made public by the commission:

The complaint avers that accompanying films sent out by the respondent is certain advertising matter. It is alleged that the company, to stifle competition, has made threats to certain film exchanges that unless they accept terms made by the respondent for the lease, sale, or license of films, the Saenger Amusement Company would cause exhibitors to refuse to lease, handle, or procure the license of the films of such exchanges, and that some of these threats were fulfilled.

The complaint charges also that the respondent company has caused contracts for the exhibition of various films made between certain exchanges and exhibitors to be broken or canceled, thus hindering and harassing such film exchanges. The respondent is charged also with causing contracts for the exhibition of films by certain exhibitors to be canceled, such cancellations being procured after the exhibitions were advertised, whereupon the respondent company or persons connected with it displayed the same film in advance of the date advertised, the exhibition taking place in the neighborhood of the theaters of exhibitors who had advertised the films.

The complaint charges, too, that the Saenger Amusement Company, through threats of withdrawing its patronage or the patronage of other exhibitors of moving pictures, has compelled certain film exchanges to cease supplying films to exhibitors competing with the Saenger Amusement Company.

According to the complaint the respondent company has compelled exhibitors to book films through it by threats of cutting off the supply of moving picture films. The company is charged also with inducing the employees of competitors to leave their employment by offering them positions with the Saenger Amusement Company.

DRESSLER AND TINCHER COMEDY DATES SET.

World-Pictures announces the publication dates of new comedies just completed or being finished by Marie Dressler and Fay Tincher, the famous comediennes, who are making two-reel comedies for the World. On July 8 Miss Dressler's "The Agonies of Agnes" will be published. "The Red Cross Nurse," another Marie Dressler production, is announced for publication on August 5. On July 22 Fay Tincher will be seen in "Oh, Susie, Behave."

In the latter attraction Miss Tincher is seen in the role of Susie Snipp, who works for five dollars a week as errand girl in a modish little hat shop. She has one ambition—to become a saleslady, and her efforts in this direction furnish Miss Tincher with ample opportunities to display her abilites as a comedienne.

Universal Appeals to Newspapers

Carl Laemmle Addresses Letter to Press of Country, Asking for Aid in Establishing Industry as a War Essential.

A NATION-WIDE campaign has been started by the Universal company for the purpose of enlisting the aid of the newspapers on the side of the motion picture industry in its battle to establish itself as an essential industry in the eyes of the Government.

The opening gun in the campaign is a letter addressed to the publisher of every newspaper in the country. This letter, signed by Carl Laemmle, directs attention to the movement set afoot by people ignorant of the part being played by the screen in sustaining the morale of the nation and which urges a virtual boycott against moving pictures.

The letter was originally sent to the editor of the Pasadena Star-News of Pasadena, Cal. It is on the West Coast that the campaign which urges supression of motion picture entertainment started. So enthusiastic was the reception given to Mr. Laemmle's letter by the trade throughout California that it was decided to send it broadcast.

The tremendously valuable assistance given to the Government's effort to disseminate patriotic propaganda through the medium of the minute men, who speak in thousands of motion picture theaters, is dwelt upon. Emphasis is also laid upon the hundreds of thousands of dollars of revenue in the shape of war taxes imposed upon the industry and the theater-going public which is contributed every twenty-four hours.

The letter further points out the fact that so importantly has the motion picture figured in keeping up the spirits of the people in France, Italy and the British Empire that every suggestion for the curtailment of moving picture entertainment has been instantly frowned upon by these governments. It closes with the statement that as the two most important factors for education and enlightenment the newspaper and the screen should stand together.

According to information received from Universal that company proposes vigorously to combat every effort by misguided zealots who single the film industry out as a non-essential that might as well be dispensed with. Orders have been forwarded to the publicity men in all of the exchanges controlled by the organization to the effect that they are to notify the home office of every instance of movements started in their respective territories which have for their object a harmful influence upon the attendance of moving picture theaters.

How Home Pictures Strike Soldiers

Make Up for the Letters That Do Not Come, Says Former World Pictures Auditor.

I HAD the great pleasure the other evening of seeing a World picture—Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in 'His Royal Highness'—in the Y. M. C. A. hut in the camp where I am located," writes Bruno Jaeger to World-Pictures from France. Mr. Jaeger was formerly a traveling auditor for World-Pictures and was drafted a number of months ago.

"The boys enjoyed the picture immensely," Mr. Jaeger continues, "and when they found that I formerly worked for World-Pictures I was the hit of the evening. They asked a million questions, and had me up a tree on technical points more than once.

"Of course, all the boys are delighted when they get a chance to see an American picture. If the moving picture producers only knew how much pleasure American pictures give to our boys at the front they would take some steps to see that every release made by them would be shown over here. I tell you it certainly warms the cockles of your heart to see a Yankee picture with Yankee scenes and actors. It takes you back home, and with many of the boys makes up for the letters that do not come. I find motion pictures showing familiar scenes and faces is the greatest cure for homesickness imaginable."

Mr. Jaeger is one of the expert accountants now serving Uncle Sam at the front.

"PERSHING'S CRUSADERS" SHOWN IN WASHINGTON.

A special exhibition of "Pershing's Crusaders" was given at Poli's Theater, Washington, D. C., on June 3 by the Committee on Public Information for the purpose of acquainting President Wilson and his official family with the work that has been accomplished by the committee's film division. A large and representative audience attended the production, including editors and proprietors of practically every newspaper in the capital.

Many Affiliated Units Elect Directors

O'Donnell Is Chosen in Pennsylvania, Cohen in New York City and Mosher in Buffalo.

FOLLOWING the granting of charters last week to fifteen co-operative booking associations united with the Affiliated Distributors' Associations, the selection of directors was made in many of the units. Each affiliated booking association is under its own management, and the officers are chosen by the exhibitor members of the respective organizations. The announcement of the election of officers in Pennsylvania, New York City and Western New York shows that the movement has the support of many prominent exhibitors.

Judge John H. O'Donnell, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, is one of the directors chosen for the Exhibitors' Booking Association of Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey. The other members of the directorate are: Robert H. Kincade, president of the United Exhibitors' Association, president; Morris Spiers, secretary of the United Exhibitors' Association, secretary; Michael Steifel, Harry Greene, Edward O'Keefe and Columbia Stamper.

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York, is president of the Greater New York unit of the Affiliated. All the presidents of the local branches of the State League represented in New York City are members of the board of directors. They include: John Manheimer, president of the Manhattan Local, M. P. E. L.; John J. Wittman, president of Bronx Local; Rudolph Sanders, president of the Brooklyn Local, and Isador Edelstein.

Western New York has for its directors Ira Mosher, of the Palace theater, Buffalo, president; Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo; William Fait, Jr., of the Avon theater, Utica; W. H. Linton of the Hippodrome, Little Falls; A. A. Fennessy, Little Falls; Charles M yman, of the Cataret, Niagara Falls, and William A. Callahan, of the Regent theater, Rochester.

Directors also have been elected for the Affiliated units of Michigan, Illinois, North and South Carolina, Indiana, Missouri, Northern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

Canada and England Interested in Affiliated Steps Being Taken by Officials of Distributors' Corporation to Extend Booking Plan.

PLANS were instituted last week by the executives of the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation for the extension of that organization's cooperative plan of booking to other parts of the world. Organization work in Canada is already under way, under the supervision of Chandos Brenon and Merrit Nutting, editor of the Canadian Motion Picture Digest. It is expected this unit of the Affiliated will be ready for operation shortly after distribution is started in the United States.

Herbert Brenon, one of the producers allied with the Affiliated, who is now in England, has advised the officials of the Affiliated that the keenest interest has been expressed in the Affiliated plan by English exhibitors. Mr. Brenon was cabled authority to arrange for a preliminary organization of the English exhibitors. New Zealand, as a result of a petition from twenty of the foremost exhibitors of that territory, will be granted a charter for twenty days with the Affiliated. Other foreign units will be organized as rapidly as war conditions permit.

NELSON APPOINTED GENERAL'S REPRESENTATIVE.

The appointment of A. J. Nelson, formerly manager of the Washington exchange, as special representative, with headquarters at the home office in New York, is announced by General Film. Among other duties Mr. Nelson will superintend the work of the traveling auditors in the field. He is well known in film circles, having been employed in the auditing department of the General home office prior to his entry into the sales department.

You may not be able to fight, but you can save and buy War Savings Stamps.

Our Future Trade With Latin America

Chairman of Shipping Board Reveals Plan for Closer Commercial Intercourse With Southern Republics.

THOSE exporters who seem to doubt the ability of this country to retain its film trade with Latin America after the war, on account of superior shipping facilities between our southern neighbors and the great trading centers of Europe, should peruse the address delivered by Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, at the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, on June 10.

The two following paragraphs, which we reproduce, ought to furnish food for thought to all film exporters:

If in 1919-20 we have the passenger and cargo tonnage we have planned we will be in a position to establish a weekly passenger service between New York and Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Buenos Aires, and Caracas on the East coast, and weekly service between Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Valparaiso, Chile, on the Western coast. On the West coast we now have two fast passenger steamers plying between New York and Valparaiso. These are the first to carry the American flag on that route. They have cut the time between these two important cities from 27 to 18 days—a saving of 9 days.

Our Central American neighbors, Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Honduras, and Costa Rica must all have the very best passenger and cargo service, as must all of our South American neighbors. We have planned the class of steamers required for this service. The type will serve our Latin-American friends in a manner that they have never been served before, but which they are entitled to. With the wonderful resources which these countries have their products should be distributed in the world's markets, and they should have sufficient ships at their disposition and at such rates that will enable them when it is necessary to sell their products in competition with other nations. This will give them an opportunity to receive their share of profits which will permit them to further develop their countries.

If the program sketched above is carried out, and we can think of no reason why it should not have become an accomplished fact by the time the war is over, the danger to our film business from European competition will be reduced to a negligible point—providing, of course, that our product does not lose its present superiority over the European article. Moreover, this closer intercourse between North, Central and South America is bound to increase in a short time, and to a considerable extent, the buying power of all the Spanish and Portuguese speaking republics.

A Sensible View of the Shipping Question

Timely Suggestions Made to the Treasury Department on Film Shipments to Foreign Countries.

IN REPLY to a circular sent out by the New York branch of the United States Treasury Department and dealing with the shipping of film to foreign countries, Joseph Lamy, of the Piedmont Pictures Corporation, has prepared and submitted a set of suggestions that, if adopted, would undoubtedly increase the efficiency of the government officials engaged in this line of work and reduce to a minimum many of the handicaps under which the exporters have been working during the past year.

Mr. Lamy's suggestions cover the following points:

1. One print of each moving picture, as soon as manufactured, should be inspected by the censor in accord with the manufacturer.

2. The manufacturer must pledge himself, under oath, to export or to supply exporters only with prints of the same subject exactly like the one which has been approved of by the customs censors.

3. The manufacturer does not offer for export or does not deliver for export any film which is not approved by the customs censors.

4. A record to be kept of all films thus inspected, approved or rejected by the customs censor, and that each subject receives a classification number so that the manufacturer when delivering any print of that subject for export can mention the corresponding file number of the classification on a certified invoice.

5. Everything written contained within the pictures, such as titles, sub-titles, spoken titles, letters and other inserts which may have to be translated into a foreign language to be translated according to the texts of the censored pictures and all translations are to be approved by the customs censors.

6. All exporters to make a declaration under oath to comply with these rules and not to export any film unless in the above mentioned way.

7. Upon making shipments, the shipper will have to supply full details of all films to be shipped, with the corresponding classification numbers of each picture and with the certified invoices of the manufacturer or a declaration of the manufacturers that the corresponding prints were printed in accord with the government regulations.

8. The inspection of these pictures could be started in accord with the manufacturers at a certain date and all pictures manufactured before that date might be gradually inspected and classified for export each and every time the first print of such a picture is again printed for export by the corresponding manufacturer.

9. The exporter when applying for the export license for the films, to do so with the understanding that the license can be employed only against shipment of specific censored films and the Custom House Inspectors, as hitherto, watch the packing and sealing of the cases in order to avoid any fraud.

10. The Custom House Inspector to be authorized to pick out and screen certain pictures from time to time in order to make sure that the rules are complied with.

Such an arrangement would save much time in making shipments and at the same time would do away with much work which the customs officers are now compelled to do, especially with respect to screening a great number of prints of the same subject, all of which could be avoided through the first and officially approved screening of one print.

AMONG THE EXPORTERS.

The Public Information Committee made no mistake in sending Frank J. Marion, of the Kalem company, to Spain—even if unacquainted with the language when he first landed on the other side. Mr. Marion is a keen student of human nature and has the rare ability of rapidly adapting himself to new environments, no matter how exotic. So much so that he does not hesitate in stating that he finds himself more at home in Madrid than in London. When interviewed by the writer for our international edition, Cine-Mundial, he emphasized a few points that are worth while bringing out in plain English.

For instance, he made it quite plain that from three to five copies of a meritorious subject could be marketed in Spain, and backed this statement by remarking that in his

A Typical Neighborhood Theater of Barcelona, Spain.

Madrid office there is a classified file with the addresses of 2,000 Spanish theaters.

Mr. Marion is also a very strong advocate of the directdealing commercial policy. He is opposed to the handling of American pictures in Spain through any of the European middle markets.

There is very little difference, according to Mr. Marion, between the ordinary Spaniard and the ordinary American in physical and mental make-up. Although in this respect we have to disagree in toto, and we attribute Mr. Marion's views to his faculty of assimilation; his stand reminds us of the Barcelona trade paper editor, who, for the purpose of explaining the popularity of American pictures, sarcastically remarked that the Spaniards were not "civilized enough" to comprehend and appreciate the morbid dramas of Italian origin, and found the American productions more in keeping with their way of looking at things in real life.

"In spite of the 70,000 wide-awake German business men scattered throughout the peninsula against three hundred odd Americans," said Mr. Marion, "there is no prejudice whatever against the United States. I found everybody willing to meet me half-way."

A record sales campaign on an American film in a foreign market has just been completed by Inter-Ocean Film Corporation in behalf of Paralta Plays. Within a space of two months this American brand has been placed in every South American territory. President Cromelin, of Inter-Ocean, made this announcement upon the sale Friday of Argentine and Uruguay, the last of the "open" South American countries. Louis Brock, Gus Schlessinger and Ricardo Castro, of the Inter-Ocean sales force, are credited with the speedy results attained in this campaign. Mr. Brock, further, sold last week "The Mad Lover" and "Today" to Brazil and "Parentage" to Scandinavia, while Mr. Schlessinger disposed of "The Manx-Man" and "The Victim" to Brazil, and Mr. Castro the latter picture to the West Indies. The latest Speer Carbon sales to be reported by Inter-Ocean are 30,000 to Spain; 17,000 to Cuba; 5,000 to Venezuela. Eugene H. Kaufman, handling this campaign, says that the large foreign Speer sale has attracted favorable notice from the branch of the Department of State, Washington, that follows the progress of American-made products in foreign lands.

Hiller & Wilk, Inc., selling agents for the foreign rights to Ambassador James W. Gerard's photoplay, "My Four Years in Germany," announce the sale of the following groups of territory: Argentina, Chile, Peru, Paraguay and Uruguay; Cuba, Porto Rico and Santo Domingo; Panama and the British West Indies; Hongkong and the Straits Settlements; Norway, Sweden and Denmark. While several of the territories are neutral countries, the purchasers feel certain that the various governments will allow the exhibition of the picture because of its truthful reproduction of historical events.

Sidney Garrett, president of the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., has just closed a contract with the Western Photoplay, Inc., whereby he controls the rights for the entire world, with the exception of the United States and Canada, of the new sixteen-episode serial now being made with Leah Baird playing the lead. He closed this deal on June 12 and in forty-eight hours had orders for five prints of each episode. Mr. Garrett, who has an enviable reputation for "speed," has broken all his previous records in disposing of territories in such a short space of time.

The most important foreign deal of the past week was consummated by the North American Motion Pictures, Inc., a New York distributing organization, covering Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia. According to advices received from L. R. Thomas, secretary of the North American, all the Paralta features, the new Chaplin million-dollar comedies, and the Petrova, Michel Lewis, Brenon and all other productions controlled by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit have been acquired, on an exclusive contract basis, for Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. These transactions were closed through the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, William Vogel and David P. Howells, respectively.

Ernest Shipman has made arrangements with Joseph Fisher, of Capetown, to represent him in this country in the purchase of six, seven and eight reel pictures for exploitation in South Africa, and he has also agreed to exploit Mr. Fisher's South African success in eight reels entitled "The Rose of Rhodesia," throughout the Americas. It will have an early showing in New York city.

Instead of being a prophet of ill-omen, as some of his friends in the trade appeared to regard him a couple of months ago, Sidney Garrett, if he were not so busy attending meetings, taking trips to Washington and devising plans to counteract the export crisis, could have the satisfaction of patting himself on the back and addressing his fellow exporters with the proverbial "I told you so."

L. J. Pollard, general manager of the Ebony Film Corporation, of Chicago, will be in New York some time this month. We understand that the trip is connected with the exploitation of Ebony productions in foreign markets.

News from Foreign Markets.

Gonzalo Varela, S. en C., who represents the Universal company in Mexico, is having quite a lot of trouble with other local film renters. Advices received in Cine-Mundial, our international edition, and advertisements published in the Mexican press, indicate that some of Mr. Varela's competitors are releasing Universal pictures before he is able to do so. If the exporters who met at the Astor are in earnest and really mean to co-operate with each other, a method could easily be devised to put a stop to this intolerable state of affairs. It seems unexplainable that Mexico, our nearest neighbor, and undoubtedly the most productive Latin-American market if the business were transacted under normal conditions, should be practically lost to us on account of sheer laxity of control.

Through a misinterpretation, in an interview with Arch. G. Kent, of the Central American Film Company, of Havana, published in our issue of June 8, a statement was made to the effect that a Triangle feature entitled "Don Quixote" had been purchased by Mr. Kent's firm from Hiller & Wilk. F. H. Knocke, of the Cuban Medal Film Company, Inc., calls our attention to the fact that his company has the exclusive right of exhibition and exploitation of all Triangle productions in Cuba, Porto Rico and Santo Domingo. We stand corrected.

The Ernemann projector, manufactured in Dresden, Germany, is still being advertised regularly in the trade press of practically every neutral country in the world, despite the fact that the Central Empire has been at war, under all kinds of restrictions and effectively blockaded during the past two years. The Ernemann steady advertising campaign stands as a symbol of the aggressive commercial methods that placed Germany before the war at the head of the exporting nations of the world, and it should furnish a good object lesson to some of the New York film exporters affected with "cold-feetitis."

"A Daughter of the Gods," the Fox production, with Annette Kellermann, had its premiere in Argentina at the Splendid Theater of Buenos Aires. The public and the press accorded the picture an enthusiastic reception.

According to a Barcelona trade paper, Mabel Normand's "Mickey" cost the producers $300,000. Dollars are pretty cheap in Spain at the present time, and statements like this might probably cause another drop in the rate of exchange.

Brockliss Buffet to Serve Buyers.

Commencing Thursday, June 20, Sidney Garrett, president of the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., will inaugurate a distinct innovation for foreign film buyers. Mr. Garrett will screen from 9 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening the various productions controlled by the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., for the foreign film buyers who are now in New York buying films for their respective countries.

It is Mr. Garrett's pleasure to serve a buffet luncheon to these buyers each day, right in the Brockliss projection rooms. A recess of one-half hour will be made each day, and light luncheon and other refreshments will be served to these buyers. This will save considerable time, and is a convenience that is sure to be appreciated.

A New Manual for Shippers.

AN exceedingly valuable and interesting book, specially prepared for exporters and importers, consisting of over 100 pages of instructions and rulings of the War Trade Board, blank forms, Conservation List up to date and other matter which has superseded that which appeared in Rules and Regulations No. 1, issued last November, is now off the press and in process of distribution. A copy may be obtained by those interested in export or import by applying to the War Trade Board, Washington, D. C.

Inquiries from Abroad.

The addresses of these firms may be obtained from Cine-Mundial, 516 Fifth avenue, New York. We do not assume responsibility as to the standing of the inquirers, and the usual precautions should be taken in all cases. All inquiries are received direct by the Moving Picture World and Cine-Mundial, the Spanish monthly edition of the Moving Picture World. Please mention number when writing.

British Notes

By J. B. Sutcliffe.

THE time for the compulsory closing of moving picture theaters, music halls, theaters and places of entertainment, originally planned for 9.30 p. m., has now been finally fixed at 10.30 p. m. So far as moving picture exhibitions are concerned the order will make no appreciable difference to the proprietors of theaters either in London or the provinces, as practically all manage to terminate the last house within a few minutes after 10.30 p. m. In some of the continuous performance shows a re-arrangement of the program may be necessitated to reach termination at the required time.

The fleet of automobile moving picture exhibitions, similar to those engaged in Allied propaganda work on the Continent and in neutral countries, provided by the Department of Information (Kinematograph Branch), has already started on its first tour. Beginning at Cardiff, three of the travelling kinema outfits are making their way slowly but consummately through the rural mountain districts of Wales. Another detachment is acquainting the inhabitants in the sparely populated Scottish highlands, some whom have never seen and rarely heard of the moving picture, with the latest phases of the international conflict, while a third is engaging the attention of the country side in the northern and midland counties of England. The travelling shows in each case confine their work as far as possible to villages where no permanent moving picture theater exists to avoid trespassing on the territory served by regular exhibitors.

It is rather unusual for the stage to take to the vindication of the pictures, but a sketch played at the London Coliseum does so in admirable fashion, and is the most convincing answer of the year to the few eccentric high-brows, that negligible few waiting for a cheap edition of the Kinema Commission's report. The playlet is entitled "Blame the Kinema," and stars Miss Lily Langtry (Lady de Bath).

* * *

The president of the Coliseum proprietary and also the moving spirit in several other large vaudeville enterprises, Oswald Stoll, has started out film renting and has formed an independent exchange, the Stoll Film Company. The success which Stoll, within a year, has made of the London Opera House, Oscar Hammerstein's costly failure, by converting it into a first-class moving picture theater and club for film fans, has probably been his incentive to exploit the industry in another direction. Associated with the Stoll Film Co., in a managing capacity, is F. Jeffery Bernerd, late of the Essanay Co.'s exchange. The financial backing and the company covers extensive interests in theatrical property and the statement that the company will specialize in multi-reel features and super productions suggests that many important bookings of their films will be automatically reserved in advance. The nominal capital is registered at £100,000.

A few of the country branches of the Kinematograph Exhibitors' Association have ratified the resolution of the London branch condemning the Evelyn Thaw Film, "Shadows of My Life." One local branch in Northeastern England has acquainted every chief of police in the county of its objection to the film—an indiscretion which might conceivably recoil in the form of a police censorship. Asking village constables to censor a film that has already passed the careful scrutiny of an official censor certainly indicates a schismatic state of affairs within, or another instance of the adage which ends "— where angels fear to tread."

Granger's Exclusives of Stoke-on-Trent, one of the most enterprising independent exchanges in the Midlands, have acquired United Kingdom rights of "Betsy Ross," starring Alice Brady, and "The Beloved Adventuress," featuring Kitty Gordon.

A psychological investigation of the durability of kinema impressions on the minds of school children is to be the first task of the expert committee appointed by the recent Kinema Commission to estimate the value and possibilities of education by moving pictures.

The American topical drama, "The Great Awakening," has been secured for this country by Phillips Film Co.

At the introduction of the next financial Budget in the House of Commons moving picture exhibitors, in co-operation with theatrical and other interests are to make a bold bid for a reduction of the Entertainments Tax. The "modus" will be the presentation of a memorial to the Chancellor of the Exchequer stating the case for the exhibitor. In one direction the exhibitor has a strong claim to a remission of a percentage of the duty, in his dual status as exhibitor and tax collector. In the administration of its revenue departments the State has in every instance but this to make allowance, very often substantial, for the collection of the imports. The income tax collector does no more, yet he doesn't work without wages. Why should the exhibitor?

As a rule magisterial authorities, district councils, or other local authorities responsible for the issue of licenses to exhibit moving pictures are considerate of the demands of the professional exhibitor when dealing with the application of an occasional amateur. But not so at Rhyl, the pretty Welsh holiday resort. Taking the cue from another coast town, Bridlington, the city fathers have decided to show pictures themselves this summer and have already granted themselves a license to do so in direct competition to three regular rate-paying exhibitors. Even this is not the extent of unfair competition showmen in Wales have to contend against. At Cardiff the Sunday School Union proposes to open a free kinema for young people as a counter attraction to the streets o' nights. But the license for this enterprise has yet to be granted.

The second and subsequent tasks of the expert committee appointed by the Kinema Commission to analyze the educational value of the moving picture, now sitting under the aegis of the Board of Education are (ii) Measurement of mental fatigue caused by instruction by kinematograph; (iii) Ractical comparative tests of instruction by kinematograph and ordinary methods; (iv) Subjects in which better results would be yielded; (v) Cultivation of ideals in social conduct, tastes and imagination by moving pictures; (vi) Co-operation between school and kinema; (vii) The most effective and economical methods of exhibiting moving pictures in schools; (viii) The best method of obtaining suitable films for educational purposes. The recommendations of the committee of investigation are expected to have far reaching effects and influence with the Board of Education, and it would not surprise the industry here if the outcome is not some definite scheme for installing the moving picture permanently in the school.

Fox Managers on Their Way Home

Fourth Annual Convention Closes After Week of Discussion of Company's Work and Policy.

BRANCH managers and executives of the Fox Film Corporation of this country and Canada and other foreign countries returned last week to their homes after concluding the business of the fourth annual convention of the Fox Film Corporation. The sessions were voted the most successful and enthusiastic of any so far held by the Fox forces.

At the closing meeting Friday, the managers gave Mr. Fox a beautifully illuminated resolution expressing their pride in his patriotic efforts during the past year. This was presented by Harry F. Campbell, of Boston, New England district manager. It was done in brilliant colors and across the top bore a group, in colors, of the flags of the United States and the Allies. The resolution, which was inclosed in a frame, follows:

"We, the Fox Film Corporation Managers of the United States and Canada and the executives of the Home Office, assembled in annual convention at the Hotel Biltmore, New York City, June third, nineteen hundred and eighteen, take this opportunity to express our deep and sincere appreciation of our peerless leader, William Fox, whose humanitarian acts have won him the love and respect of the nation; a man who knows no race or creed, one who gladly extends his hand to the poor as well as the rich, to the humble as well as the powerful. To him such acts are solely prompted by his love for his fellow-men.

"Unmindful of his personal interests, he made cheerful sacrifice in order that he might prove the guiding spirit of the Jewish War Relief Fund, the American Federation of Jewish Charities, the Knights of Columbus, the Liberty Loan and Second War Fund Drive for the American Rer Cross in their campaigns successfully conducted throughout Greater New York.

"In further expression of our love, respect and admiration and loyalty to him, it is our sincere prayer that he may long be spared to continue such worthy and noble deeds."

In responding to the presentation of the resolution, Mr. Fox expressed his thanks to the men for the token of their esteem and also voiced his gratitude for their loyalty and energies in his behalf.

Later in the closing session Mr. Fox gave a brief address, in which he outlined the policy of the corporation for the coming year and called on the managers for renewed industry.

"Our ambition this coming year," he said, "is to deliver the greatest and best motion pictures that can be produced. If you managers will show the same energy and the same ambition in selling these productions that the home office has in making them, three things will result:

"First, you will help the Government of the United States, because you will increase the profits of this corporation and thus enable our Government to take more money in taxes.

"Second, you will increase your own value to this corporation, and this increase in value will redound to your material benefit.

"Third, you will benefit the Fox Film Corporation, for if you work hard enough you will make the name of the Fox Film Corporation resound throughout the world as the makers of the greatest motion pictures in all history.

"Last year at our convention I spoke on the topic, 'Opportunity.' I want to reiterate that message. The opportunities for men in the service of this corporation are boundless. Your future depends entirely on yourselves, for this corporation is eager to find men who are capable of filling $15,000, $20,000 and $25,000-a-year jobs.

"Now, in closing this convention I want to thank you all for your loyal support during the last year, and I pray to God that you and I shall all be spared for our work, so that we shall meet here again a year hence."

Sidney Drew Now Counted as Dead

Heroic Actor's Aeroplane Fell Within Enemy Lines—Was in Combat With Seven Enemy Machines.

IT has been definitely learned that Corporal Sidney Rankin Drew, of the Franco-American Air Corps, was killed in combat with seven enemy machines above the German lines, according to the Gazette des Ardennes.

Corporal Drew had been missing for three weeks, but his friends had maintained the hope that he had been taken prisoner. He was the son of Sidney Drew. Both father and son are known wherever pictures are seen and millions will feel a loss in Sidney Drew and a deep sympathy with his father.

Sidney Rankin Drew, 27 years old, was a graduate of a military school, but until a year ago had devoted his time to motion picture work. In this field he became well known both as a director and actor. He left this country a year ago to become an ambulance driver in France. This becoming too "tame," he joined the French flying corps. His father lives at 876 Park avenue, New York.

Young Drew abandoned an annual income of $27,000 and a rapidly developing career as a moving picture director to enter the army.

"I feel that my boy's gift of his life was a wonderful thing," his father said shortly after hearing the sad news. "Of course the publication of his death notice from Paris makes it almost certain that he has been lost and it has broken me badly."

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of June 16 at New York's Principal Motion Picture Houses.

THE RIALTO.—Paramount screen version of Mrs. Humphry Ward's novel, "Missing," was the chief feature of the Rialto program for the week of June 16. Thomas Meighan, Robert Gordon and Sylvia Breamer have the principal roles. A scenic, a comedy and the Rialto Animated Magazine were also shown. Annie Rosner and Emmanuel List were the soloists.

THE RIVOLI.—Douglas Fairbanks in his new Artcraft comedy, "Say! Young Fellow," headed the bill at the Rivoli. Joseph Henaberry wrote the story and directed the picture. Marjorie Daw and Frank Campeau are the leading support. The Rivoli Animated Pictorial, a scenic, an educational and a comic completed the pictures. Gladys Rice and Greek Evans were the vocalists.

THE STRAND.—A double feature bill at the Strand consisted of the Prima color production, "Our Invincible Navy," and Mabel Normand in the Goldwyn picture, "The Venus Model." H. R. Durant wrote the Goldwyn story. The Topical Review was also shown. Mory Zentay was the soloist.

FORTY-FOURTH STREET THEATER.—Eleventh week of "Hearts of the World.'

LYRIC.—Fourth week of "Pershing's Crusaders."

PARK.—Third week of "Sealed Orders."

BROADWAY.—Mae Murray in "Her Body in Bond."

NEW ORLEANS MEN AID DIAMOND PRODUCERS.

R. M. Chisholm, president of the Diamond Film Company, and owner of the Diamond theater in New Orleans, in which the Diamond Comedies are given pre-release showings, reports that local citizens, business interests and the press are lending unusual encouragement to film companies desiring to locate in that city. The co-operation has facilitated the work of filming the Diamond Comedies. The use of one of the finest mansions in the South was obtained for the taking of interior scenes for "Way Up in Society," the first release, while historic Audubon Park provided many beautiful exterior locations for the company in its productions of "Her Ambitious Ambition" and "His Matrimonial Moans." A great variety of scenery is to be found within a short radius of the studio and advantage of the opportunity is being taken in the selection of locations for forthcoming Diamond releases.

KERSHAW OF MANITOBA VISITS U-CITY.

In a whirlwind visit to Universal City as the guest of the California Film Exchange, R. Kershaw, president of the Provincial Exhibitors' Association of Manitoba, recently acquired an intimate view of activities at the world's film capital, which he will carry back with him to his fellow exhibitors in the Dominion.

The Canadian exhibitor, while calling upon David Bershon, manager of the California Film Exchanges at Los Angeles, expressed a keen desire to see motion pictures in the making. A trip to Universal City followed.

Mr. Kershaw spoke in a highly optimistic fashion of the motion picture business from the Canadian exhibitor's standpoint. In spite of the inroads which the war has made upon Canada's man power, business has never been better. The relaxation afforded by the screen has been one of the most important factors in sustaining the morale of our Northern neighbors.

TRAVERS VALE IN FILM ADVISORY BOARD.

Director Travers Vale, who has directed many big successes for World Pictures, and who is now engaged on another big World Picture, has been named as a member of the advisory board, division of films, United States government. Charles S. Hart is the director of this division. The advisory board members will have much to do directing the taking and distributing of the government's propaganda films.

Exposition Auditorium vs. Theaters

San Francisco Managers Justly Fear Competition If Big Hall Becomes a City Show Place.

ALARMED at the plans being made for the use of the great Exposition Auditorium for theatrical purposes the directors of the United Motion Picture Industries of Northern California met recently to discuss ways and means for forestalling action along this line. One of the officials of a large city in the Northwest was in San Francisco recently to interest the officials of that city and Oakland in the formation of a circuit of municipal auditoriums, over which attractions could be booked from a central office. As the local auditorium has a seating capacity of more than twelve thousand, its frequent use for theatrical performances would have a serious effect on the attendance at moving picture shows.

The local film men have taken up the matter with Mayor James Rolph, Jr., and have explained to him that there are showhouses in the Bay City capable of handling almost any attraction that visits the Pacific Coast. Some of the cities having municipal auditoriums have no suitable show houses, but such is not the case here. Just what action the local officials will take on joining the proposed circuit has not been indicated.

The film men who attended the recent meeting were Louis Reichert, manager of the Metro branch; Meyer J. Cohen, manager of the local office of the George Kleine System; Herman Wobber, division manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Eugene Roth, of the California theater; Sam Levin and Louis R. Greenfield, prominent local exhibitors.

"Lafayette! We Come!"

Perret's First Series of Patriotic Pictures Starts With Echo of Pershing's Famous Speech—Is a Love Story.

THE title for the first of the series of the patriotic photoplays being produced independently by Leonce Perret, the noted French directory and producer, will be "Lafayette! We Come!" The title and story are based on the laconic speech of General Pershing at the Tomb of Lafayette at the time of Pershing's arrival in Paris. It is said that his speech is the shortest and probably the most impressive in history.

"Lafayette! We Come!" is the first motion picture novel to receive the sanction of the French Government. Every official cooperation is being extended to Mr. Perret in order to insure the success of the film. The production when completed will be shown to French and United States officials, who will be invited to witness this new and subtle propaganda the effect of which should be greater because of its tremendous entertaining value. At that time the method of distribution will be decided.

Although the story of "Lafayette! We Come!" has to do with a phase of the war, Mr. Perret has woven a throbbing story of love and intrigue around it. E. K. Lincoln and Dolores Cassinelli will enact the principal roles and an excellent cast will support them.

Nashville Church Bell Sounds Prayer Call

At First Tap Each Noon All Machines of Crescent Company Stop and Slide on Screen Suggests Meditation.

THAT the hearts of the people of this nation are in the world war at all times and that they are relying upon the Almighty to bring victory to the arms of the allies and thereby establish world peace have been forcefully demonstrated in Nashville. Every day at noon the big bell in the tower of the First Presbyterian church sounds a call to the people to stop for a moment in the hurry and bustle of business to commune with God in a moment of prayer and ask for a speedy end to the world conflict and preservation of humanity and democracy.

At the first tap of the bell each day the machines in all houses of the Crescent Amusement Company are instantly stopped and a card is displayed upon the screen asking that every patron bow for a moment of prayer. The policy has met with the approval of the audiences, and marks the beginning of a new era of greater faith in God as well as emphasizing the fact that places of amusement are splendid agencies for diverting the minds of the people from their daily routine and bringing about a relaxation of the nervous strain.

The inauguration of this plan by the Crescent has been widely commended.

Washington Motion Picture Company Elects

Allen Meisenheimer Chosen President and Judge W. W. Zent and C. J. Ward Vice Presidents.

AT the annual meeting of the Washington Motion Picture Corporation held in Spokane recently, the following directors were chosen: Allen Meisenheimer, Judge W. W. Zent, S. A. Mitchell, C. J. Ward and Lawrence Trimble.

The following officers were elected: Allen Meisenheimer, president; Judge W. W. Zent and C. J. Ward, vice presidents, and Harold Hooker, secretary.

"The production of our first feature photoplay is well under way and we are already considering a scenario for our second production," was the report of Lawrence Trimble, director of productions. "More than 1,000 feet of picture has been developed in our laboratory and inspected in our projecting room. We know now beyond any possibility of doubt that the light and atmospheric conditions in this locality are favorable for motion picture photography."

Miss Honor Wright Stewart

J. P. SEEBURG, maker of the Seeburg Organs, declares that while he is not in the motion picture business he has a star of considerable magnitude whom he wishes to present to the consideration of motion picture exhibitors. The lady's name is Honor Wright Stewart, and she is an organist of considerable ability and temperament. Miss Stewart has been playing Seeburg organs since that instrument first made a bid for public favor and she plays them so skillfully and so delightfully that the Seeburg folks have kept her busy ever since.

Miss Honor Wright Stewart.

Speaking of her engagements, Mr. Seeburg informs the Moving Picture World that Miss Stewart has been heard principally in the South, appearing on the Wells' and the Loew circuits. She has also appeared in the Bijou of Birmingham, Ala., quite recently, the Academy of Music of Charleston, S. C.; the Strand and the Isis of Richmond, Va., and the Criterion, Strand and Grand of Atlanta, as well as a number of others, the names of which Mr. Seeburg did not recall.

An opportunity will presently be given New York exhibitors to hear and judge the talents of Miss Stewart, for Mr. Seeburg has arranged for her to demonstrate a Seeburg organ which is being installed at the warerooms of the Kramer Organ Company, 727 Seventh avenue, New York. The date of this demonstration has not been determined, but it will be announced presently and should be an event worth looking forward to.

ELLIOTT DEXTER RENEWS LASKY CONTRACT.

Elliott Dexter has cast his fortunes for another year with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, it is announced. Mr. Dexter will probably remain at the West Coast studio for some time to come.

Just what is planned for him in future productions of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has not been divulged, but he will undoubtedly portray some highly important roles in the foremost offerings of the organization during the year to come.

ROTHACKER STRONG FOR RED CROSS.

Notwithstanding the large contributions made by the Rathacker Film Manufacturing Company and its employees to the Red Cross fund during the recent drive, that corporation has decided to take out memberships in the Red Cross for each individual member of the organization and to have a copy of the Red Cross magazine delivered at their homes. The idea is a good one and worthy of being followed by every concern in the motion picture business.

Laemmle Recognizes "Vacuum Pan"

Sees Type in Harrison's Sketch of Empty Headed Advice-Giver—Warns Exhibitors to Look Before Booking.

THAT Louis Reeves Harrison's shots at "Vacuum Pan" in his recent Moving Picture World article entitled "The Funniest Thing on Earth" have met with the approval of at least one of the big film producers is evident from the hearty indorsement given it by Carl Laemmle of Universal.

"Vacuum Pan" is the name with which Harrison dubs the individual who so earnestly advises the exhibitor to regard his theater as being of secondary importance and instead to concentrate his advertising upon the various high-salaried stars who appear in the pictures he presents.

"Never before has the moving picture industry witnessed so amazing a change as has taken place during the last few weeks," declared Mr. Laemmle. "Two months ago, the feature program was practically the dominating factor. Today the big special production has swept the industry like wildfire and has just about relegated the program to the discard.

"This has resulted in serious injury to those exhibitors who are tied up solidly with a program or who have been depending upon the popularity of a few stars. The coming of such specials as 'The Kaiser' found these showmen up against a situation with which they were unable to cope, or else which cost them heavily before they were able to meet it.

"Had 'Vacuum Pan' ever been an exhibitor he would have known what it is to popularize a star until the latter becomes a genuine box office asset in his community—only to find the rentals of the pictures in which this star appears boosted sky-high. Or else he might have found that this star's popularity had waned overnight.

"Universal has produced a greater variety of subjects than any other film organization in the industry—but it has religiously kept away from high-priced stars. Foreseeing the transition that is now taking place we refused to adopt a policy which, in the long run, would profit none save the star.

"The coming fall season will see the market flooded with the most wonderful special productions the industry has yet known. Practically every film producing organization is now at work on one or more. There is every possibility that the overproduction of specials will force down the rental prices of all except the very cream, but the exhibitor who is tied up with a star or a program will be unable to avail himself of the box office opportunities in these specials, unless he first shelves the pictures for which he unwisely contracted a long time ago.

"The one absolutely safe rule for the exhibitor to follow, if he wants to play safe is that of building up prestige for his theater, and of 'Looking Before Booking.'"

Three Nashville Theaters Open Sunday

Mayor Still Obstinate, But Does Not Molest Patriotic Sabbath Shows—No Fine for Wassman.

WHILE Mayor William A. Gupton still obstinately persists in opposing the various petitions and requests to permit the moving picture houses of Nashville to open on Sundays, local managers nevertheless showed pictures in Nashville on Sunday, June 9. Three of the largest uptown houses, the Knickerbocker, Fifth Avenue, and Strand, opened their doors from 2 to 10 p. m., and, although not permitted to charge admission, a plan to furnish amusement and at the same time assist the Government was perfected by charging one thrift stamp admission. Each patron bought a thrift stamp at the box office, and, of course, was admitted free, being allowed to keep the thrift stamp.

While the managers realized no profits whatsoever the moral effect of running the houses on Sunday is expected to create a still further call for Sunday amusement on the part of the Nashville public. In fact, employees gave their services free, and the managers were under no expense in running the films.

The people are actually demanding pictures. As an evidence of the popularity of the Sunday opening over $1,000 in thrift stamps were sold at the Sunday shows, with only three houses running, meaning that 4,000 people attended the performances.

Expressions of commendation were heard on all sides over the plan, both as a method of furnishing entertainment and as a means of aiding the thrift stamp campaign.

In view of the extreme popularity of the Sunday thrift shows it is probable that the policy will be followed each Sunday even though the managers are the losers. Toney Sudekum, William Wassman, and Carson Bradford were the managers who patriotically tendered the use of their respective houses.

The case of William Wassman, manager of the Knickerbocker theater, Nashville, arrested for Sunday opening, has been dismissed with no fine assessed in City Court. Mr. Wassman opened the Knickerbocker several weeks ago in Nashville, charging no admission, but inviting patrons to contribute anything they desired. He was charged with violation of the Sunday opening laws, but the case was thrown out of court.

Forbids Indianapolis to Tax Operators

Circuit Court Says City Lacks Authority to Make Them or Actors or Stage Hands Pay License Fee.

IN a decision handed down Tuesday, June 4, Judge Louis B. Ewbank, of the Marion County Circuit Court, Indianapolis, held null and void the provisions of Section 748 of the General Municipal Code of 1917, which requires operators of motion picture machines to pay a license fee of $5.

The case has been pending since the first part of last December, when the city authorities attempted to force all of the operators in the city to pay a license. When it became known that the police were to arrest those who failed, Robert J. Gavin, a local operator, surrendered himself and asked that his case be made a test case.

When Gavin was tried in the City Court, Judge James E. Deery ruled that the section of the ordinance was constitutional and fined Gavin $1 and costs for failing to obtain a license. The local operators' union then appealed the case to the Circuit Court.

"There is as much implied power to require each stage hand who works in a theater or each actor who appears in any play to pay a license fee of $5 as there is to require such payment by each operator of a moving picture machine," said Judge Ewbank, "which amounts to saying that there is no statutory authority for the imposition of such a license tax on either the stage hand, actor or moving picture machine operator.

"The power of the city to enact this ordinance is not measured by what the council or this court may think ought to be the extent of its authority to license and tax occupations, but it is limited and defined by the terms of the statute conferring power to license and tax occupations."

Hoffman Outlines Future Activities

Following Recovery of His Health Film Man Will Be Open to Acquisition of Feature Pictures.

M. H. HOFFMAN, who has so long been identified with large interests in the motion picture industry, is preparing to enter a hospital to undergo a serious operation. At present he is confined to his home while the physicians are in consultation and endeavoring to further diagnose his malady. Before leaving his offices Mr. Hoffman made the following statement:

"I disposed of my interest in Foursquare Pictures and withdrew from that organization solely because of my health. Had I been well I should have bought, not sold. The arrangements provided for my purchasing the New York Exchange of Foursquare, which I will now own outright, but the active manager will be Hy Gainsborg.

"As purely a smaller part of my future operations is to be the exchange, which I shall conduct under the name of the M. H. Hoffman Exchange, I shall devote my time after the recovery of my health to larger motion picture operations.

"I shall be open to the acquiring of feature pictures—in conjunction with Mr. Gainsborg—but they must be strictly of the finest quality. Whether I shall start another organization or affiliate myself with one of the existing large companies will depend largely upon my decision on those offers now before me."

FRANCES MARION SIGNS YEAR'S CONTRACT.

Frances Marion, one of the gifted and successful scenarioists and photoplaywrights, has signed a contract to write for Artcraft and Paramount for a year.

During the past year Miss Marion has written almost exclusively for Mary Pickford and among her notable recent successes have been "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Stella Maris," "Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley," "M'liss" and "How Could You, Jean?" Her latest is an adaptation of the famous stage success, "Captain Kidd, Jr."

Miss Marion was formerly a newspaper woman.

Metro Rents Part of Biograph Studio

Producers Find Extra Space Necessary to Accommodate the Increasing Number of Players Joining Their Standard.

METRO has rented the top floor of the Biograph studio for the use of Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., stars and companies. This was found to be a necessary measure on account of the firm's many activities, which have expanded to such an extent that there is no longer room for them in the East and West coast studios, the capacities of which are crowded to the utmost and room had to be found for the stars now under contract.

Viola Dana will be one of the players to work in the "deepest Bronx" location, her new production. "Flower of the Dusk," a picturization of Myrtle Reed's famous novel, will be made there under the direction of John H. Collins. Emily Stevens will probably make "Kildare of Storm" there under the direction of Edwin Carewe. "Kildare of Storm" is a screen version of Eleanor Mercein Kelly's novel of the same name, published by the Century company. Whether Mme. Nazimova and Ethel Barrymore, in their forthcoming productions, will be at the Biograph or Metro's home studio at 3 West Sixty-first street is as yet undecided. David Thompson, assistant to Maxwell Karger, Metro's production manager, will take charge of Metro's "extension studio" at the Biograph, and will take his own working crew with him. Leander De Cordova will for the present take Mr. Thompson's place at the Metro studio.

Exterior locations for Mme. Nazimova's Screen Classics, Inc., production de luxe, "L'Occident," by Henry Kistemaecker, have already been chosen by Albert Capellani, who is handling the making of the production. Assisting him will be Henry Kolker, who is learning motion picture direction under Mr. Capellani's guidance.

Mme. Nazimova is at present superintending the creation of the fascinating costumes she will wear as Hassouna, the Bedouin girl, whose stormy fortunes form the basis of the story of "L'Occident." Charles Bryant will again be seen in the leading masculine role.

Ralph W. Ince, who has been specially engaged to direct Ethel Barrymore in "Our Mrs. McChesney," is completing his cast. Miss Barrymore is returning from a season of successes on the speaking stage to further screen triumphs.

"To Hell With the Kaiser," the Screen Classics, Inc., multiple reel patriotic feature directed by George Irving, with Lawrence Grant and Olive Tell in the leading roles, is practically ready for release.

Edith Storey, who has returned from Metro's Western studio at Hollywood, Cal., choosing her costumes and aiding her director, Herbert Blache, in choosing her cast for the Lois Zellner screen romance that has been written for her.

May Allison will soon finish work in "A Successful Adventure," an original story by June Mathis, which Harry Franklin is directing.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are deep in the preparation of "Both Members," the original story by Luther A. Reed, which Charles J. Brabin is directing.

Viola Dana begins work at once at the Biograph studio on "Flower of the Dusk," the Myrtle Reed novel, which has been adapted for the screen by John H. Collins, who will direct the production. Heart interest is the keynote of this story, in which Miss Dana will have the dual role of mother and daughter.

Emmy Wehlen is enjoying a brief vacation until Miss Allison's picture, "A Successful Adventure," is completed, as her next feature photodrama will be directed by Harry L. Franklin.

On the West coast, Metro stars and companies are equally active. Harold Lockwood is preparing "A King in Khaki," under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer, who adapted Henry Kitchell Webster's novel of the same name for the screen. Bert Lytell has begun the production of "Boston's Blackie's Little Pal," from the story by Jack Boyle in the Red Book magazine. E. Mason Hopper is directing this attractive feature. Mr. Lytell has completed work on "No Man's Land,' a screen adaptation by himself and A. S. Le Vino of the novel by Louis Joseph Vance, under the direction of Mr. Hopper.

WORLD WILL RELEASE "INSIDE THE LINES."

"Inside the Lines," the famous screen version of the play of the same title with Lewis Stone starred, will be distributed by World Pictures, the release date set for the near future. This announcement is made in order to settle who will distribute this picture. It has come to the attention of World officials that several persons are claiming they have the rights of distribution of this unusual feature.

Fineman Gets Ready to "Treat 'Em Rough"

BERNIE FINEMAN has enlisted with the Tanks, and is now learning to "treat 'em rough" at Gettysburg. The "Filmites" in the Tank Service, including Herb Howe and Joe Reddy, welcomed Bernie. Fineman resigned from Famous Players-Lasky Corporation some three months ago to conduct a special advertising campaign for the government, more specifically the Ordnance Department.

The problem which confronted him was the securing of negro labor for the Air Nitrates Corporation, at Muscle Shoals, Ala. His display advertising campaign throughout the state, and the daily paper issued from Muscle Shoals did the work so well that the surrounding cities and states insisted that his efforts be confined to the immediate locality since the entire population commenced to migrate toward Muscle Shoals.

Bernard P. Fineman.

Incidentally Bernie had two moving picture theaters built and installed at the plant, for the white and colored employees respectively, and after providing good amusement advertised it so successfully as one of the advantages of dwelling at Muscle Shoals that the officials in other localities singled out this attraction for the basis of attack. Fineman had to journey to Washington to explain his methods and receive the final sanction from the chief authority—and after planning and setting in motion a subsequent campaign, although his occupation exempted him from draft, he came to New York to enlist.

Mr. Fineman was formerly associate editor of Progress, Advance, the house organ of Famous Players, and expanded and greatly improved the scope of this publication.

Prior to this connection he was connected with the Fox publicity staff, had been advertising and publicity manager of Art Dramas, Inc., and sales manager for the Jackson Film Company.

Ralph Ince to Direct Ethel Barrymore

Will Make One Subject for Metro Pictures Prior to Inaugurating His Own Company.

METRO, by arrangement with Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, has engaged Ralph W. Ince to direct Ethel Barrymore in "Our Mrs. McChesney," a picturization of the star's stage success of a season ago. The directing of "Our Mrs. McChesney" will be the only work undertaken by Mr. Ince before the inauguration of his own producing company for the preparation of feature films. He has been influenced in accepting the engagement by his admiration for the art of Miss Barrymore and his friendship for Richard A. Rowland, Metro's president.

Mr. Ince has recently finished the direction of Mme. Petrova in feature photodramas scheduled for early release, and of Lucile Lee Stewart in "The Eleventh Commandment," which he himself wrote. Among his recent pictures have been "Woman Eternal" for Pathe, "Today," with Florence Reed, and "The Argyle Case."

ALASKA HAS SIX MONTHS OF DAYLIGHT.

Dustin Farnum, star of Sherman Productions, has recently received a letter from a member of the Chamber of Commerce of Nome, Alaska, inviting him to locate his studio at that thriving northern metropolis. Among the virtues of that city, as recounted in the letter, is the fact that Mr. Farnum would have six months of sunshine, twenty-four hours to the day, which would afford continuous working capacity for the filming of his features. As a business man this appeals to Mr. Farnum, but as an actor this six months' continuous sunshine thing is appalling.

Jack Marks Opens Opera House

Is a 1,400-Seat House in Clarksburg, a Town of 11,000 Population and Cost $150,000.

ONE of the finest motion picture theaters in the South threw open its doors on Monday, June 10, when a special invitation performance was followed by the first public showing of Goldwyn's "Joan of Plattsburg," starring Mabel Normand, in Jack Marks's new $150,000 cinema palace, the Opera House, at Clarksburg, W. Va. The Opera House succeeds as the premier screen theater of Clarksburg the Orpheum, also built and owned by Mr. Marks.

Clarksburg, with 11,000 population, points with a show of pardonable pride to the Opera House. Its seating capacity is 1,400, 800 of which is on the main floor. Every seat in the house is 22 inches wide, insuring the maximum of comfort for patrons. The stage is 40 by 70 feet, big enough to accommodate any road attraction, no matter how pretentious. There are fourteen dressing rooms and one large chorus room, big enough for seventy-five members of a company.

Jack Marks.

The lobby is gorgeously wrought. It is finished in Italian marble, with a floor of black and white tile. The screen is of gold fibre, adjusted to a throw of 115 feet from two motor-driven Simplex machines installed in a concrete projection booth 14 feet square. All of the seats are leather upholstered and there is not a post in the house.

Music will be supplied by an orchestra and a large organ. The house is decorated throughout in ivory and pale green. A pea green velour curtain covers the big asbestos drop.

The Opera House is the twenty-fourth amusement place Mr. Marks has either built or owned or both. He began in the show business at Anderson, Ind., with a house seating 198. From that time success followed success. His Orpheum at Clarksburg has shown more than 700 pictures to satisfied audiences.

George Larkin, Hurt, Is Recovering

Star of Diando-Pathe Serial Injures an Artery in His Leg While Putting Over a Stunt.

GEORGE LARKIN, now working on "Wolf Face," a Diando-Pathe serial, has been laid up for a few days following an injury to an artery of his leg. The accident came while putting over one of his death-defying stunts that provide thrills and make a serial curl hair in a dozen or more exciting parts. Larkin has been through many tight squeaks in his film experience, and a slight bruise, so long as no bones are broken, is no great matter to him. That is why he failed to take the proper care of what he supposed was of no great importance when, after a big scene, he noticed a pain in his leg. A week or so later it began to swell, and a doctor informed him that an artery had been injured, and clots of blood had formed in the tissues. It was necessary to operate to remove the local irritation. This demanded a trip to the hospital and a stay of several days in bed. He is doing well at this writing, and, unless complications set in, will be at work again by the time it is in print.

Mr. Larkin has startled many by his stunts, especially for serial pictures, among them the notable "Grant, the Hotel Reporter" series made by Kalem a few years ago. He is a young man who doesn't hesitate to take a Steve Brodie in the line of his profession. He gets away with ticklish jobs by his physical ability to handle himself. An athlete, he is always in the pink of condition mentally and physically, otherwise he would have to take a less exacting job.

Pathe to Issue Official War Review

Will Be Released Weekly and Contain the Real History of the War on All Fronts.

ALMOST important announcement is that coming this week from the Committee on Public Information and carrying the news that Pathe Exchange, Inc., has been selected as the distributor of the Allies' Official War Review, presented by the Committee on Public Information.

A letter from Charles S. Hart, director of the division of films, reads:

"Editor Moving Picture World.

"Dear Sir—This letter is officially to announce to you that the distribution of the 'Allies' Official War Review,' issued weekly, presented by the Committee on Public Information through this division, has been awarded to Pathe Exchange, Inc.

"The award was made on a competitive basis, the greater percentage of money taken in returns by this division to be used by it for the production and distribution of film information, a vitally essential factor in helping to win the war.

"The rental prices charged to exhibitors will be approved by the director of the Division of Films. Such co-operation between this committee and Pathe will insure a charge that is in every way a reasonable one.

"This information presents the mathematically certain conclusion that there can be no commercialism in the handling of the 'Allies' Official War Review,' and gives assurance to exhibitors who are showing these patriotic films.

"CHARLES S. HART,
"Director Division of Films."

The first release of the Allies' Official War Review will be on June 24. It will contain exclusive pictures of the American, British, French and Italian fronts and the war activities of all allied nations. It will be handled by Pathe as a feature of tremendous importance, coming as it does with the official stamp of the allied governments.

Up-to-the-minute, exclusive, official and pictorial, it combines every element demanded by the public and every element necessary to the important work of presenting to the people of the civilized world the real history of the war as the great events are chronicled. It has the appeal of patriotism to every one who sees it and to every exhibitor who plays it.

The Allies' Official War Review is the first of its kind ever issued and should be a star feature on every picture program in the United States and allied countries.

Fox to Organize East for War Work

Named by New War Service Association As Vice-Chairman for Territory from Atlantic to Mississippi.

AT the first meeting of the executive committee of the Motion Picture War Service Association in Los Angeles, William Fox was unanimously selected vice-chairman to be in charge of all work connected with the organization east of the Mississippi River. The motion was made by Jesse L. Lasky.

The following telegram in reply was read to the members by J. Gordon Edwards, a member of the board of directors of the Motion Picture War Service Association:

"I have your wire relative to the organization named Motion Picture War Service Association, formed in Los Angeles. I think it an excellent idea to mobilize our industry for all war charities and other efforts to win the war. I give my full support to any such worthy movement, and will appreciate further details so as to enable me to give it vigorous attention. During the recent American Red Cross Drive, in which I served as captain of Allied Theatrical and Motion Picture team, our industry raised more than $1,000,000, showing plainly that the stage and motion picture are an essential in the winning of the war. Congratulations on the fine spirit of our associates in Los Angeles.

"WILLIAM FOX."

L. H. KEENE, LOEW MANAGER, AT CAMP MEADE.

Lionel H. Keene, for some time manager of Loew's Bijou theater at Birmingham, Ala., has been called to the colors and is now with a machine gun company of the 313th Infantry at Camp Meade, Md. Fred G. Weis of New York succeeds him in the management of the Bijou. Mr. Keene was an enthusiastic motion picture man and through his efforts the Bijou was one of Birmingham's most popular picture houses. Three weeks prior to being called in the draft Mr. Keene was married to a well-known Southern girl.

Feature Comedies, Advises Manufacturer

Charles H. Christie, on Business Trip in East, Declares Exhibitors Overlook an Important Item in Business Getting.

AN interesting visitor to the Moving Picture World offices during the present week was Charles H. Christie, treasurer of the Christie Film Company, Los Angeles. The object of Mr. Christie's trip East is to visit the independent exchanges which are handling Christie comedies and to take steps to push this brand. He calls particular attention to the attractive stills issued by his company, and contends that the average theater does not play up comedies sufficiently in its program, lobby displays or advertising, and he reports considerable success in inducing exhibitors to give more attention to this feature.

Charles H. Christie.

Mr. Christie is enthusiastic over the business being done by Christie comedies. He reports that it is continually increasing, calling attention to the fact that a number of the most prominent houses in the country, including the Rivoli in New York, are presenting their productions.

In August the Christies will issue their one hundredth comedy, the pictures having been issued weekly without interruption of service. He attributes the success of this brand to a large extent to the fact that they present clean comedy without slapstick based on amusing situations and complications that could really happen to real people, and that their players are attractive human beings, mostly young people good to look at. Further, on account of the large number of their players they are able to vary the casts so as to provide motion picture audiences with variety and not to tire them with the same stars every week.

Mr. Christie on this trip has visited Boston and Philadelphia in addition to New York, and expects to return to Los Angeles about July 1, visiting a number of exchange centers in the meantime, including Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Atlanta, and Oklahoma City.

Williams Has Animated Filing List

Metro's West Coast Casting Director Is Forming Library of Collected "Bits" of Company's Players.

WHAT he believes to be the only film album of players in existence is the proud possession of Horace Williams, casting director at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood. Mr. Williams, who before he entered the motion picture industry was a practicing attorney, is a stickler for efficiency, and his present position also requires an elaborate filing system as an aid to his memory in cataloguing the great number of screen players according to their specialties and qualifications.

Mr. Williams some time ago hit upon the innovation of making use of the various odds and ends of film that invariably are left over after a big production has been cut, titled and assembled in its final form. So the cutting room turns over to him leftover pieces of scenes that fail to get into the completed picture. These invariably contain acting "bits," by supporting players as well as some of the work of the star.

Thus far Mr. Williams has collected nearly 200 strips of film, ranging in length from 15 to 70 feet, showing actors and actresses in action. When his collection has progressed further the Metro casting director intends to classify the players into 1,000-foot reels. He will have a reel of "heavies"; one of character men; one of character women; one of ingenues, and so on, for instant reference in the projecting room.

Courtenay Foote

SOME years ago when the screen was young a conspicuous figure in the silent drama was Courtenay Foote, then one of the best of prominent stage players to forsake the footlights for the camera. His work in Vitagraph productions, notably "The Reincarnation of Karma," and the Dickens stories was replete with dramatic strength, polish and natural charm. Later he joined the Majestic forces acting under the direction of D. W. Griffith in "Home, Sweet Home" and other of the master's productions, followed by what is considered his finest achievement — the young monk in Lois Weber's "Hypocrites."

Courtenay Foote.

Now he is appearing as leading man to Lina Cavalieri in the Paramount production of "Love's Conquest," founded on Victorien Sardou's "Gismonda," the play made famous by Sarah Bernhardt, released June 2. Mr. Foote excels in roles like Almerio in the Sardou drama, for all pictorial quality of his acting is given ample scope, besides allowing full sway to the deeper, stronger passions of human nature.

Yet by no means is he confined to portrayals of this kind, his recent stage success as Terence O' Keefe in Oliver Morosco's production of "Upstairs and Down," a part he created at the Cort theater, attesting his versatility. Prior to that he spent a season with George Arliss in "Disraeli" and was a member of Charles Frohman's all-star revival of "Oliver Twist" in a cast which included Nat C. Goodwin, Constance Collier, Olive Wyndham, Marie Doro and Lyn Harding.

With two strong modes of expression to choose from, it is no wonder that Courtenay Foote never remains long with either. Both stage and screen claim him.

WILLIAM FOX WILL DISMISS PRO-GERMANS.

In line with his energetic patriotism as shown in his successful campaigns for the Jewish War Relief Fund, the Knights of Columbus, and the Red Cross, William Fox, at the close of the fourth annual convention last week at the Hotel Biltmore of the Fox Film Corporations exchange managers and executives, took steps toward the discharge from the Fox organization of any employee who is not 100 per cent. American.

Mr. Fox called on all the branch managers present to submit confidential reports as to anybody whom they even suspected of not being true Americans. These reports, Mr. Fox announced, would be thoroughly investigated, and if any employee in the Fox forces should be found to be even slightly pro-German he would be dismissed.

KOLKER BECOMES PUPIL OF CAPELLANI.

Henry Kolker, one of America's prominent actors, has decided to add to his attainments by becoming a director. He will learn every angle under the best possible auspices, as assistant to Albert Capellani, at the Metro studio. Mr. Kolker will be associated with Mr. Capellani in the production of Mme. Nazimova's "L'Occident," a screen version of the play by Henri Kistemaecker.

Mr. Kolker has already begun his work by interviewing players for the production. His own experience on both screen and stage has given him intimate knowledge of the abilities of large numbers of players. He will assist Mr. Capellani in various technical matters connected with the production, at the same time placing himself in the mental attitude of an eager pupil. J. J. Dunne, who has been assisting Mr. Capellani in previous productions, will remain.

Dorothy Dalton Has Her Picture Taken

New York Photographer Finds Out That the Thomas H. Ince Star Knows How to Pose.

LIFT your chin a little more—that's it—now smile and show your dimples—just what I want—you've posed for pictures before, Miss Dalton." Even a photographer must have his joke—when in good humor. And this particular knight of the camera was in the best of spirits. Dorothy Dalton is a subject to inspire the artistic skill of any photographer, and negatives were being taken at the rate of eighteen an hour, without the exhibition of the slightest bit of temperament on the part of the Ince star. No wonder the head operator smiled, while his subject was arranging her hair in the pier glass, and remarked facetiously:

"Your conception of the part of a young lady having her picture taken is perfect, Miss Dalton. You put so much heart interest in it and so much natural charm."

Dorothy Dalton.

"That's because I know my business, perhaps," replied the heroine of "Love Me," bringing the famous dimples into play again.

Dorothy Dalton arrived in New York from Los Angeles on June 6 for a brief vacation and is having a strenuous time of it. First and foremost there are costumes to be selected for her next photoplay. It was written by H. H. Van Loan, and Miss Dalton's part demands a number of very-much-out-of-the-ordinary gowns.

"I can't tell you anything about the picture just now," the star explained. "It hasn't been named yet, but I like my part immensely and Mr. Van Loan has done something quite different."

"You seem to enjoy posing for pictures, Miss Dalton."

"I might if I were not so tired. It's not difficult for a movie actress, of course, but I think it very unkind of Charles Moyer, of the Paramount Company, to insist upon a new set of 'still' when I have so many other things to do. Sorry you had to come to the studio, but really, I'm never in my rooms at the Ritz except to sleep."

"Your vacation hasn't been all work, I trust?"

"Oh, no, I've spent my evenings seeing the shows and the restaurants, but it's all very tiring."

The next moment Miss Dalton was taking her thirty-third pose with the same show of interest and adaptability as before and the head operator was again directing her with the air of a man who enjoyed his task.

Select Managers Hold First Conference

Take Part in Two-Day Convention in New York and Discuss Coming Winter's Campaign.

THE first conference of managers of branch offices of the Select Pictures Corporation was held June 12 and 13, according to schedule, at the company's headquarters in New York. Meetings were held in the office of President Lewis J. Selznick. The sessions were conducted by General Manager Arthur S. Kane. Treasurer Morris Kohn was present at all meetings.

The branch executives in attendance on the conference were: Max Milder, Philadelphia; Charles R. Rogers, Boston; Sherman S. Webster, Buffalo; Leo F. Levison, Pittsburgh; T. O. Tuttle, Atlanta; Henry Siegel, of New York; Lester W. Adler, office manager of the New York exchange, and J. S. Woody field manager.

Representing the home office were: John R. Rotchford, assistant general manager, and George Sharrard, correspondent.

Many topics affecting sale and distribution of Select Pictures were brought up for discussion in response to calls for suggestions. Naturally the one topic in which all were most deeply concerned was the fall and winter campaign of 1918-19. Plans for the future were gone over from every angle, and by the time the conferences ended a complete understanding had been arrived at as to policies to be pursued in the coming months.

There was much enthusiasm over details of forthcoming series imparted to the managers. Aside from matters of distribution and sale proper the conference discussed in detail the accessories and advertising put out by Select. It was deemed advisable to continue the quality in Select paper and advertising.

Socially the men from the territory enjoyed their visit to New York. Aside from many luncheon and dinner parties the social side of the meeting took form in an evening's entertainment, offered Wednesday by the home office. This consisted of a dinner at the Astor, followed by a theater party, the choice falling upon Raymond Hitchcock's new revue, "Hitchy-Koo." After the theater all hands repaired to the Century Roof, and finished up the evening in fine style, watching the Century revue and partaking of a light supper.

Fourteen Sherry Exchanges Are Open

Four More Shortly Will Be Ready for Distribution of Keeney and De Luxe Pictures.

ALTHOUGH it was only about a month ago that William L. Sherry announced his intention to form an independent distributing organization, exchanges are already open and ready for business in fourteen cities—New York, Chicago, Kansas City, Boston, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Denver. Within the next week or so exchanges of the Sherry Service will also be opened in Buffalo, St. Louis, Atlanta and Dallas, eighteen cities in all. Mr. Sherry is also arranging for distributing points in Canada. William Alexander, who represented the William Fox Film Corporation abroad for two years, will be general manager of the Sherry exchange in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle, with assistants in charge of the individual offices. B. F. Lyon, now temporary manager of the Cleveland office, will be the Pittsburgh representative, and Walter R. Liebman will have charge of Cleveland. A. L. Widner will probably manage the Kansas City office.

N. J. Sennott, Mr. Sherry's general manager, has returned from a tour which took him as far west as Kansas City. He has been opening up exchanges. Mr. Sennott reports that he found exhibitors as a rule in an optimistic mood, hungry for good productions and willing to pay for them.

"A concrete evidence that the exhibitor has faith in the future of the moving picture business is found in the fact that so many new 'movie' theaters are going up, and good ones, too," says Mr. Sennott. "The exhibitors are very anxious to get better pictures."

"Despite the fact that the hot weather is upon us," says Mr. Sherry, "orders are coming in rapidly for the first of my reelases, 'A Romance of the Underworld,' the initial Frank A. Keeney production. I have also concrete evidence that there will be a very wide sale for the first of the pictures Doris Kenyon is producing as the head of her own company, 'The Street of Seven Stars,' by Mary Roberts Rinehart. This picture has the advantage of having been published in the Saturday Evening Post in serial story form and also in a book of which more than 250,000 copies have been already sold.

"I am very glad to be affiliated with men like Frank A. Keeney and Theodore C. Deitrich, president of Miss Kenyon's company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., because I know that as producers they are satisfied with nothing except the best."

The New York exchange of the Sherry Service, which is in charge of John S. Clark, formerly manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in New York City, has been busy within the last week or so and has been showing remarkable results. The exchange is on the twelfth floor of the Godfrey Building, Seventh avenue and Forty-ninth street, where Mr. Sherry's general offices are also.

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

IN A COMPETITION conducted in the New Orleans newspapers for the four most beautiful girls in Louisiana, Suelain Dudet and Marjel Warfield, of the Diamond Comedy Company, scored victoriously. A jury of artists, headed by Ellsworth Woodward, noted southern painter, made the award. The object of the contest was to secure four typical southern beauties whose pictures might be blended into a composite head for a Victory poster intended to help Uncle Sam "get over the top" with his War Savings Stamps drive.

When the four portraits of the winners were published in the New Orleans Item of recent date, and requests for their identity were printed, it turned out that two of the four winning girls were members of the Diamond Film Company of New Orleans, which makes the Diamond comedies distributed through General Film Company.

These two were Suelain Dudet and Marjel Warfield. Friends had sent in their portraits anonymously. That the Diamond girls were represented as half of the winning quartet is considered a great honor, since scores of the most beautiful women in Louisiana had been considered by the committee.

Of the Warfield portrait the committee said it indicated "great physical reserve and calmness of disposition, suggesting the 'Spirit of Venice' type." Of the Dudet portrait the committee said: "It represents an American type of an eager nervous disposition and suggests aspiration."

Dallas reviewers liked the Select "De Luxe Annie" mighty well, but one of them picked just a little flaw. He said once in a while a really good picture came along, and "Annie" was that kind; that the photography was excellent, the setting superb; the acting all that could be asked, and that it might have been a compliment to Norma Talmadge that she did it, because she might not have known—and anyway it was a lost art in Texas—but she mixed a highball with sugar.

Earle Mitchell has some ideas of his own as regards proper personal publicity and respectfully submits the following.

"I am the Earle Mitchell whose short stories and sketches occasionally appear in the magazines. I am the author of 'The Bookmaker's Shoes,' the $1,000.00 prize sketch which Smart Set published a few years ago. I wrote 'The End of the Tour,' which was Lionel Barrymore's most successful picture. I am also drawing royalty on a few vaudeville sketches.

"But my greatest claim to distinction is the fact that I am the only living pseudo-scribbler who has never attempted to write a play for the legitimate stage.

"This literary negligence on my part is doubly unusual in view of the fact that I am also the Earle Mitchell who has created comedy parts in 'Over the Phone,' 'Under Cover,' 'Believe Me, Xantippe,' 'Rosedale' and many other recent Broadway productions.

"But there, I have spilled the beans! I had meant to impress you as one of those rare, gifted and brainy entities called an Author, and I have tipped off the fact that I am only a common or garden actor who, when he can muster the energy, augments his income by hammering a rickety Blick."

A rattlesnake hunt was staged the other day at Metro's west coast studios. The reptile failed to answer to the name of Priscilla. Priscilla, as it had been titled, escaped from her wooden cage without shaking a single rattle, and for two days thereafter stars, principals and "extras" were in a state of nervous apprehension. But when fourty-eight hours had passed without a sign of Priscilla's return, everybody concluded the rattler had heard about the Sinn Fein movement.

Priscilla was a genuine rattlesnake, but had been denatured. Removal of her poison ducts was out of deference to the company producing the forthcoming Metro production, "As the Sun Went Down," by George D. Baker, starring Edith Storey. Priscilla had to bite Harry S. Northrup, and had done said biting just a few hours before she vanished from the Metro lot.

At the closing session in the Hotel Biltmore of the fourth annual convention of the exchange managers of the Fox Film Corporation on last Friday, a surprise was sprung on the visiting managers when newsboys, specially hired for the occasion, rushed into the big room at the Biltmore, shouting:

"Extra! Extra! New York Invaded! Extra!"

After the first surprise at seeing newsboys in the Hotel Biltmore had worn off, the managers made a rush for the boys and quickly bought up all the papers they were carrying.

The papers proved to be a special edition of "The New York Echo," a newspaper issued by the publicity department of the Fox Film Corporation as a souvenir of the convention. The "Echo" in make-up and style followed the lines of metropolitan dailies and gave a full account of everything that had happened at the convention from the opening session to the close.

On the front page was a three-column cartoon of William Fox, president of the corporation, shooting at the Kaiser through a moving picture camera. Three shots were fired, one shell representing the Jewish War Relief Fund, another the Knights of Columbus campaign and the third the Red Cross campaign, in all of which Mr. Fox was very active.

Pencil sketches "by a staff artist," drawn during the convention and showing different persons in informal poses, were scattered through the publication, as were large and small cuts. On the back page were editorials, and several advertisements gave a realistic touch.

Here's a Ramble—Free for All.

Coney Island trips down the Bay and up the Sound promise to be somewhat interfered with by the Hun menace.

Women and children will be no safer here, if the Hun has his way, than in other parts of the world where his villainy penetrates.

But the Interstate Park Commission has provided a delightful and safe haven for the same pleasure seeker just across from Dyckman street on the Jersey shore.

The great drawback to the fullest popularity for Interstate Park is the fact that it is free. After having paid carfare by the smooth running red cars on upper Broadway, or in the speeding subway to Dyckman street station, there is a short and pleasant walk to the Hudson River, where five cents ferries the rambler across the wide stretch of water.

The approach may also be made from West Forty-second street. From Fort Lee, close along the shore, extends a pleasant path as far north as a point opposite Yonkers, where a ferry is in operation to bring the rambler within easy distance from Manhattan. It might be better to divide these reaches into two separate "hikes."

One may easily walk from Fort Lee to opposite Dyckman street (the Englewood ferry), traveling along the shore. A second "hike" would take the traveler from Englewood ferry-house to opposite Yonkers. Then there is an equally picturesque and rustic way along the top of the Palisades, linking up the same ferries.

At Englewood ferry "jitneys" will, for a dime, run passengers who do not want to climb to the top of the Palisades. Once there, rustic grandeur is close at hand, and upper New York spreads before the vision to show man's competitive purpose to try and outdo nature.

Right at Englewood ferry there is a wide sweep of "made" shore where thousands may disport themselves freely and democratically. Two recreation piers have been constructed where benches, tables and accommodations for luncheon parties are abundantly provided. There is plenty of room to dance on the "upper decks"—if you bring your own jews-harp.

There is a fine spread of sandy beach where bathers disport themselves. Up in the woods, handy to the shore, are bath-house accommodations—with showers, mind you—all free and open to the public. Fires built among the rocks, with tables scattered under the trees along the shore, provide healthy occasion to satisfy the appetite that a few hours in the clean, fresh, invigorating pure air of the Palisades creates.

The Rambler recalls an outing given by a certain film organization, when employees were invited to attend at $2 per person. The "location" was in a combination beer-garden and pleasure ground. It took two perfectly good hours to make the trip (for employees who were short on automobiles and long on carfare), and the ticket-price included what was purported to be a "shore dinner," served in a stuffy hall by a gang of unclean roughnecks who have, very possibly, been lately operating offshore, hereabouts, as members of the Kaiser's submarine crews.

Much better, more freely, and vastly more pleasureable, may such an outing be held opposite Dyckman street, along the shores of the majestic Hudson, under and upon the nature-wonders entitled the Palisades—with luncheon baskets and bathing suits the only equipment, aside from ten cents for a round trip on one of the three ferryboats that open this playground to New Yorkers.

If there be employees of film concerns contemplating an outing, here's a tip. Give the Palisades and the shore walk the "once over." Greetings from

THE RAMBLER.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Universal to Show War Relief in France and Belgium

CO-OPERATION given the industrial department of the Universal Film Manufacturing company by Anne Morgan, head of the American Commission for Devastated France, has enabled that film organization to obtain some wonderful views showing the extent of the relief society's work in the war zone.

Miss Morgan is the daughter of the late J. P. Morgan, and her work for the relief of French war sufferers has been so unremitting and so productive of results as to cause the French Government to bestow upon her the highest honors.

Lack of warm clothing has caused intense suffering among the people whose homes were in the path of the Huns. As a measure of relief the American Commission undertook to provide these people with knitted garments.

Some of the scenes obtained by Universal show the knitting of shawls. The various steps in this process are first shown, however, and these commence with the shearing of the sheep which furnish the wool. The many different methods employed in the balling and working of the yarn are also presented, and these range all the way from the old laborious hand method to the speedy and efficient machine method.

The final scenes show the actual distribution of the garments in the war zone and these form a wonderfully human document. Incidently, Miss Morgan is being aided in her work by such famous theatrical and film stars as Sarah Bernhardt, Julia Marlow and Mary Garden.

Dorothy Gish Is to Be Starred by Paramount

DOROTHY GISH is now a Paramount star. This announcement was made this week by Jesse L. Lasky. The services of Miss Gish are under contract to D. W. Griffith, and by the terms of the agreement recently entered into by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Mr. Griffith she will be presented as a star in seven productions under the Paramount trademark during the coming year.

The acquisition of Miss Gish adds still another name to the list of stars announced for appearance in Paramount and Artcraft productions within the next few months, including Fred Stone, John Barrymore, Ethel Clayton, Shirley Mason, Bryant Washburn, and Lila Lee. The young star, who is an Ohioan by birth, and is just twenty years old, has been identified with the stage and screen since 1902, when, at the age of four, she made her debut before the footlights. She began her screen career with the old Biograph Company, her first appearance being in the Biograph production, "The Mountain Rat."

Her association with the productions of Mr. Griffith has continued unbroken. When Mr. Griffith projected "The Birth of a Nation" it was natural that he should choose Miss Gish for an important role. Later she achieved equal success in the second big Griffith production, "Intolerance," while her characterization in the role of the charming little French girl, Grizette, in "Hearts of the World" is making an impression in the large centers where the production is now being shown.

Activity at Triangle Studios.

With President Harry E. Aitken in New York and his assistant, O. L. Sellers, in charge of the big Culver City studios, Triangle continues the activities of its summer production schedule. Two pictures have just been completed and two new photoplays are being read over preparatory to casting for production. Three other stories are nearing completion and several exceptional stories, including well-known novel and magazine stories are being put into continuity.

Work Started on Goodrich Series.

Production has been completed on the first of the new series of Goodrich features to be distributed by the Mutual Film Corporation. It is a story by Maibelle Heikes Justice, made under the working title of "The Gadabout." The picture was produced at the Mutual's New York studios.

Burton King directed, with David Powell in the leading role. An able supporting cast appears with Miss Goodrich and Mr. Powell in the picture.

The story hinges about the effort of a party of Japanese business envoys to secure a set of plans and specifications for their government from an American firm of contractors. The contractor has forced responsibility for certain forged vouchers on to his chief engineer and then has offered him the alternative of selling the plans to the Japs thus saving the firm or going to prison for the forgeries.

"Zeppelin L-21" Is Timely Subject.

No direct stimulation of a motion picture film has been more marked than the German submarine raid on American coastwise shipping and its accidental introduction of "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21" to the public as a timely war thrill subject. This two-reel feature from the Interstate Film Company, just released through General Film Company, owes its importance to the picturing of an aerial raid upon London and the destruction of the Zeppelin L-21 after a series of outrages committed upon an English countryside.

As one evidence of the intense popular appeal of the feature, Montreal's office of General Film reports "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21" has been put in the Loew house for a solid week.

Chaplin at Work on Second Comedy.

Within the week of his return to Hollywood, following his successful Liberty Loan tour, Charlie Chaplin surprised everyone by dropping into his studio, hastily ordering several sets to be built, after which he went into executive session with brother Syd.

All the afternoon there was much hurrying to and fro between Charlie's office and various departments, and it was apparent to the most careful onlooker, that another famous Chaplin comedy was in the brewing.

By this time, the second picture of Charlie Chaplin's $1,000,000 contract with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit is under way. Its release is awaited with interest.

"Bound in Morocco" Is Next Fairbanks.

Douglas Fairbanks' next Artcraft picture will be "Bound in Morocco," the story of which, written by Allan Dwan, is described as a snappy, high-geared, romantic comedy-drama of the twentieth century. The production is now well on the way toward completion under the direction of Mr. Dwan, this being his third picture with Fairbanks as star. Colorful locations of the type for which the Fairbanks productions have become distinguished are utilized in the subject, the picturesque country of Algiers being the fanciful background.

A number of new stunts was originated for the picture.

Lieutenant Young Writes War Stories for World Film

SNATCHING a moment whenever possible in the vigils of the night while serving in the trenches in France, Lieutenant Howard Irving Young, of the American Army, wrote a picturepiay which he named "Song of the Heart." Into it he poured the tensity and the mystery of war. And when he had made of his picturepiay a vital human document he sent it to World Pictures.

"Song of the Heart" was received by World Pictures last week. The manuscript was in terrible condition. Part of it was written in pencil and part in ink. Such scraps of paper as Lieutenant Young could secure in the trenches had been used. And yet, despite these physical handicaps, the virile soul of the story gripped and held. It was purchased at once by World Pictures and the continuity for it is now being written. It will be Louise Huff's second starring vehicle for the World.

Lieutenant Young was in the old Seventh regiment of the New York National Guard and with it saw service in Texas before going to France. Before and after his border service he was with the Metro script department.

Mary MacIvor to Support "Smiling Bill" Parsons

SMILING BILL PARSONS, who characterizes the Capitol Comedies on the Goldwyn program with his fat and frivolous personality, has gone right out in the wilds of Los Angeles and in the parlance of studioites, "grabbed himself another woman."

Bill has been rambling around, borrowing a leading woman here and enticing another one there—this time he went almost to Venice, California—and when he came back he had Mary MacIvor with him and Mary is to be his new leading woman.

Mary started her still youthful career with Thomas Ince, and during her period under his auspices she was seen as leading woman with William S. Hart and others.

Mary's talent secured her many excellent roles, and later she took up a post of temporary duration opposite William Desmond, with whom she has been featured for the past few months.

Miss MacIvor is but eighteen years of age and, according to Los Angeles reports, has charm, exquisite poise, fine temperament and exceptional ability.

Miss MacIvor will be seen within a few months opposite the rotund laughing William in a series of Capitol comedies and these will reach the market through Goldwyn every other week.

Russell's "Up Romance Road" Leads Mutual June 24

WILLIAM RUSSELL succeeds in creating a distinct character type in "Up Romance Road," his big mystery melodrama, released by Mutual June 24. As Gregory Thorne, a young chap of wealth and position who is bored by pink teas and social matters and yearns for the high lights of adventure, he will appeal to every red-blooded American.

Gregory, in a spirit of mischief, pretends to his fiancee's father, a ship owner, that he knows the plotters who have threatened to blow up his plant if a ship loaded with supplies for the Allies is allowed to sail. The old man is riled, and forbids Gregory to see his fiancee unless he divulges the identity of the crooks. Then the excitement begins. When Gregory attempts to elope with his fiancee they are both kidnapped by the gang of spies and held as hostages.

The story and scenario is by Stephen Fox, a magazine writer, and the production is under the direction of Henry King, who was responsible for Russell's big success, "Hearts or Diamonds?" It is the second picture made by William Russell Productions, Inc.

Russell is supported by Miss Charlotte Burton, who plays the lead; Carl Stockdale, Emma Kluge, Claire DuBrey, John Burton and Joseph Belmont.

Billie Rhodes will appear in a Strand comedy, "Her Spooney Affair," released June 25. Jack falls in love with Mary at first sight. When he calls at her aunt's house Mary is disguised as the maid, in order to test the sincerity of Jack's affection. All sorts of embarrassing situations ensue, and Jack is accused of trying to get away with the silverware when he is found in the cellar with the silver spoons in his pocket. It all ends happily, however, when Jack learns he has been the subject of a little joke, and realizes he has won out with Mary.

Issues Nos. 34 and 35 of the Screen Telegram are released by Mutual June 26 and 30.

White Players Perform in Coming Ebony Comedy

A DISTINCT departure from the broad comedy vehicle for the Ebony colored performers is announced for the near future by General Film Company. The Chicago producing company states that it has begun work of filming "Luck in Old Clothes," a unique story by E. K. Means, a well known American writer, which appeared in one of the Munsey publications. This is a delightful story of negro life of a humorous character and, it is predicted, will make one of the most entertaining of screen offerings.

Departing from its usual custom, the Ebony Company has selected a mixed company of white and negro players for the filming of the story, and a high order of treatment is planned for the subject. "Luck in Old Clothes" will form one of the early releases on the General Film program.

The current release in the Ebony comedy series is "Are Working Girls Safe?" one of the liveliest and best of these ludicrous productions.

Ethel Barrymore Returns in "Our Mrs. McChesney"

ETHEL Barrymore, having completed a brilliant season of stage successes at the Empire Theatre, New York, will return at once to her motion picture activities under the auspices of Metro Pictures Corporation, the only firm with which she has been identified. Richard A. Rowland, Metro's president, has secured for Miss Barrymore the screen rights to her famous play of a season ago. "Our Mrs. McChesney," which was dramatized by George V. Hobart and Edna Ferber from the Emma McChesney stories by Miss Ferber.

Miss Barrymore fell in love with the Emma McChesney stories when she first read them in the magazines, and was not content until she had obtained the right to impersonate the "traveling saleslady" on the stage. The part calls for the sort of quaint humor and clever characterization in which the star delights.

Luther A. Reed is completing the picturization of "Our Mrs. McChesney" for Miss Barrymore's use, and it will be placed in production at once under the direction of Ralph W. Ince. A supporting cast of a high grade of excellence is being engaged for the picture.

Miss Barrymore's previous Metro productions include "An American Widow," the last to appear before her stage season of 1917-1918; "Life's Whirlpool," "The Eternal Mother," "The Lifted Veil," "The Awakening of Helena Richie," "The Call of her People," and "The Greatest Power."

Scene from "Just For Tonight" (Goldwyn).

In "Just For Tonight" Tom Moore Makes Debut as Star

GIVE the public what it wants" has been the basis of so many American mercantile and industrial fortunes that Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has decided to give the public Tom Moore as a screen star. In becoming a star Tom Moore reaps the reward of his own popularity. He is being starred by Goldwyn and has been at work on his first picture for several weeks because several thousand of the men who own theaters have written to Goldwyn saying: "We like Tom Moore, our audiences liked him and we want him as a star in Goldwyn Pictures."

It has long been a truism in business that the public is willing to pay for the personalities upon whom it casts its favor, and in a few weeks of electric signs, billboards, theater lobby pictorial displays and all of the varied mechanism of screen exploitation will blazon forth the news that "Goldwyn Presents Tom Moore in 'Just for Tonight' at this theater."

"Just for Tonight" is the name of Tom Moore's first starring adventure, and the story is both adventurous and properly romantic, as befits a handsome young Irishman with a fascinating smile, a handsome face and a pair of laughing Irish "come-hither" eyes.

Goldwyn is not assuming too much in claiming that its own productions have contributed to the popularity of Mr. Moore. Following his personal triumph in "Brown of Harvard," his advent into Goldwyn Pictures came in the engaging role of Tony Quintard, the hungry poet in "The Cinderella Man," the leading role opposite Mae Marsh.

The public next saw Mr. Moore as Jack Forsythe, the son of the corset king, who fell in love with and won Mabel Normand in her first Goldwyn production, "Dodging a Million. Following that, Miss Normand again won Mr. Moore as her leading man, the young settlement house benefactor in "The Floor Below," and then Madge Kennedy had him as her leading man for the first time in "The Danger Game." Tom Moore's role in this romantic melodrama was that of one Gilpin, a literary critic who turned burglar to protect Madge Kennedy, who was herself a fascinating criminal.

Tom Moore is in luck in his new play both in the matter of author and director. "Just for Tonight" is the work of Charles A. Logue, who has written another Goldwyn-Madge Kennedy success, "The Service Star; the Flag of All Mothers," now beginning to sweep the country. Charles Giblyn, who made "Peggy" the most brilliant of all of Billie Burke's screen successes and many other early Triangle successes, is Mr. Moore's director. So quickly and effectively has he worked at Fort Lee and so secretly that "Just for Tonight" is now out and being assembled.

No date has been set for the release of the picture.

Poli Takes on Paralta Plays.

The home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces that the Paralta portion of Hodkinson Service will play throughout the Poli circuit in New Haven, Hartford, Waterbury, Bridgeport and Worcester.

This adds to the long list of circuits throughout the country, which are already playing Paralta Plays and demonstrates that these productions are of the consistent quality claimed for them.

Triangle Announces Two Stories for July Release

ON the Triangle July schedule soon to be announced is a society drama temporarily titled "Marked Cards." This is a screen adaptation of an original story by Adela Rogers St. John, magazine writer, and is based on the tremendous sacrifice of a young girl, in which she risks honor and reputation to save the man she loves from the gallows. Margery Wilson, Wallace MacDonald and Jack Curtis are featured players in this production, which is being directed by Count H. D'Elba. Others in the cast are Rae Godfrey, Harvey Clark and Joseph Bennett.

Dick Donaldson is directing a new western drama, which will also be released on the July schedule, titled "A Good Loser." Lee Hill and Peggy Pearce have the principal parts in the play, which pictures a young easterner who comes west to find health and fortune. He sacrifices his life on the altar of friendship. Others in the cast are Arthur Millett, Dick Rosson, Graham Pette, and Pete Morrison.

General Has July 4 O. Henry Story.

An O. Henry story which is winning renewed favor just now with exhibitors is "The Fourth in Salvador," General Film declares. Large numbers of theaters over the country are booking this O. Henry success for the Fourth of July week because of its timely nature. "The Fourth in Salvador" bids fair to beat its original records of bookings.

The film presents a humorous and somewhat dramatic story of the efforts of a party of Americans in Salvador to celebrate the national American holiday, and is featured by one of O. Henry's characteristic surprise climaxes. The celebrating Americans, aided and abetted by an Englishman, run counter to a revolution which springs up unexpectedly and, thinking the regulars are bent upon crushing their little party, the celebrators turn in and give them a licking. The general who succeeds to the presidency is, of course, profoundly grateful for the unexpected turn taken by the celebration.

Diamond's Fourth Is Announced.

"His Matrimonial Moans," the fourth of the Diamond Comedies, is announced for release by General Film Comedy, with Diamond's Lou Barks, Irving Browning, Joe Eschezabal and Oom Paul. The story of "His Matrimonial Moans" is that of a gay dog who becomes tangled up with the operations of an enterprising matrimonial agency proprietor. Pretty girls galore and some clever children are introduced in this comedy.

American Soldiers See Many Fox Productions

WILLIAM FOX pictures are being shown behind the trenches in France, according to Mrs. Elizabeth Richey Dessez, assistant editor of the Community Motion Picture Bureau, in a statement which has been issued from the Fox offices. Messengers mounted on motorcycles are braving German shot and shell to carry Fox films to the soldiers, declares Mrs. Dessez, who adds, that if Fox films were humanized they could not follow the flag more faithfully than they do.

"The films of the Fox Film Corporation sent to France to be shown for the American soldiers in the trenches and training camps," Mrs. Dessez says, "far outnumber those of any other motion picture company. The fact that the Fox Corporation has control of the foreign rights on pictures shown abroad does away with much red tape and considerably facilitates the task of the Community Motion Picture Bureau in providing entertainment for the American troops."

The Community Motion Picture Bureau is conducted on behalf of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., under the supervision of the Commission on Training Camp Activities of the War and Navy Departments.

General Releases a Wolfville Tale.

A Wolfville Tale, "The Dismissal of Silver Phil," is announced by General Film Company, in the series of O. Henry and Alfred Henry Lewis productions. The serious side of cowboy life is reflected with plenty of inimitable Alfred Henry Lewis humor contributing to the interest. The story is of a "bad man's" finish.

Bookings for the first two months of the Wolfville Tales have been unusually heavy for a new series of short length features, according to a General Film official, and the Alfred Henry Lewis stories are in step with the O. Henry stories for popularity. The policy of alternating the film versions of these distinctive gems of American literature has resulted in a big spurt in bookings for the Broadway Star Feature releases.

The Wolfville Tale, "Faro Nell, Lookout," has been scheduled to take the place of "The Arrival of Faro Nell."

De Mille's "We Can't Have Everything" Tells of Movies

BY TURNING the weapons of the motion pictures against itself some of the most humorous incidents ever found in a photoplay—outside a professed comedy—are said to be included in C. B. De Mille's Artcraft special offering, "We Can't Have Everything." These incidents concern the making of a "movie" in a film studio, which is subsequently destroyed by fire.

There is much actual fun as well as an unimaginable amount of work in making a picture for the screen, as everyone who has worked in a studio knows. And all directors have their mannerisms.

Tully Marshall was cast for the role of the director in the play within a play. He smiled as he talked of the role after the scenes had been shot: "It was a sort of composite," he declared. "Partly Mr. De Mille and partly D. W. Griffith. I didn't tell anyone what I intended doing and when the time came I could see Mr. De Mille smiling covertly. But I went on as unconcernedly as if I had no thought in the world of caricaturing anyone."

It is claimed that the result will be highly edifying, as well as the work of Alvin Wyckoff, who also "doubles in brass" and plays cameraman—real and pseudo; Theodore Roberts, who does the character actor—the Sultan; James Neill as a detective; Ernest Joy as a "heavy" actor; Billy Elmer as "props"; Charles Ogle and Sylvia Ashton, as a couple from Nimrim, Mo., whose daughter has become the "star"—a role enacted by Wanda Hawley. In fact the latter is one of the most important characters.

In the main story the leading figures are portrayed by Kathlyn Williams, Elliott Dexter, Thurston Hall, Sylvia Breamer, Raymond Hatton and Miss Hawley.

The studio fire in the picture will be realistic enough to satisfy the most exacting critic, for it is the real thing.

Universal Reports Two and Three Reelers in Favor

THAT there is a steadily growing demand for the two and three reel dramatic subjects and that this demand is sufficiently great to be given recognition is the consensus of opinion expressed in the reports which Universal's exchange managers have forwarded to Carl Laemmle.

These reports came as the result of a promise made by Universal's chief executive that that organization would seriously consider placing the short subject on its program of the weekly releases if it were definitely ascertained that exhibitors wanted them. This promise was made by Mr. Laemmle during his recent tour of his company's exchanges.

In the report sent in by Barney Rosenthal, manager of Universal's St. Louis exchange, is contained the following:

"Not even in the palmiest days of the program was there such a strong demand for short subjects. The exhibitor is in desperate need of two and three reel dramas to round out his show and he doesn't know where to lay his hands on them. In fact, this need is so great that some of the showmen who formerly looked down upon serials are now running them because they've got to show something with features. Nothing we've done in a long time, has afforded the exhibitors in this territory more satisfaction than our recent announcement concerning Universal's issuance of two reelers."

From John J. McAller, Universal's Pittsburgh representative, came this report: "The inclosed bookings for the two reel dramas we are releasing tell their own story. So far as this territory is concerned, you couldn't do better than to make the short subject a permanent fixture of our weekly program."

That the sentiment on the West coast is also in favor of the short dramatic subject is contained in the letter written by G. A. Metzger, manager of the Universal's Portland office.

"The day after the trade papers containing the story of Universal's plan to release two and three reel dramas reached this corner of the country two of my most important accounts came to me with the stories in their hands and requested that I confirm the announcements. When I told them it was 'honest Injun' they booked the pictures on the spot. I've been deluged with requests for bookings since."

As the result of this demand, order for extra prints of the short subjects have been steadily coming from the exchanges. The first of the short subjects was a two-reel western drama entitled "Play Straight or Fight," featuring Helen Gibson, of the railroad series fame. It is stated by Universal that the eighty-seventh print was shipped a few days ago.

"My Lady Nicotine" to Help Smokes

"My Lady Nicotine," a recent Mutual-Strand comedy starring Billie Rhodes, has been tied up with the "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund," and as a result considerable money shall be added to the fund for "smokes" through motion picture theatres.

"My Lady Nicotine" carries a knockout appeal for smokes for soldiers in France. It was one of the regular releases of Mutual-Strand series, picturing a bride's efforts to cure her husband of smoking.

Exhibitors who run "My Lady Nicotine" on the regular schedule will be supplied with posters by "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" and with subscription blanks for the fund.

Exhibitors who have joined the movement to solicit "smokes" for the soldiers in France have pledged their co-operation by booking "My Lady Nicotine." The fund has made a request that exhibitors contribute a percentage of the receipts of the picture to the fund.

The fund for tobacco for soldiers in France now totals $227,330. Officers of the fund expect that "My Lady Nicotine" will add many hundreds of dollars to the effort.

Power's Machines on New Mexico.

Nicholas Power product continues to find favor with the "service." The company reports the battle ship New Mexico, said to be the most powerful battle ship afloat, has after careful consideration installed a Power's Cameragraph No. 6 B for the entertainment of the jackies.

Story of the Northwest and of Society Lead Triangle

A PICTURIZATION of Norman Sherbrook's well-known magazine story, "Smoke," under the title of "You Can't Believe Everything," featuring Gloria Swanson, is the first release on the Triangle program for June 23. A romance of the Canadian Northwest with Maude Wayne and William Desmond follows.

"You Can't Believe Everything" features Gloria Swanson as Patria Reynolds, a belle of society's favorite summer colony. Possessing wealth, beauty and a charming personality her career is an assured success. The production will introduce Edward Piel, Triangle's new leading man, who will play opposite Miss Swanson. Claire McDowell, Darrell Foss, Jack Richadson and George Hernandez are other members in the cast of this production, which is reported to be of unusual strength.

Jack Conway directed, with Elgin Leslie at the camera. The scenario was written by Charles Mortimer Peck.

"Closin' In," the second release on the Triangle June 23 program, is a story by Joseph F. Poland, featuring William Desmond and Maud Wayne. This is a human interest story in which Jack Brandon, an athlete and society favorite, sacrifices his honor and future happiness to save the aristocratic parents of his sweetheart from disgrace. In the Canadian Northwest, Brandon seeks life anew, and after many rebuffs he reaps the reward of valor when he and Barbara Carlton are reunited in happiness.

Darrell Foss, Louis (Bull) Durham and Graham Pette are included in the cast. G. E. Jenks wrote the scenario and Steve Norton handled the camera. J. W. McLaughlin directed the picture.

"The Venus Model" (Goldwyn).

Mabel Normand is called upon in her latest Goldwyn photoplay, "The Venus Model," to do many unusual things, such as designing bathing suits, building up the business of the firm employing her, bringing a young collegian to his senses, advertising a bathing suit by posing in a shop window clad in it and—oh, everything. And there is something more than this. Mabel Normand, as Kitty O'Brien, reforms a vampire and wins her friendship as well.

In her character of the happy-go-lucky working girl who wins promotion to the post of head designer in the bathing suit establishment, Mabel Normand comes in contact with the son of the owner. She is unaware of his identity and regards him only as a promising worker. Gradually her interest becomes deeper, however, and soon she is in love with him.

World to Release "Eight Bells."

Byrne Brothers' "Eight Bells," the best known comedy of the stage, not even excepting Hanlon's "Superba," "The Devil's Auction" or "Voyage en Suisse," has been picturized in five reels and will be distributed by World Pictures. The comedy when presented on the stage toured the United States for fifteen years and during which time it became a household word wherever clean comedy and a hurricane of laughs were appreciated.

John Byrne, the eldest of the famous Byrnes, directed the filming. He was aided both in the development of the scenario and its manufacture by his brothers and several members of the original cast.

Miss Storey Finishes Coast Picture.

Filming of "As the Sun Went Down," Edith Storey's starring vehicle for the Metro program has been completed at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood. E. Mason Hopper directed the picture, which was photographed by William Thompson.

"Smiling Bill" to Drop In on Trip Across Country

THESE days find "Smiling Bill" Parsons, the well-to-do comedian and creator of Capitol Comedies, working harder than ever in his studios at Hollywood, Cal. For "Bill" is planning a vacation—the same sort of leisure period at Bar Harbor, Me., he enjoyed during the long stretch of years in which, as an insurance salesman he turned in a large amount of business annually.

And why not? Parsons, as a screen comedian, is duplicating the success he had as a leader in the field of business. To date he has produced ten Capitol Comedies, and the five already released have been declared works of comedy art in every section of the country.

The reason for the unusual bustle at the Parsons studios is that the corpulent comedian wants to complete twenty productions before starting on his transcontinental trip some time in July. At the solicitation of Goldwyn, which has received requests from exhibitors that Parsons make personal appearances at their houses, the comedian is planning to combine business with pleasure on his journey from Los Angeles to Bar Harbor.

Parsons will make at least fifteen stops in large cities and in some of the smaller towns on his trip across the continent. He came out with flying colors from his first personal appearance in connection with the opening of a new theatre in a San Francisco suburb recently, and he is pleased rather than bored at the thought of presenting himself before audiences on his trip East.

Parsons has rented the villa at Bar Harbor he has occupied the last five summer seasons. There he plans to entertain his eastern friends just as he does his associates at "Laughter Hall," his home adjoining the studios at Hollywood.

"Dad's Knockout," his sixth Capitol Comedy, conceded by Los Angeles critics to be the best of the Parsons output, is shortly to be released.

Lytell at Work on Third Picture.

"Boston Blackie's Little Pal," a screen adaptation of the popular "Boston Blackie" stories, which have been appearing in a magazine, will be Bert Lytell's next starring vehicle under the Metro banner, following "The Trail to Yesterday" and "No Man's Land."

A. S. Le Vino has prepared the scenario. Mr. Lytell will be directed by E. Mason Hopper. The Metro production starring Mr. Lytell will mark the first appearance on the screen of Boston Blackie, the refined and resourceful burglar.

Hodkinson Removes Impression About His Copartnership

W. W. HODKINSON, in speaking of his co-partnership plan, stated that in some quarters of the country the impression was that the Hodkinson Copartnership was, in effect, a film exchange business. "Of course this is due to a lack of complete information and understanding of our ideas and plans," remarked Mr. Hodkinson. "To begin with," he continued, "I wish to make it clear that we are not conducting a film exchange business in the usual meaning of the word.

"Our function is to gather together a large group of representative theaters throughout the country and to utilize the enormous force they would represent to do the very things which the exhibitors themselves would do to protect their business, but which they individually and singly are powerless to do. The capital furnished by our prospective stockholders will not be employed as investment in branch offices nor used for overhead expenses while we organize. We already have a going business fully financed and showing a profit every week. The capital is required as advances to producers to assure ourselves of additional quality product for further expansion.

"We do not contemplate the establishment of new film exchanges. One of the strongest planks in our platform is the economy we have effected through our utilization of an exchange organization already established. Our present contract with this exchange corporation gives it a certain commission for handling our sales, which is always fixed and reduced with the volume of our sales. In other words, there is always a profit between the commission we pay and the percentage received by us from the producers.

"We have no financial interest in any producing companies nor is any producer going to hold stock in our corporation. The product we handle is acquired on a percentage basis only, with no risk on our part whatever. The exhibitor's business is to run his theater, the manufacturer's to produce pictures. We furnish the means of contact in such a way as to avoid domination of one faction by the other."

Special Publicity to Aid "Street of Seven Stars"

SOME of the most beautiful and artistic posters issued for a motion picture have been contracted for by De Luxe Pictures, Inc., and the William L. Sherry Service for Doris Kenyon's first production at the head of her own company, "The Street of Seven Stars."

The artistic trend of the photoplay will be fully maintained in the posters, lobby display material, and all other exhibitors' helps, of which an unusually large and varied assortment has been contracted for. The original drawings by two famous artists, Haskell Coffin and Charles Chambers, will be used in connection with the presentation of Miss Kenyon in this more notable of Mary Roberts Rinehart's stories.

An intensive and nation-wide publicity campaign has been inaugurated, which will include many of the foremost publications. While it has not been definitely decided upon, William L. Sherry expects to release "The Street of Seven Stars" on June 30.

Many Early Bookings for Outing-Chesters

ANNOUNCEMENT that the famous Outing-Chester adventure pictures were to be released through exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation at the rate of one a week commencing June 30 brought scores of inquiries to the Mutual branches from big exhibitors who knew of the production of the series and resulted in immediate heavy bookings for first runs in the larger cities.

Prints of "Ex-Cannibal Carnival," the Fiji island picture which is first on the schedule will be in the various exchanges within a few days where special preview screenings can be arranged by exhibitors. Striking and original posters are being prepared for the series, as different from the ordinary litho as the Outing-Chester pictures are from the ordinary productions of their type.

The arrangements for the release of the series were only recently consumated at a series of conferences between Mr. Chester and James M. Sheldon, president of Mutual. Selling plans were quickly formulated and the first of the pictures set on the Mutual schedule for June 30.

The releases to follow "Ex-Cannibal Carnival" and the dates are: July 7, "Kaieteur"; July 14, "Mountaineering Memory"; July 21, "Zuni Kicking Races"; July 28, "A White Wilderness"; August 4, "A Coorial on the Orinoco."

Clara Kimball Young to Build Studio in Los Angeles

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG, under the management of Harry Garson, is to build her own studio in Los Angeles, probably during the coming summer or fall. Miss Young is now in the midst of production of "The Savage Woman," adapted to the screen by Kathryn Stuart from the celebrated "La Fille Sauvage," by Francois Curel, at the Lasky Studio, Hollywood. It is said that this work, displaying, as it does, the soul's struggle for mastery over the primal passions and appetites, affords the versatile Miss Young one of her best opportunities for emotional acting and screen characterization. The production is under the direction of Robert Vignola, who also directed Cynthia Stockley's "The Claw," Miss Young's latest release.

After completing "The Savage Woman," Miss Young will start on a short tour of the western coast July 2, appearing at various theaters in San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, and Spokane. She will return to New York through the Canadian Rockies, stopping at Lake Louise, Banff and Langan for a short vacation.

Miss Young comes to New York for the purpose of producing one of New York's greatest successes, "Cheating Cheaters," bought at a high price, it is said, from A. H. Woods. The cast for the production is now well under way and will be announced shortly.

Upon the completion of "Cheating Cheaters" Miss Young will return to California to build her own studio. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Kimball, are buying a home in Los Angeles, and will remain there permanently.

Benedict Making a Three Reeler.

Kingsley Benedict, recently featured in Universal serials, and who first became popular as the result of his work in the short subjects which were released by Universal several years ago is again to appear in two and three reel dramas.

Benedict has been cast for the central role in a stirring three-reel drama now in course of production at Universal City entitled "The Human Target." The story deals with the workings of the Secret Service and affords the Universal player an unusual opportunity.

A strong cast appears in support of Benedict who appears as Harrison Craige. This includes Claire Du Brey as Thelma Von Styne, M. K. Wilson, as Prince Oscar and Clyde Benson as Lieutenant Bertram. The release date for "The Human Target" has not as yet been set.

Timely Story Is Reid's "The Firefly of France"

THE date of release set for the next appearance of Wallace Reid in a Paramount picture is June 23, and it proves a most auspicious one, for the subject is "The Firefly of France," adapted by Margaret Turnbull from the stirring story by Marion Polk Angellotti.

The interest of the public in aeroplanes is high. In "The Firefly of France" Wallace Reid plays the part of an intrepid birdman. The story deals with a German spy whose plot against the Allies is frustrated by a daring young American who saves important papers obtained by the Firefly, an aviator with the French army. A love story relieves the strain of the suspense and thrill.

The wide publicity given the story has acquainted the public with the subject matter of this photoplay, and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation anticipates that it will be one of the more successful pictures of the year.

Rialto Audience Applaud Pathe Post Travel Pictures

Patrons of the Rialto theater in New York are reported to have applauded the showing of the Post Travel Pictures released by Pathe. The Rialto has booked the full series. The showings started June 2, and have taken hold right from the start. The Evening Mail prints a splendidly written travel article each week dealing with the country depicted in the pictures simultaneously.

In forty other American cities these pictures are being distributed by Pathe, each one presented under the auspices of the most prominent local newspaper, the same scheme of simultaneous publication of descriptive articles being pursued.

The first four or five pictures in the program (which will go on for fifty weeks) show the West Indies under the American, British, and French flags. From that point the expedition moved South, and obtained remarkable pictures in the interior of South America in the tangled jungles, in interior Japan, and in China and India.

Scene from "Hell Bent" (Universal).

Harry Carey's "Hell Bent" Leads Universal July 1

RECENTLY approached by a stranger who confided to him that his face was strangely familiar and who also asked him for his name and occupation, Harry Carey, Universal star, promptly replied, "My name is Carey—and I'm the only movie actor who has never been featured in a war picture!"

In line with this distinction, Carey has again completed one of the wild and woolly western production with which he has become identified. In "Hell Bent" he heads the list of productions released by Universal during the week of July 1. "Hell Bent" is a five-reel special attraction and Universal claims for it unusual beauties scenically and unusual interest from a story standpoint.

Neva Gerber who has appeared to such excellent advantage in several of the recent Universal serials, makes her debut as Carey's leading woman. Vesta Pegg, who usually furnishes the bad men for Carey's heroes to reform via the six-shooter route, enacts a more sympathetic role. Others in the cast are Duke Lee and Joseph Harris.

"The Butler's Blunder," a comedy featuring Eileen Sedgwick, Ralph McComas, Milton Sims and Charles Haefeli, in the Monday Nestor. It tells of the mixup that occurs when a butler who suspects his mistress of being in love with another man takes it upon himself anonymously to warn her husband of his suspicions. The result is an exceedingly amusing mixup which ends disastrously for the butler and which also convinces the husband that as a detective he is a very good business man.

The two-reel L-Ko Komedy, the title of which has not yet been decided upon also is scheduled for release this week.

"Naked Fists," a drama featuring Neal Hart, Dick LaReno, Eileen Sedwick, Joe Rickson and Dark Cloud, is the two-reel Western feature to be released this week.

Among the other releases for the week will be issue No. 31 of Animated Weekly, No. 78 of Universal Screen Magazine, No. 60 of Universal Current Events, the fourteenth episode of "The Lion's Claws," the serial in which Marie Walcamp is featured, and the newest Lyons-Moran Star comedy.

Pathe Employs Large Staff of Art Experts

FAVORABLE comment on the remarkably artistic and convincing series of posters and lobby displays being issued by Pathe with its latest releases reflects a lot of credit upon the art department of the big house.

Harry Lewis, now in charge of this department, has signed up several important artists for poster work, some of them men who have hitherto declined to perform "commercial" work.

The line of pictorial material advertising such plays as "The First Law" (Irene Castle and Antonio Moreno), "The Woman Eternal" (Elaine Hammerstein), "Hands Up" (the new Pathe serial, with Ruth Roland and George Chesebro), all to be released this summer by Pathe, is superior to work usually offered exhibitors.

Tourneur Believes War Is Reviving Melodrama

WAR always brings melodrama into a wave of popularity," declares Maurice Tourneur, who now heads his own independent producing organization. "Melodrama has come to mean a play of exciting action. Since war is a thing of excitement, unexpected twists, tragedies, comedies and thrills, it always changes our whole routine of life. Incidents that seemed impossible a year ago are now not only possible, but happening every day.

"For instance, you see your neighbor's son in khaki, three weeks later you learn of his arrival in France, and in seemingly a few more you may hear that he has been awarded a medal of honor on a battlefield over there.

"All this turns the popular thought from introspective literature and drama to plays and books reflecting physical action. We find this true all throughout history.

"The production which I am now filming is in an instance in point. 'Sporting Life,' the Drury Lane melodrama, was brought to America on September 26, 1898, the year of the war with Spain. I credit a great deal of its phenomenal popularity to the vogue of melodrama following in the steps of war."

Mr. Tourneur has interesting ideas on screen melodrama. "Melodrama," he says, "has come to mean an artificial form of highly colored drama, because the stage has been unable to present big action adequately. Train wrecks, mid-air combats between biplanes, great battlefield struggles and so on cannot be presented within the narrow limits of a stage. The mechanism, the painted canvas, the artificialities of the whole thing are glaring."

Valkeyrian to Support Louise Huff.

Valda Valkeyrian, the young Danish actress and dancer, who has created so very favorable an impression in pictures, will be soon in support of Louise Huff in her forthcoming World feature, "T'Other Dear Charmer," from the script of Charles S. Sarver, the filming of which is in progress at the World Studio at Fort Lee, under the direction of William P. S. Earle.

Bessie Love Leads Pathe June 30 In Glad-Love Story

BESSIE LOVE, Pathe's winsome comedienne in "A Little Sister of Everybody," is the feature of the Pathe program to be released the week of June 30. Elaborate advertising and publicity campaigns prepared by the Pathe forces describe the picture as "the happy play with the glad girl." The play, written by Charles Sarver from a novel by William Addison Lathrop, was produced by Anderson-Brunton at the Paralta studio, and directed by Robert Thornby.

It is a play that will have a direct appeal at this time, for there is no war element, no sinister sex or problem stuff, and, although there are serious moments, the general trend of the picture is one of cheerfulness and optimism, and Bessie Love is doing splendid work in another of her familiar ingenue roles.

Also on this program will be released episode No. 17 of "The House of Hate," which carries the title, "The Death Switch." There is more suspense and more tragic touches in this episode than in any of the others of this remarkable serial.

A new Toto comedy, "The Furniture Movers," a one-reeler, comes on this program; Britain's Bulwarks No. 8, "Destruction Wrought by the Hun at St. Quentin," and "Guadeloupe" in the Post Travel series are short features that have their own individual appeal.

The tremendous success of "Cleopatsy," a Toto comedy that burlesques "Cleopatra," has given the Toto stock a decided boost, and "The Furniture Movers" has a lot of swift action in it with some very amusing "trick stuff" showing a highly original method of loading moving vans.

Hearst-Pathe News No. 54 and No. 55 will be released July 3 and 6, respectively, and will contain new war pictures, as well as the animated news record of important events at home.

Two Big Artcrafts in One Week.

In releasing the two Artcraft productions, "Say, Young Fellow!" and and "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," the week of June 16, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation offers exhibitors the opportunity of presenting to their patrons the foremost exponents of light comedy on the screen, namely, Douglas Fairbanks and George M. Cohan, the same week, in what may prove to be their greatest successes. This double offering comes at a psychological moment, when the American public is most in need of the diversion of light entertainment.

"For Sale" a Hit in New York.

Twenty-one theaters of the major class in New York City played Gladys Hulette and Creighton Hale in "For Sale" last week. Five of these houses on Broadway had special lobby displays, and in one theater in the Bronx a novel advertising campaign was used. The theater management placed signs in vacant store windows playing up the title of the picture in heavy lettering, and drew large business thereby.

Scene from "The Kid Is Clever" (Fox).

Walsh's "The Kid Is Clever" Is Motion Picture Satire

A RAPID-FIRE comedy of South American revolutionists, an adventure-loving young American, and an eccentric motion picture director is furnished by George Walsh in "The Kid Is Clever," which is announced from the feature release. The picture, which is a William Fox offices as the next special film within a film, is described as one long laugh.

"The Kid Is Clever" was written by Randolph Lewis and Ralph Spence, and a particularly strong cast supports the star, the other players being Doris Pawn, Ralph Lewis, A. Burt Wesner, Don Likes, Clyde Hoplins, and James Marcus.

The picture tells the difficulties which George Walsh experiences when word comes to the studio that his director is ill. In the telegram announcing the director's illness, Walsh is authorized to employ his own director. While George is wondering where he can pick up a director, Monsieur Jules De Hoe Beaux, the great French cinema director, appears in the studio, and applies for a job. George Walsh immediately gives him a job directing the new Walsh picture, and work is begun.

A month later the picture is completed, and in one of the projection rooms of the company Walsh, his camera man, and the new director view the result.

Mix Finishes "Fame and Fortune."

Word received at the William Fox offices is that Tom Mix has completed the filming of "Fame and Fortune," a picturization of Charles Alden Seltzer's story, "Slow Burgess."

The subject was directed by Lynn Reynolds, and the scenario was written by Bennett Cole. A particularly strong cast supports Tom Mix, the others in the play being Katherine Connors, George Nicholls, Robert Bolden, Charles McHugh, Annette De Foe, Val Paul, E. N. Wallack, and Clarence Burton.

May Irwin Is to Make Universal Two-Reeler

MAY Irwin will shortly make her bow to photoplay patrons via the medium of the two-reel Universal production entitled "Thoroughbreds."

The picture was filmed at Southington, Conn., famous as the home of a big stock farm. Miss Irwin enacts the role of an up-to-the-minute business woman who, although ignorant of matters rural, wins success as a farmer through perseverance and sound business methods.

Aside from the story itself those picture patrons who reside in rural communities will take particular interest in the wonderful Jersey stock shown in this Universal release. Some of the most famous cows in the country are shown. The release date for "Thoroughbreds" has not as yet been announced.

Mary Murillo to Write for Select.

Work on the scenario of a photoplay to be used by Norma Talmadge is progressing in the hands of Mary Murillo. Sydney A. Franklin will be the director.

Mary Murillo has been engaged by the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation to write scenarios exclusively for that concern. This brings Miss Murillo once more to the front as a scenarioist for Select Pictures. Clara Kimball Young's recent popular picture, "The Reason Why," was prepared for the screen by Miss Murillo, who also prepared titles for Norma Talmadge's "The Safety Curtain."

Two Timely Paramounts For Early July Issue

TWO unusually timely subjects will be released under the Paramount trademark early in July by the Famous Players Lasky Corporation. Both are Thomas H. Ince productions, the first, scheduled for July 1, being "The Kaiser's Shadow," featuring Dorothy Dalton, and the second, released July 8, being "The Claws of the Hun," in which Charles Ray is starred. While neither is essentially a war picture, both productions are closely interwoven with the great struggle on the other side of the Atlantic.

"The Kaiser's Shadow," which was written by Octavus Roy Cohen and J. U. Giesy, is said to offer a series of thrills and surprises. The element of mystery dominates the story. It deals with the German spy propaganda in this country and the ingenious methods adopted by the United States Secret Service to suppress the Hun agents wherever they may be lurking.

In "The Claws of the Hun," adapted by R. Cecil Smith from the story by Ella Stuart Carson, Charles Ray is seen in a story calculated to teach a lesson in patriotism to the mothers of the country. The photoplay offers plenty of strong dramatic action. Mr. Ray is supposted by Jane Novak, Robert McKim and Melbourne MacDowell.

Jane and Katherine Make Speeches.

A feature of an entertainment given recently at Bayside, L. I., by the residents of that town for 300 visiting Belgian soldiers, was the singing, dancing and speechmaking of Jane and Katherine Lee, the Fox "baby grands."

Jane's speech was in verse and made a big hit with the audience. Jane said: "You'd scarce expect a little girl like me to come up here where all can see, and make a speech as well as those who wear the grandest kind of clothes. But I like you and if you like me then size don't count, we will agree."

As souvenirs of the occasion Jane and Katherine were presented with a cartridge brought from the front, a button from the uniform of a Belgian soldier worn through the war and a button from the uniform of a German prisoner.

"Woman Eternal" Carefully Directed.

"The Woman Eternal," the feature in which Elaine Hammerstein stars, and which will be released this summer by Pathe, was written and produced for the screen with the same attention to detail as if for the speaking stage. John E. Ince, who wrote the original scenario, insisted that every character learn the lines and speak them during the taking of scenes. That this painstaking effort materially benefitted the final result can be judged by the picture. Ralph Ince directed the picture.

Farnsworth Talks About Making of "The One Woman"

THE Mastercraft Photoplay Corporation announces the completion of its initial production at the Brunton studios in Los Angeles. According to F. Eugene Farnsworth, president of the concern, this first picture is distinctly in that class known to the industry as "super-productions." It is a screen adaptation of Thomas Dixon's "The One Woman."

"In the first place," states Mr. Farnsworth, "Dr. Dixon had a gigantic theme for the strong, virile story which he turned out. The author wrote of something which he felt strongly—the question of socialism as it is generally understood and advocated in the United States. This is maintained to be against all loyalty to country, to humanity, and to the very basic ideas of the home and social ethics. He sincerely felt a great danger in the growth of such a doctrine among the American people.

"So we have an exceptionally strong basis as the theme of our first production—a novel which is both vital and timely, from an author whose books have already proved themselves admirably adapted for screen interpretation. In offering this story in its screen version we have given it a worthy production down to the most minute details of screen technique. It has a four-squared bigness combined with something which I think is seldom found in really big pictures—fine artistic details.

"There was at one time before we started the actual filming of the production considerable discussion about the length, which might have run as high as ten or twelve reels. It was agreed, however, that seven reels would be the ideal length which would enable the production to be shown not only in the foremost theaters throughout the country, but would also offer managers of the smaller houses an opportunity to present the production to their audiences."

Fox's English Offices Issue Novel Publicity

IN a letter to Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, Harry Engholm, who is publicity representative of the United Kingdom branch of the Fox Corporation, shows how the war is developing various devices to conserve the supply of war materials in England.

"With regard to our big productions," writes Mr. Engholm, "which I hear from all sides, are very greatly appreciated. I have issued a novel form of synopsis printed on a card ten inches by eight, one side of which contains an extremely brief description of the play, and the other an artistic portrait of the star in question. These synopses have secured for us universal praise, and in this country, with conditions as they are, they meet all the needs of the moment. The card is somewhat easier to get than paper for the time being.

"The closing of all houses of entertainment and restaurants in the Southern countries of England at the hour of 10:30 at night does not seem to have affected the picture palace to any great extent; in fact, the picture palace from my observation is the one paying entertainment from the box office point of view. Of course, the farther North one goes the less things are affected by these war measures."

Eighth "Bulwark" Shows Hun Damage.

"The Destruction Wrought by the Huns at St. Quentin" is the title of the eighth picture of the graphic "Britain's Bulwarks" series of exclusive official war pictures released by Pathe on June 30. The British infantry is shown moving forward for a further advance and cheered by their comrades who are resting by the wayside.

We are shown French guns bombarding a village near St. Quentin preparatory to attack. The Leicesters are awaiting an order to advance in old German trenches, which make up the British support line. A ruined village in possession of the British is being heavily bombarded with gas shells. After beating back the Germans during a night attack we see the return of the successful British troops bringing many more prisoners which are added to their grand total.

Happy Angle in Bessie Love Play.

In releasing Bessie Love's play, "A Litle Sister of Everybody," Pathe is executing a novel publicity campaign in which the following billing is used: "The happy play with the glad girl."

Letters from exhibitors all over the United States and Canada indicate that patrons of photoplay theaters are demanding plays with a truthful, healthful optimistic note prominent. The great surplus of war dramas, war pictorials, problem plays, sex plays, crook plays, and others of that character seem to make it essential that more quiet plays built upon human, natural lines should be offered.

"'A Little Sister of Everybody' is this kind of a play," says Pathe, and Bessie Love reappears in one of her familiar ingenue roles.

Miss Barriscale Making "A Wife's Conscience"

BESSIE BARRISCALE has returned to the Brunton studios in Los Angeles from her visit to New York and has completed her arrangements for the costuming of her new role in her next Paralta production, "A Wife's Conscience." The story will offer Miss Barriscale one of the best opportunities she has yet had for the display of strong emotional acting. The picture is one of tense situations and romantic moments, made all the more striking by the fact that the cast is not a large one, and the interest therefore centers in the six principal players.

Edward Coxen, who plays the husband, has played the lead with Miss Barriscale in "Madam Who," one of her biggest and most successful pictures.

Charles Gunn, who is cast for the heavy, just finished playing the lead in Miss Barriscale's last picture, "Patriotism."

Mary Jane Irving, who plays the child in the forthcoming production, a part, by the way, upon which the drama centers, is one of the most attractive and natural of the children now on the screen.

James Farley is cast for the detective, while David Kirby is to be seen in an important creminal role.

"De Luxe Annie" Breaks Stanley Record.

Jules Mastbaum, of the Mastbaum chain of theaters, with headquarters at Philadelphia, spent the day with Lewis J. Selznick, president of Select Pictures Corporation, June 11, at Select headquarters in New York.

Mr. Mastbaum was loud in his praise of the various current releases on the star series of pictures made by Select stars. He reported enthusiasm on the part of both exhibitors and public over Norma Talmadge's latest picture, "De Luxe Annie." This attraction, he informed Mr. Selznick, had just broken all standing house records during its week's run at the Stanley theater in Philadelphia.

"The Kaiser" is Propaganda for Screen.

That the success which attended the showing of "The Kaiser, The Beast of Berlin," at the Orpheum theater, Seattle, Wash., has caused manager Levy, of that house, to decide to adopt a straight moving picture policy is stated in a report made to Jewel Productions, Inc., by G. A. Metzger, manager of its Portland office.

The Orpheum has heretofore featured vaudeville with a moderate degree of success. The recent run of "The Kaiser" to exceptional business at this Seattle amusement resort demonstrated the possibilities of a policy calling for showing of nothing but big film productions.

It is stated that the change in the Orpheum's policy will become effective with the coming season.

Washburn and Paramount Sign Three-Year Compact

JESSE L. LASKY, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production, announces the signing of Bryant Washburn to a three-year contract to appear in Paramount pictures. Under the terms of the compact Mr. Washburn will make eight Paramount pictures during the coming year.

"Mr. Washburn's engagement," said Mr. Lasky, "is one of the most satisfactory, not only to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, but to exhibitors and the public of all the recent additions to our forces. There is a scarcity of light comedy stars on the screen, and as such Mr. Washburn is prominent among the few who may be said to possess real merit. He laid the foundation for his later success on the speaking stage. It was in 1907 that he began his stage career, appearing in several successes with George Fawcett, and it is an interesting coincidence that this announcement of his engagement should come on the heels of the announced appearance of Mr. Fawcett in a leading role in D. W. Griffith's Artcraft presentation of 'The Great Love,' soon to be released. Later he appeared as a star in his own right in 'The Fighter.'

"Mr. Washburn's motion picture career started in 1911 with Essanay, for whom he made many comedies of uniform excellence during succeeding years, including 'Skinner Bubble,' 'Skinner's Baby,' 'Promised Land,' 'The Golden Idiot,' 'The Fibbers,' etc., and 'The Girl God Made for Bryant Washburn.

Jones,' 'Skinner's Dress Suit,' and others for K-E-S-E. His more recent appearances have been as a Pathe star.

"Mr. Washburn will make a series of eight pictures for Paramount release the coming year, the first of which will be an adaptation of William Hurlbut's comedy, 'Saturday to Monday,' which probably will be released in the early fall."

John Stewart Robinson Directing Alice Brady

ALICE BRADY has acquired a new director in the person of John Stewart Robertson. This director, who has done effective work for the screen, received a stage training under Charles Frohman with Maude Adams, and under Henry B. Harris, having been two years with Rose Stahl. Mr. Robertson, who is in charge of the new production which Miss Brady is now starting for Select, is hard at work collecting his cast, the principal members of which already have been engaged.

David Powell will be seen for the first time as Miss Brady's leading man. Crauford Kent will play the heavy role in the piece. Mr. Kent has appeared in two other of Miss Brady's Select pictures, having been effective as the lawyer in "The Knife" and as leading man in Miss Brady's more recent Select picture, "The Ordeal of Rosetta."

Miss Brady herself will again essay a double role. In this case she will play two sisters who strikingly resemble each other in appearance, but whose natures are totally dissimilar. The production is being prepared at the Paragon studio, where the filming will soon be in order.

Keeney Starts Work on His Fourth Production

THE Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation has begun at the Biograph studios, in the Bronx, the production of its four picture, "The Girl with a Past," by Paul Armstrong. According to the general manager of the corporation, Ray C. Owens, production was resumed earlier than had been intended, because of the brisk demand for the first picture, "A Romance of the Underworld," which is now open for bookings. The original plan was to produce three pictures and suspend production until the latter part of the summer or early in the fall. The pictures already made, in addition to the subject named, are "Marriage," by Guy Bolton, and "Her Problem," by E. Lloyd Sheldon.

All of the Keeney pictures star Catherine Calvert, the widow of Mr. Armstrong. Among those in the cast of the fourth picture are Dudley Ayres, well known as leading man in stock, and Edwin Forsberg, who starred in "Madame X," "Jack o' Diamonds," and other screen productions. This will be Mr. Ayres' first appearance in pictures. Tests which have been made of him show that he registers remarkably well. He is tall and dark and has demonstrated exceptional abilities as an actor.

The part in which Miss Calvert will appear is one which admirably fits her winsome personality. It also offers unusual opportunity for the display of her talents as an emotional actress. The production will be directed by James Kirkwood, under whose direction all the other Keeney pictures were made.

"A Romance of the Underworld" will be released in about a week. All of the Keeney pictures are being distributed through the William L. Sherry Service.

Harry McRae Webster Is Working on Second Play

THE stamp of approval has been placed upon the Harry McRae Webster Productions' big seven-reel feature, "Reclaimed; the Struggle for a Soul Between Love and Hate." The press has given it unstinted praise. Not only the author, Richard Field Carroll, and the producer, Harry McRae Webster, but the stars, Miss Mabel Juliene Scott and Niles Welch and their supporting cast headed by Anders Randolf and such well-known players as Mabel Wright, Fred W. Peters, Warren Cook, Sidney Bracy, Maude LeRoy and Little "Babette" Connelly have been happily cast.

Harry McRae Webster has turned over the exclusive sales management to Chester Beecroft, and together with the author of "Reclaimed," he is now busy on their next production, which is said to contain a new theme treated in a novel fashion.

Mr. Webster says the new feature will live up to the motto adopted by the Harry McRae Webster Productions and prove a play with punch, pulsations, purity and perfection.

How Dawn Secured Griffith Film.

The completion of arrangements for the presentation of "Hearts of the World" by the Dawn Masterplays in Michigan demonstrates, according to a statement from C. C. Pettijohn, of the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation, the value of cooperative booking. The Dawn, like a number of other distributors, desired to secure this production, for which a record price was asked, and at the suggestion of Mr. Pettijohn, Mr. Hyman secured from twenty-one first run theaters in Michigan signed contracts, with all the exhibitors interested joining the Affiliated if they were not already members. With these contracts, Mr. Pettijohn arranged for the financing of the deal in such a manner that all parties interested, including the Affiliated organization in Michigan and D. W. Griffith, himself, will share in the profits accruing from the showing of this picture.

"The Yellow Ticket" Opens Orpheum.

Pathe's production of "The Yellow Ticket," with Fannie Ward, was selected by Manager Eugene Levy as the opening attraction of the beautiful Orpheum theater in Seattle. The Orpheum was built four years ago as a permanent home for Orpheum time vaudeville in the Northwest Pacific metropolis. The house has now passed into the hands of Mr. Levy, who will devote it to high class photoplays also. In announcing "The Yellow Ticket," Mr. Levy ran full page display advertisements in the daily newspapers of Seattle, using the copy and cuts prepared by Pathe's New York publicity department in each case.

"Cupid by Proxy" for Baby Osborne.

"Cupid by Proxy" is the title of the next play in which Baby Marie Osborne appears, to be released next month by Pathe. While the serious nature is not dominant in "Cupid by Proxy" as it was in "The Voice of Destiny," just released, the child star has ample opportunity to display the outcropping of mature talent which has recently been shown in her features.

Little Snowball, the snow colored lad who had made a very considerable personal hit in Baby Marie's pictures, is on the job again, and there is a strong romantic flavor to the play, as is indicated by its title.

Gordon Back on Screen Following Auto Smash

HARRIS GORDON, former Mutual Film star, has just completed a Fox special feature under the direction of Richard Stanton. This marks Mr. Gordon's return to films after an absence of almost two years, due to injuries received in an automobile accident. His screen career began in 1912 with the Reliance company, where he supported such stars as Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh and Robert Harron, appearing under the direction of Edgar Lewis and D. W. Griffith.

With Universal Mr. Gordon was featured in the Victor brand, and then returned to Harris Gordon.

Mutual to star in Mutual Masterpictures. Some of the releases in which he will be remembered are "The Picture of Dorian Grey," "The Mill on the Floss," "The Escape," "The Floor Above," "The Image Maker" and "At the Mercy of Tiberius."

Dual Eva Topsy Roles Require Many Changes

IN PLAYING the two roles of Topsy and Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Marguerite Clark was compelled to change from one make-up to another at least a hundred times while the Paramount picture was being produced. In photographing a moving picture story all the scenes are taken in each particular setting at one time, and Little Eva and Topsy appear in the same settings in a great many instances. The grease paint and burnt cork and the kinky curls as well as the pickaninny dress had to be replaced with the fluffy daintiness of Eva as many as six times in one day, and the star's skin was raw and painful from the vigorous scrubbings it received.

The esteem in which Miss Clark is held in the South and her winsome powers of persuasion were demonstrated when she enlisted the services of a number of old soldiers who were inmates of the Confederate Army Home of Louisiana to take part in the picture.

Lyman Broening, chief of the camera staff at the Eastern studios, was in personal charge of the photographic work, which entailed the use of multiple exposures in scenes where Topsy and Little Eva appear at the same time.

Frank Hall to Distribute Two Dozen Pictures a Year

Terminates Arrangement with Foursquare Pictures and Announces New Channel for Distribution of U. S. Exhibitors' Productions Through Several State Right Exchanges.

THE U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, of which Frank Hall is president and general manager, has terminated the arrangement under which their productions have been handled through the exchanges of Foursquare Pictures, and announce that the following deals have been consummated for handling their pictures, "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," "Those Who Pay," "The Belgian," "Just a Woman," and "The Crucible of Life."

All U. S. subjects will be handled in New York State by the Liberty Distributing Corporation and in New Jersey by Frank Gersten, Inc. In New England the Globe Feature Film Company will handle "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," "Those Who Pay," "The Belgian," and "Just a Woman," and the Eastern Feature Film Company will have "The Crucible of Life" and all future releases for one year. All the U. S. productions will be handled by Max Milder and John Hennessey for eastern Pennsylvania, and Dawn Masterplay Company for Michigan. All U. S. productions and all future releases for one year will be handled by Quality Film Corporation for western Pennsylvania; Doll-Van Film Corporation, for Indiana and Illinois, and All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc., for California, Nevada, Arizona, and Hawaiian Islands, while Super-Film Attractions will handle "Just a Woman" and "The Crucible of Life" for Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and District of Columbia.

The policy of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation of buying outright special productions and renting them to exhibitors through independent exchanges has resulted in this organization closing several large deals of interest to exhibitors, and the securing of a number of the most important pictures of the past year.

The U. S. plan, according to a statement of one of their representatives, is to force each productions to stand on its own merits and make a profit dependent on its box office value. An exchange in each territory is selected while an advertising campaign is carried on by the home office introducing each picture independent of the other U. S. subjects and continued at intervals during the life of the picture instead of being limited to only a few weeks before release date.

While Mr. Hall will continue to buy special productions upon the open market he is also contracting for twelve special pictures to be made by two prominent directors during the coming year. His plan calls for the purchase and distribution of twenty-four pictures in the next twelve months, regarding which interesting announcements are promised for the near future.

Many Southern Scenes In "Tempered Steel"

OLGA PETROVA'S fourth special production, "Tempered Steel," is characterized by many beautiful Southern scenes. The locale of the scenario called for the enactment of several scenes south of the Mason and Dixon line, and several weeks were spent by the company in North and South Carolina for the purpose of securing the necessary "atmosphere." Director Ralph Ince is said to have taken full advantage of the opportunities offered, and to have secured many fine "shots" of the cotton fields and picturesque colored workers.

A historic mansion was used for the interiors, showing many relics of ante-bellum days, and the scenes are reminiscent of the traditions of that section of the country. In addition many animated pictorial titles showing the darkey with his banjo, old log cabins, and scenes showing the care free spirit of the Southern negro workers have been used, and several bars of "Massa's in the Cold Cold Ground" have been worked in effectively in the opening scenes of the production.

"Tempered Steel" will be released through the exchanges of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit sometime during the month of June.

Associated Pictures Formed By Lubin, Sawyer and Ince

ASSOCIATED PICTURES, INC., is the title which has been selected for the company recently organized by Herbert Lubin, Arthur H. Sawyer, and Ralph Ince to produce a series of special features to be known as Ralph Ince Film Attractions. Louis Joseph Vance, the production analyst of this company, is now completing the initial story, and it is expected that work on the first production will begin within the next two weeks.

Arthur H. Sawyer has issued the following statement regarding the plans of this organization:

"The pictures will consist of big melodramatic stories dealing with subjects whose entertainment value has been fully tested. We believe that the combination of Ralph Ince and Louis Joseph Vance should make for the production of extraordinary screen offerings, inasmuch as the latter is one of the foremost American writers of modern melodrama, while Ralph Ince is a master in the art of injecting thrill and 'punch' into picture plays of a virile nature.

"Casts of players whose names and faces will be immediately recognized by followers of the motion picture and stage will be assembled to interpret each story, and we feel that the series of 'Ralph Ince Film Attractions' which are to be produced will answer the ever increasing demand of the state rights buyer for 'better productions'."

Submarines and Dirigibles In Gaumont News-Reels

IN connection with the activity of German submarines on the American coast, Gaumont Graphic No. 11 shows what is believed to be the type of U-boat which sank several sailing vessels and steamships; also the types of aeroplanes, dirigibles, etc., that are patrolling the coast in search of U-boats, together with many of the survivors from the lost ships.

A picture of a new submarine recently added to the French navy is also shown, and in Gaumont News No. 12 is pictured the graduating class of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

The Current Graphic also shows Red Cross call for 25,000 nurses, French class of 1919, which has just been called to the colors; the manner in which Parisians protect their windows from air raids and bombardments, opening of 1918 bathing season at Atlantic City, the Secretary of War testing a 5-ton caterpillar tractor, a concrete launch and other subjects.

News No. 12 also shows interesting scenes of the Picardy and Italian battle fronts, U. S. artillery pounding the German lines, our boys marching to the front and some of them being decorated for exceptional bravery; also a steamship recently sunk by U-boats near the Atlantic coast.

"Throwing The Bull" and "Wild Babies" Share Reel

A COMBINATION of amusing zoological fact and cartoon comedy is effected in the latest fifteen-minute picture issued by the Educational Films Corporation of America. This reel comprises an International black and white comedy entitled "Throwing the Bull" and a Ditmar's "Living Book of Nature" offering entitled "Wild Babies."

In the cartoon comedy, Happy Hooligan is the principal comedian, and the story centers around a cow yielding condensed milk. Happy as the custodian is inveigled from his job by the wiles of a Spanish girl, and the cow is stolen for the purpose of fortifying the depleted ranks of a number of fighting bulls against which a company of matadors is to battle.

Many things happen to the cow and to Happy in his endeavors to effect its return to the more peaceful pursuit.

Professor Ditmar's "Wild Babies" shows the evolution of the tadpole into the frog, the training and guarding of the baby porcupines, the education of infant turtles, and how the aouidad (a rare species of goat) teachers its young to climb. This playful animal lives among rocks, and the sole ambition of the mothers is to make their children mountaineers.

Many Reasons Contribute to Success of "Stolen Orders"

THE conclusion of the first week's showing of "Stolen Orders" at the Park theater, New York, appears to have vindicated the judgment of the critics, who declared that it should be a tremendous box office magnet. Not only has it made money, but it is said to have set a record for profitable engagements at high box office prices.

This is ascribed to a number of reasons. The production is timely, and the foiling of German spies is exciting and interesting in view of the constant warfare waged by the Government against the German secret agents. The spectacular scenes—the fight in the car of a dirigible balloon far above the sea, the rescue of a drowning girl by a hydroaeroplane, and the scenes on the American battleships—all draw people to the box office. The exciting thrills and the charming love story add to the pulling power of the picture.

Jester Completing Year's Output.

With the return of Mr. William Steiner, founder of the Jester Comedy Company, from his Western trip, work on the last four Jester comedies that will make up the first year's output has commenced. The finishing of these subjects will bring the releases in complete form up to and including January, 1919.

Western Photoplays To Produce Six Features

Also Engage Sheldon Lewis for Serial Now Being Made Starring Leah Baird.

WESTERN PHOTOPLAYS, INC., of which Messrs Golden and Alperstein are the managing officials, announce that following the completion of the sixteen episode serial on which she is now engaged, Leah Baird will be starred in a series of six feature productions based on well known plays and books, and she will then be presented in another serial of fifteen episodes.

The cast of the present serial is rapidly being completed, and Western Photoplays, Inc., advise that box office attraction, as well as ability, constitutes the recommendation of the individual players.

The latest acquisition is Sheldon Lewis, familiar to motion picture audiences all over the country for his work in a number of serials, including "The Iron Claw" and "The Hidden Hand," in which he has been the center of apparently innumerable mysteries. Mr. Lewis is a master of make-up and manipulator of disguises, as well as an actor of ability.

It is stated that Joseph A. Golden, who is directing the production, is utilizing dramatic suspense and situations for the punches in the serial in addition to the danger thrills and stunts.

Assembling and Cutting of "The Eagle's Eye" Finished

GOOD-BYE cutting room!" It was Theodore Wharton, of Wharton, Inc., who half-shouted the words as he locked the door of the cutting room at the Wharton plant in Ithaca one night last week. And the reason was that five minutes before he had assembled and cut the last scene of the twentieth episode of "The Eagle's Eye."

And in the cutting of that last scene a noteworthy achievement in the making of motion picture serials had been finished, for "The Eagle's Eye" has fulfilled more purposes than that of an ordinary serial, as it has been used to combat the intrigues and the propaganda of Germany and has been used by Liberty Loan committees to further the buying of bonds. It is also said to have been used in Mexico to forestall German propaganda, and it soon is to have widespread circulation abroad, that foreign countries may see the difficulties with which America was beset before it entered the war.

In the taking of the picture, the work was evenly divided between Theodore and Leopold D. Wharton, Leopold looking after the direction, Theodore handling the work in the cutting and assembling rooms.

"Hearts of the World" Breaking State Right Record

Large Proportion of Territory on Griffith Picture Already Disposed of at Epoch Making Prices in Remarkably Short Time--Producer Retains Interest in Profits.

MUCH as was expected from the point of view of financial returns from D. W. Griffith's romance of the great war, "Hearts of the World," the prices which have been secured for the state rights already disposed of on this production are said to have not only exceeded all previous state rights purchase records, but have even advanced beyond the anticipations of the producer, both in the sums received and the remarkably short space of time in which the rights of the greater part of the country have been disposed of.

The territorial rights to the picture already ceded by the producer are as follows: The New England States, to Wm. H. O'Neill of the Auditorium theater, Manchester, N. H., for $100,000, the southern states, including Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, North Carolina, Louisiana, Tennessee, to Abe S. Guckenheimer of Savannah, Ga., for $100,000, and Kentucky, to the Doll-Van Film Corpn. of Indianapolis, for $75,000; Michigan, to the Dawn Masterplay Co., of which Arthur S. Hyman is general manager, for $60,000, and the western states, including Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico, California, Arizona, Nevada, to Sol Lesser, for $200,000.

It is stated that those sums represent only the advances, the producer retaining a half interest in the profits after the amounts in question have been returned to the purchasers. The territory still open on the Griffith Masterpiece is New York, Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, New Jersey, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, for which negotiations are now pending at the Griffith offices at 720 Longacre building.

Harry Rapf Returns from Successful Western Trip

HARRY RAPF, who has just returned from a trip through the west in the interest of his productions, reports that he has closed a contract with Sol Lesser of the All Star Feature Distributors to handle "The Struggle Everlasting" and "The Accidental Honeymoon" in California, Arizona and Nevada. He also met Leon D. Netter in Chicago and arranged with him to handle these two productions in Ohio. After having his pictures reviewed and passed by the Board of Censors, Mr. Rapf sold his two productions to Louis Frank and Joe Cooper of the Motion Picture Theater Owner's Association for Illinois and southern Wisconsin. Messrs. Frank and Cooper are elated with these productions, and they hope to see them in the majority of theaters in Illinois, as they intend to inaugurate a tremendous advertising campaign, on account of the exhibitors themselves owning the rights to these pictures.

Blanche Sweet Signed for Long Term by Harry Garson

HARRY GARSON announces that account of Blanche Sweet's excellent work in "The Hushed Hour," the first production in which she has appeared under his management, he has signed her for a long term contract.

"The Hushed Hour" is being made at the Fine Arts studio in Hollywood, California, and the cast is composed of prominent players, including Harry Northrup, Wilfred Lucas, Milton Sills, Mary Anderson, and Rosemary Theby.

The second picture will be "The Unpardonable Sin," by Rupert Hughes. This production will be made in New York, and Miss Sweet expects to arrive East about the first of July to start work on this production.

Upon Mr. Garson's arrival in New York about July fifteenth the method of release for Miss Sweet's pictures will be decided upon.

"When Men Betray" Against Double Standard of Morals

"WHEN MEN BETRAY," the latest story written and directed by Ivan Abramson, is said to have made an even stronger appeal than any of his earlier successes.

Week bookings are received daily, and some theater managers are securing it for two and three weeks' run.

The story is a preachment against the double standard of morals, and dwells on the consequence of immorality showing how far-reaching and unsuspecting may be the results of a man's departure from physical purity.

The author is said to have evolved a gripping drama with a strong climax, and both the interiors and exteriors are above the ordinary, and the photography is the work of an artist.

W. H. Offers Twenty-Four Fatty Arbuckle Reissues

W. H. PRODUCTIONS COMPANY are now ready to release the series of 16 two-reel Shorty Hamilton pictures, the original titles of which are as follows: "Shorty Inherits a Harem," "Shorty's Ranch," "Shorty's Trip to Mexico," "Shorty Escapes Matrimony," "Shorty and the Fortune Teller," "Shorty in Trouble," "Shorty and the Prize Fighter," "Shorty and Sherlock Holmes," "Shorty's Sacrifice," "Shorty's Strategy," "Shorty Among Cannibals," "Adventures of Shorty," "Shorty Falls Into a Title," "Shorty Turns Actor," "Shorty Turns Judge," and "Shorty Shifts a Sheriff."

It is announced that each of these subjects will be reconstructed and given a new title, the old title also being given prominence not only on the film, but on the advertising matter. It is claimed that there is realy five reels of action in each two reels, and that each one is of a different type. They were produced under the supervision of Thos. H. Ince. Some territory has already been disposed of, and it is expected that the remaining territory will be closed quickly.

W. H. Productions Co. will also reissue a series of 24 one-reel Fatty Arbuckle comedies. In many of these series Mabel Normand is featured with Arbuckle. Every foot is said to be full of action.

International Comedies Are Timely.

The adventures of the scapegraces, the Katzenjammer Kids, continue to excite merriment. One characteristic of these cartoons is that they are timely—relating to the news of the day or to some topic of seasonal interest. The last three have dealt with the summer themes of "Swat the Fly," "Fisherman's Luck," and "Up in the Air." Then will follow the burlesque story of a mid-summer picnic, and after that, one dealing with a charitable benefit at which the Captain poses as a magician and the Kids spoil his tricks.

Seiter Engaged to Direct Jesters.

William A. Seiter has been engaged to direct Twede-Dan in Jester comedies. Mr. Seiter's work in the comedy field as a director is well known to the motion picture public.

Scene from "Your Fighting Navy at Work and at Play" (Educational).

Many State Right Offers for "Your Fighting Navy"

Brisk Demand from Buyers Says E. W. Hammons, Who Issues Statement Regarding This Patriotic Feature Which Was Edited by Lieutenant Henry Reuterdahl.

THE announcement that the presentation of "Your Fighting Navy at Work and at Play" at a Broadway theater and in Greater New York generally would be followed by its sale to state righters has created a demand all over the country. Parties from Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Minneapolis, and California called on E. W. Hammons, vice-president of the Educational Films Corporation, and asked that the proposition be explained in detail. For the information of the trade, Mr. Hammons issues the following:

"'Your Fighting Navy at Work and at Play' is a five-reel feature prepared under the approval of the navy and edited by Lieutenant Henry Reuterdahl, U. S. N. R. F. It is a big spectacle of what the navy is actually doing to protect the coasts, to convoy the troops and supplies going to Europe, and to help keep the Teutonic fleets bottled up. All this is shown faithfully and accurately by means of a series of manouevres representative of everything done at the fighting front, the navy having co-operated to the fullest extent, even providing a smoke screen chase and the methods of hunting, capturing, and destroying submarines.

"The picture is arranged in units of approximately 1,000 feet, which rise by virtue of suspense, surprise, and climax to the spectacular and emotional height of the finish. Each unit can be shown separately, or the five-reeler can be shown as a whole. Whether used as a serial or as feature, 'Your Fighting Navy,' I confidently predict, will prove one of the strongest attractions of the summer and fall of 1918. Its value is based not only on the merit of films and titling, but also on its journalistic quality.

"Any state rights man who purchases the film now can clean up in his territory on it the very first time big naval happenings break on the first page of the papers, and they are going to break again, because the German rats will not stay in their holes indefinitely, but are coming out, according to the best expert naval opinion. The picture will also be of value as a record and standard of information for many years to come."

To Issue Orchestration Based on "Mickey" Song

DANIELS & WILSON, publishers, advise that the song, "Mickey," is being featured at the Tivoli theater, San Francisco, this week, and that Harry Fox, the well known vaudeville and musical comedy actor, is singing it with a chorus slide.

The following week Mr. Fox will appear at the Turner & Dahnken theater, Oakland, and subsequently at a number of other Turner & Dahnken houses.

They also advise that the exhibitors on the Coast are anxiously awaiting the picture, and that they are arranging to send a full orchestration of "Mickey," with a set of slides, to the largest picture houses throughout the country, so that when the feature is released the public in every section will be familiar with the name "Mickey."

"The Eagle's Eye" Popular With Canadian Audiences

ACCORDING to Charles M. Stevens, general manager of Superfeatures, Limited, Canadian distributors of "The Eagle's Eye," this serial based on the spy activities of the German Government has created unusual interest in the Dominion particularly in view of the public's previous knowledge of the scope and extent of Germany's plots for world conquest, and a number of exhibitors and exchangemen have had their calculations upset; in many instances houses which change their program daily are showing "The Eagle's Eye" for two or three days and playing to capacity. Soldiers returned from the front on furlough or invalided home, men who have faced the German hordes, are showing a keen interest in what the Kaiser's secret army attempted to do in America.

Many Battles of Wits in "The Hand of Vengeance"

WHEN the hero is in peril, and there is seemingly no way in which he can escape, and then he does escape by a surprising and clever trick the spectators are apt to sit up and take notice. It is claimed that this occurs in practically every reel of "The Hand of Vengeance," the ten-episode serial which the Gaumont Company has ready for summer showing, and that it does not rely on improbabilities or inventions yet to be made to save the hero and heroine from danger.

There are many clever characters in this serial, the avenger of wrongs who acts as his own judge and jury, and an expert crime investigator who opposes him. The many battles of wits between these two begin in the first and continue until the last episode. This is said to be a serial with no padding, which could have easily been made into more episodes, but it was thought best to release it in only ten episodes to enable exhibitors to find an antidote for hot weather dullness during the coming summer.

"The Hand of Vengeance" will be released only through state rights exchanges, and a trade showing will probably be announced next week.

Special Government Poster For Petrova's W. S. S. Tour

AFTER returning to New York to witness a screening of her latest picture, "Patience Sparhawk," Madame Petrova left for Boston this week to begin her transcontinental tour on behalf of the War Savings Stamp movement. Nathan Gordon, of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, of that city, will cooperate with her, and says he will have an audience of 40,000 on Boston Common to hear her speak.

It is also announced that arrangements have been completed whereby the War Savings Stamp inscription will be carried on all stationery and cuts for publicity purposes, together with patriotic posters, booklets, etc. Arrangements have also been made for a special Government poster for Madame Petrova's tour, which will be used on Government publicity for the war stamp drive. This poster will be stamped with W. S. S. insignia, and used for lobby displays and one-sheets in houses where Madame Petrova makes her personal appearance.

The tour will include Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, Kansas City, St. Louis, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Butte, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Louisville, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Cleveland, and Pittsburgh.

King Bee Completes First Year's Output

WITH the production of "Playmates" the King-Bee Films Corporation has completed its first year's output, consisting of twenty-four Billy West comedies, released one every two weeks in two reels each, as follows:

"Back Stage," "The Hero," "Doughnuts," "Cupid's Rival," "The Villain," "The Millionaire," "The Goat," "The Fly Cop," "The Chief Cook," "The Candy Kid," "The Hobo," "The Pest," "The Bandmaster," "The Slave," "The Stranger," "His Day Out," "The Rogue," "The Orderly," "The Scholar," "The Messenger," "The Handy Man," "Bright and Early," "Straight and Narrow," and "Playmates."

Within this brief period this brand has become firmly established on the market, and Billy West, the star, is being featured in a large number of motion picture theaters. World rights have been disposed of, with the exception of the countries with which we are at war.

The officials of the company consist of Louis Burstein, president and general manager; Nat H. Spitzer, vice-president and sales manager, and L. L. Hiller, treasurer, with Edward Rosenbaum, Jr., in charge of the publicity department. The studio is located at Hollywood, California, and in addition to Billy West the principal players are Babe Hardy, Leo White, Budd Ross, Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Lind, and Ethel Gibson. Charles Parrott is the director, and Ben H. Cohen, auditor.

Meyer to Handle All U. S. Features.

As announced in another article in this issue, Phillip E. Meyer, of the Liberty Distributing Corporation, has taken over the handling of five U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation productions and completed arrangements for all of the U. S. productions to be made during the coming year. This is attributed to the successful handling by Mr. Meyer's new exchange of his first two features, "The Devil's Playground" and "Nine-Tenths of the Law," which includes bookings over the Loew, Moss, and other well known circuits of large theaters in his territory.

Sales of the Week

Activities in the State Right Market During the Past Seven Days.

SEVERAL sales of additional territory on D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World" are announced in an article in another column of this department.

W. H. Productions Co. announce the sale of rights for twenty-six Chaplin reissues for Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi, to William Oldknow of the Consolidated Film Supply Co.

Announcement of a number of independent exchanges which will distribute U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation productions is published in another article in this issue.

W. H. Successful in Selling Reissues.

The W. H. Productions Company announce that all American rights on the W. S. Hart reissues which they are handling, as well as on the series of Keystone reissues, have been disposed of; also on the series of Chaplin reissues, with the exception of a single territory. There is still some open territory on the Barriscale features, and a new campaign is being launched on the series of two-reel Shorty Hamilton reissues.

Spitzer Visits Chicago.

Nat H. Spitzer, sales manager of King-Bee comedies, is in Chicago conferring with R. C. Cropper, manager of the Chicago Bee Hive exchange.

Announcement is made that the Bee Hive exchanges throughout the United States have closed fifty-four new contracts in the past six days on Billy West comedies.

Michigan Booking on "Tarzan."

Following its two weeks' engagement at the Adams theater, Detroit, "Tarzan of the Apes" has been booked by Lipp & Cross, Battle Creek, five days; Palace, Saginaw, four days; Washington, Bay City, four days; Arcade theater, Ann Arbor, two days; Majestic, Jackson, four days, and Empress theater, Lansing, seven days.

Big Demand for Fifth Jester Comedy.

Reports from exchanges handling Jester comedies are said to indicate that the fifth release, "It's a Great Life," is in great demand, and the results are beyond expectations.

Atlas Film Entertains Boston Movie Club

Film Club Makes Automobile Trip to Newton Highlands and Is Welcomed by Manager Dadmun—Those Who Particip ted.

By Robert N. Howe, No. 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, Mass.—A picnc was held by the Boston Film Club at the Atlas Film Corporation grounds Saturday afternoon, June 8, under the direction of Mrs. Florence LaPoint Brackett, president of the club. Mrs. Frank J. Howard, 1st vice president of the club was the hostess.

The party started from the Copley Plaza hotel, Boston, at 1.45 in the afternoon. There was an auto parade of fourteen cars to the Atlas studio at Newton Highlands about two thirty and started a general survey of the twenty-five acres (with but a single entrance) that compose the grounds of the Atlas Film Corporation. After looking over the outside of the studio the party passed in to the interior where a scene was acted for their special benefit. Leon E. Dadmun, manager of the Boston branch of the Atlas, conducted the party to the basement where they were shown the developing rooms and other places of interest.

A luncheon was held on the lawn in front of the studio. Speeches were made by members of the Film Club. Mr. Dadmun spoke on the good work that the Film Club had done in the way of censuring pictures.

At 5.30 o'clock the journey home was begun. Those present were (as guests) Mayor of Lowell, Hon. Perry Thompson and his wife; Walter Hartstone, Frank J. Howard, president of the Atlas Film Corp.; Herman Wolf, designer of the costumes for the Atlas Film; Edwin F. Delaney, E. F. Blodgett, Miss Grace Culbert, and Robert N. Howe, representative Moving Picture World.

The officers of the club present were: Mrs. Florence Brackett, president; Mrs. Frank J. Howard, first vice-president; Miss Mable M. Brewerton, corresponding secretary; Dr. Carrie I. Bence, second vice-president; Dr. G. Maude Hough, recording secretary; Miss Elizabeth Downs, treasurer; Mrs. Walter Nelson, auditor. The members of the club present were, Mrs. M. J. Lydon, Mrs. Evelyn W. Somerby, Miss Otelia L. Malther, Mrs. J. J. Delaney, Miss Anna Callahan, Miss Carrie A. Hartly, Mrs. Mary S. Scott, Miss Laura Brown, Mrs. Alice K. Bailey, Miss Louise Golden, Miss Bonnie Starett, Miss Harriet W. Foster, Mrs. Jennie A. Downs, Miss Emma Prichard Hadley, Miss Florence Harris, Miss Gwendolin Ridgway, Miss Jeannette Holmberg, Mrs. Alice Aberdein, Miss Mabel J. Golden, Miss Lila Izan, Miss Frances Mittenthal, Miss Ida Harrison, Miss Harriet Wilcox, Miss Helen Tongas, and Miss Kathrine Tongas.

Boston General Office Moves.

The General Film Co. of Boston has moved to 5 Isabella street, where it will have nearly as much room and the office will be more concentrated. The reason for moving is of a patriotic and economic nature allowing the Vitagraph to occupy the space formerly taken by the General on the Church street side of the same building. The Vitagraph will be installed in their new office June 10th.

Manager Hand of the Boston Pathe exchange reports very heavy bookings on the picture "Moral Suicide," that is now being distributed through the Pathe offices. Manager Hand has appointed a special representative to handle the picture in New England territory.

Massachusetts members of the salesforce of the Boston Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, are not going to let any sale slip by just by missing a train, as the whole force is now equipped with automobiles, which are used in their travels over their territory.

Boston Men Visit Portland Opening.

Portland, Maine.—The Strand theater of this city has opened with a large number of invited guests from Boston, including Harry Asher of the Famous-Players-Laskey and John and Joseph McConville of the Famous Players Boston office. The opening feature was Mary Pickford in "Miss" followed by a Fox picture, "Brave and Bold," featuring George Walsh. The theater is considered the best theater north of Boston and is only equalled by the Strand theater at Lynn, Mass., for straight pictures.

Dream Theater of Revere Sold.

Revere, Mass.—The Dream theater of this city has been sold by Eclar and McKenna. The new owner is P. J. Flynn, who controls the Crescent Gardens theater and ballroom at Revere.

Samuel Stratton in National Army.

Malden, Mass.—Samuel Stratton, formerly manager of the Mystic theater in this city has been drafted for the National army, he is succeeded by W. H. Fish, a well known theatrical man. The Mystic theater is considered the best moving picture house in this city being built in 1916 and seating 2,000. Fine business is reported under the new management.

Melrose, Mass.—The Melrose theater in this city, which has been closed during the winter on account of a fire that destroyed the theater last fall, will reopen this month.

The theater has been rebuilt and refurnished and is now one of the finest houses in Melrose. They will open up with Paramount and Artcraft pictures and vaudeville. The theater will be managed by the Melrose Amusement Company, which is controlled by William Bradstreet.

NOTES FROM ILLINOIS.

By Joe Esler, Traveling Representative of the Moving Picture World.

Theater Brevities.

Davenport, Ill.—The Quality Film Company, a new producing concern, has been organized in Davenport and has opened a studio at 208 Iowa street. C. B. Holman and Ivan L. Swanson are the managers. They will make animated and commercial motion pictures.

Moline, Ill.—W. D. Dunn, formerly of the Columbia theater at Davenport, has been appointed manager of the Palace theater in this city.

Boston Film Club, Guests of Atlas Film Corporation, Newton Highlands.

Baltimore Trade Letter

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mount Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Maryland.

Row Over "It May Be Your Daughter."

BALTIMORE, MD.—The Maryland Censor Board, on Tuesday, June 11, swore out a warrant charging Joseph Blechman, manager of the Picture Garden theater, with allowing certain portions of "It May Be Your Daughter" to be shown.

It is alleged by Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison, of the Censor Board, that many portions were ordered to be cut out of the picture by the Board and that later, when she viewed the picture in the theater, several of the scenes which had been ordered cut out, were still being shown.

The feature was advertised as "a startlingly bold picture presenting truths as they should be seen and known." The case was scheduled to come up on Thursday, June 13. It is understood that several other film men are connected with the case.

Petrova Appears at New Theater.

Thursday, June 6, was one of the gala days for the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, Baltimore. Manager L. A. DeHoff was making a big drive for the War Savings Stamp campaign. He arranged for the personal appearance of Madame Olga Petrova at the New at both the afternoon and evening. In conjunction with her personal appearance, he arranged for the screening of one of her best pictures, "The Life Mask."

On Sunday, June 9, at the Garden theater, Manager DeHoff continued his patriotic work by arranging a special performance of Gerard's, "My Four Years in Germany," for several thousand employees of the Bartlett Hayward Company munition plant. Major A. G. Nutter, of the British Army, spoke to the men on the need of hastening the work on munitions.

Arcade Aids W. S. S. Drive.

Salisbury, Md.—To aid the War Savings Stamp campaign, which was opened in Wicomoco county on the night of Wednesday, June 5, Manager W. G. Pond offered the use of his Arcade theater. Subscriptions ranging from 25 cents to $1,000 were given at the meeting for War Savings Stamps.

J. Howard Bennett Has Important Job.

J. Howard Bennett, one of the early pioneer film men of Baltimore, with whom many of the now prominent managers of the Baltimore started out, is now field auditor of the Constructing Quartermaster's Corps, at Base Hospital No. 16, New Haven, Conn.

M. D. Hooker, who for eight years has successfully piloted the affairs of the Hampden theater in Hampden, as manager, has now resigned. Mr. Hooker is going into the service of the Government in a clerical capacity. He will join the forces of J. Howard Bennett.

Notes About Maryland Taxes.

Notice has been given by City Collector Page, of Baltimore, that on July 1, 1918, the 1918 taxes on real estate, all forms of personal property, including shares of stock and other property valued or subject to valuation by the State Tax Commission, will be in arrears. From that date on the amount due will bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and a penalty at the rate of one per cent., in addition. If the taxes are not paid on July 1, 1918, the taxes on which said taxes are levied will then be subject to sale for taxes.

At a special meeting of the County Commissioners of Anne Arundel County, held in this city on the morning of Friday, June 7, the general tax rate of the county was fixed for the year of 1918 at 64 cents on $100.

The tax levy for 1918 of Howard County was fixed on Tuesday, June 4, by the county commissioners at a special meeting held in this city at 95 cents on the $100.

Theaters Must Let Patrons Pay War Tax

Philadelphia Post Office Authorities Orders All Local Theaters to Notify Patrons and Collect the Seat Tax Directly.

By F. V. Armato, 141 North Salford Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Philadelphia Post Office authorities have notified all theaters that admission prices must be displayed in a conspicuous place in front of the box office and that all war taxes would have to be collected upon the prices of the ticket sold. Theaters who have in the past been paying the tax will be required to inaugurate a new policy in order to comply with this new ruling.

W. Herchenrider Promoted.

W. Herchenrider, of the Stanley Company, has received a well-deserved promotion and is now receiving the congratulations of all his friends.

Jack Delmar Has Charge of Bookings.

Jack Delmar, of the Stanley Company, has been appointed in charge of all city and state bookings. Mr. Delmar has also been in the exhibiting field and met with considerable success in managing the Jefferson, Park, Empress, Cayuga theaters, and has been responsible for the sucess of the Rivoli which, after some difficulty, has been put on a paying basis.

"Hearts of the World" at Cape May.

"Hearts of the World" will have its initial presentation in Cape May, N. J., at the Lyric theater, on May 29, at one dollar top price, upon the occasion of the reopening of this house under the management of Karl Suelke.

Mrs. Given Back Smiling.

Miss Catherine Agnes Daly, for many years private secretary to Alexander Boyd, was given a royal reception by the employees of the Stanley Company upon the return from her honeymoon from which she emerged with the title of Mrs. Kenneth Caldwell Given. Her husband, Sergeant Given, has been in the service now for quite some time and we have good reason to believe that the bride has realized the height of her ambition by marrying one of Uncle Sam's warriors. Mrs. Given received a substantial wedding gift of $100 in gold from her numerous friends in the Stanley Company. Mrs. Given is back again at her desk, smiling and happy, and apparently much interested in her secretarial position.

Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company, announces that he has secured for presentation at the Victoria theater Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," which just closed a successful four weeks' engagement at the Forrest theater, Philadelphia. The engagement has been limited to one week from Monday, June 16.

The Broadway Theater Darkens.

The Broadway theater, under the direction of Sablosky and McGuirk, closed for the summer last week after having concluded one of the most successful seasons. Many improvements will be made to this popular motion picture-vaudeville resort during the summer, including the entire rearranging of the seating capacity, the house being refitted throughout with new and up-to-date comfortable chairs. There will be many other changes made with an eye for the comfort and convenience to the patrons.

Park Theater Dark for Summer.

Green and Altman, who recently acquired the Park theater, have planned to close the house for extensive improvements during July and will reopen about the end of August, at a straight fifteen cents admission price.

A Telling Front for Empy Film.

During the presentation of "Over the Top" at the Nixon theater recently Manager Leopold converted his outside lobby into a scene representing a devastated French village. Along the entire length of the north wall, and running from the ceiling to the floor, was a canvas painting of shell torn houses and streets cluttered with debris. To carry out the effect more realistically he had piled along the floor a half ton or more of broken bricks, dried mortar and twisted iron. Sturdy marines paced back and forth with rifles over their shoulders, and a formidable machine gun commanded the entrance. While standing admiring his masterpiece, Mr. Leopold received the jolt of his life when he heard a woman, accompanied by her husband, remark: "Oh, look John, they are making improvements to the lobby. They have that wall covered and are tearing it out. Look at the bricks and things piled up along the wall."

General Manager Taylor Hopeful.

M. W. Taylor, general manager for J. Fred Zimmerman's enterprises, who has a directing finger in the Keystone, Liberty, Fairmount and Orpheum theaters in Philadelphia and the Edgemont in Chester, predicts that the silent drama will score as often as Ty Cobb this summer. He thinks it will be one of the best seasons on record, both for the downtown and outlying houses. "I saw a line extending two hundred feet out into Lehigh avenue during a heavy downpour of rain last Tuesday," said Mr. Taylor, "and if people can stand a drenching to see a vaudeville show or pictures, I do not think a little torrid weather will bother them. He also states that "The Woman in the Web" is an unusual picture and has been drawing exceedingly well at all of his theaters. Mr. Taylor predicts that "Tarzan of the Apes," which had a wonderful run at the Liberty, will have one of the largest bookings locally of any picture in which he has been concerned and considers that the war films have done a lot to boost the picture business,as they are educational and inspiring.

North Carolina Letter

By D. M. Bain, Wilmington, N. C.

The Victoria Will Reopen.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—The Victoria, Wilmington's largest and handsomest theater, will reopen about August 1 after extensive alterations, including complete new scenic equipment, larger dressing rooms and stage space and the addition of several suites of offices. The Howard Wells Amusement Co. operate it.

Investigating H. J. Paradis.

Wilson, N. C.—The refusal of H. J. Paradis, proprietor of the Oasis theater here, to allow Four-Minute speakers to talk in his theater under the auspices of the U. S. Government, has brought about an investigation by the civic authorities and the Chamber of Commerce, and the Wilson Daily Times has launched an editorial campaign in condemnation of the theater manager's action.

F. D. Swindell, chairman of the Four-Minute speakers of Wilson, stated that Mr. Paradis had denied them the privilege of speaking in his theater without furnishing any excuse therefor except that it would disarrange his program, according to newspaper reports, which state further that the Wilson Four-Minute men comprise some of the most influential citizens of the city, including the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and the editor of the "Times." Both the Princess and Globe theaters have been allowing the patriotic speakers free access to their theaters, it is stated.

Washington Theaters Wait on Local Boards

Provost Marshal General Says No Fixed Rule Will Govern Work Orders, But That Individual Cases Will Be Considered Separately.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The exhibitors and exchange managers of this city who have in their employ men of draft age are in something of a dilemma as to what will be the outcome of the recent so-called "work or fight" order of the Provost Marshal General. Harry M. Crandall, who is the largest employer of labor in the motion picture business here, is having his men appear before their respective draft boards with a view to getting decisions as to whether or not they can continue in their present employment. Operators, doormen, ushers, musicians and all others connected with the theaters are subject to these regulations.

The Provost Marshal General recently announced that no fixed rule would govern all men. Each person in the industries or employments "frowned on" as perhaps not being essential to the prosecution of the war or the direct welfare of the nation, will have his case decided as an individual. For instance, there might be two operators working in the same booth of a theater, both of whom are subject to the draft. One might be permitted to continue operating while the other might be told to seek employment in a more essential plant. Circumstances would be different; it might be impossible for the first-named to enter into other employment for reasons affecting himself and dependents alone.

Female operators in Washington are as yet a thing of the future. Women musicians, ticket sellers and ushers are not new, but the National Capital has a fine crew of male employees, both in the theaters and exchanges, and it is hoped that circumstances will be such as to permit them all to stay where they are.

Autos Can Be Parked After Six P. M.

The matinee business of Washington, D. C., has been hit somewhat by the recently adopted parking regulations for automobiles. It used to be that the street in front of the theaters and adjacent side streets would be filled with cars owned by theater-goers. Now the police permit cars to remain on these streets but thirty minutes at a time and where this regulation is violated a white card informs the owner to appear at the station house and leave $2.

There are many auto owners who do not know that the thirty-minute parking regulation is in force only until six o'clock in the evening, and consequently they do not come downtown at night, but go to the neighborhood picture houses. It has been suggested that the downtown houses could run a slide containing this information.

Will Moore Becomes Coast Guardsman.

Will Moore, brother of Tom Moore and formerly house manager of the Plaza theater on Ninth street northwest, has enlisted in the United States Coast Guard, now under the supervision of the Navy, and has been assigned to duty at Bridgeport, Conn. He is succeeded as house manager by Frank Storty, formerly his assistant.

Billie Airey Helping C. S. Anderson.

Billie Airey, who has been night man at the Pathe exchange, and formerly engaged in this and other cities as theater manager, has gone to Newport News, Va., to help out C. S. Anderson, formerly of the New Grand theater, Baltimore, at the Palace theater. Mr. Airey states that his stay in Newport News will be but temporary, pending the finding of another man by Mr. Anderson.

Jake Flax to Manage Sub-Branch.

Jake Flax, assistant manager of the Washington branch of the General Film, has been placed in charge of the Baltimore sub-branch, replacing Lester Rosenthal, who formerly held that post. Mr. Flax is well known to the trade throughout this section by his long connection with the General Film.

Herbert Elder Visits New York.

Herbert E. Elder, who recently came to the capital from St. Louis to assume charge of the local General Film exchange, spent the week-end in New York City with Mrs. Elder celebrating their seventh anniversary. Mrs. Elder will retain her residence in Albany, N. Y., until the coming of cooler weather, when Mr. Elder will seek permanent quarters for his family in Washington.

Some Parcels Post Criticism.

There has been some little complaint of late against the parcel post service as the medium for the transportation of films between Washington and some of the southern cities. Conditions are such as to make it desirable that the exchanges use the mails in the movement of films, but when long delays occur in the delivery of the films, the reverse is the case. A local exchange complains that the delay in getting films from a southern house for the use of another theater caused the cancellation of a contract, besides keeping the second house dark. Another complaint is to the effect that where a house in Portsmouth, Va., uses a film on, say, Monday night, that film will be sent via parcel post the following day, but it will be Wednesday afternoon before it reaches the exchange. The same shipment via express shipped Tuesday night will be received at the exchange Wednesday morning.

The exchange managers are very much disappointed with the parcel post service. When the movement of films was first inaugurated via this service, representatives of the local post office promised that it would approximate the express transportation. It has not done so yet, and where exhibitors specify that their shows be sent by parcel post they are being informed of the probable delays that will occur.

A Wedding in Film Circles.

Miss Ethel Jeffries, who has been assisting Abe Dresner at the Exhibitors' Film exchange, Washington, surprised all her friends last week by changing her name to Mrs. Walter Riston. The young lady was within a few days of becoming eighteen; the groom has just reached 21 and registered under the draft law on June 5. Because the bride was a few days short of being of legal age, two attempts were made before a license could be obtained. The ceremony took place either in Marlboro or Alexandria, application for a license having been made at both places. Mrs. Riston is the second girl in the Jeffries family to elope. A third sister is Miss Mary Jeffries, who is the best known film woman in this section of the country, having been assistant to Carl F. Senning, manager here for the Fox Film Corporation, and of Jim P. Anderson, the latter's predecessor for a number of years. Mrs. Riston has rejoined her sister as an employee of the Fox Film.

Short Notes from the Capital.

The employees of the Crandall theaters have commenced their vacation schedule. Mr. Crandall recently announced that all employees would be given a week's vacation with pay this year. They are also to receive an extra week's pay during December as a Christmas present.

A Moeller organ, said to be the largest in Washington, has just been put in place at the Knickerbocker theater. Manager Arthur Robb is much pleased with the new acquisition.

E. A. Sherwood, well known in local film circles, has joined the Washington exchange of the Mutual Film as booker.

Sidney B. Lust has turned the two-by-four breathing spot that the builders kindly left vacant of his exchange into something of a flower garden. The small yard is a-bloom with red geraniums and other flowers. Something unusual in exchanges.

Rochester Trade Letter

By L. B. Skeffington, 61 Main Street, Rochester, N. Y.

W. Ramsey Is Gaumont Camera Man.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—William Ramsey, staff photographer for the Democrat and Chronicle, Rochester's leading daily, has joined the ranks of movie cameristas and will shoot for Gaumont here.

Jules Greenstone Beautifies Theater.

Jules Greenstone has just completed many improvements and decorations to his Empire theater, Rochester. Both the lobby and the interior show that the renovations have been carefully planned and carefully carried out. The Empire is a popular house on West avenue, just a short distance from the busy down town section, and Mr. Greenstone reports a decided increase in business since the renovations were completed. He states that one night last week the number of admissions broke all records for the house.

C. J. Sanford Becomes Exhibitor.

C. J. Sanford, an ex-newspaper man, has taken over the Princess theater. He comes from Newark, a suburb near Rochester, and is planning to give a real live-wire program of film entertainment. Mr. Sanford has some very progressive ideas and already there is considerable favorable comment centering around his management of the Princess. For one thing, Mr. Sanford has abolished the five-cent nights at the Princess, and hereafter the uniform price will be ten cents and the pictures will be the best that Mr. Sanford can buy.

Starts Ticket Buying Contest.

To stimulate business during the summer months the Family theater has inaugurated a contest with votes based on the number of tickets bought. The prizes are courses in the Rochester Business Institute for the young man and woman receiving the most votes.

Has Three Days a Week Policy.

The Gordon theater follows the policy of opening on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays only. It is controlled by the Regorson Company, which also has the Regent and Piccadilly theaters and ever since the Piccadilly was built it was apparent that the number of downtown theaters was at least one too many.

Utica Trade Letter

By C. A. Carroll, Utica Observer, Utica, N. Y.

Theaters Using Splendid Signs.

UTICA, N. Y.—Among the many improvements made in the Utica picture theaters within the past few months is the large number of electric signs, the kind which allows the placing of each attraction in letters with electric lights. The DeLuxe has a large sign from Norden Company over the main entrance doors, under the marquee, with the word "DeLuxe" in large letters; there are two rows underneath for the title of the attraction. The same company has the Alhambra and has placed a fine marquee over the main entrance directly under which is an alphabet sign with two rows of letters for names of the picture and star playing at the house. Between the third and fourth stories and fourth and fifth stories of the theater building are two other rows of frames with letters illuminated with electric lights. This is a fine place, as hundreds of people who wait for street cars at what is called the Busy Corner, can see the signs on the front of the building better than they can see the one under the marquee.

A striking elaborate sign is the Avon's. It is immense and extends out into the air from the front of the building near the roof. It was made by the Geneva Fine Ad Company and has four rows for letters. The letters are about two feet in height and, when lighted, can be seen at quite a distance. There is also a sign with the name of the theater.

The Orpheum has a plain letter sign placed so that it can be seen from four different directions. The Majestic also has two of the Norden alphabet signs at either end of the marquee.

Possibly the most elaborate sign of any seen in this part of the state was the one the Park theater had erected when that unfortunate house opened last October. Just the four letters—Park—were on the sign and each one of the letters were four feet in height. Along the side of the sign was a cannon which at intervals shot a bullet into the air, along a string of varicolored lights, finally exploding into the word "Park," first in white, then green, then red, and finally into a delightful combination. The sign was almost the height of the theater, which was four stories, high ones too, and extended a considerable distance over the top of the roof. At the edge of the roof was the words—"Park Theater"—set in a flaming Egyptian smoke pot. There were also two of the Norden alphabet signs above the marquee.

As a whole, the exhibitors of Utica are progressing as rapidly as those of any other cities, and there seems to be no doubt that the patrons notice and appreciate them.

Nashville Trade Notes

By J. L. Ray, Nashville Banner, Nashville, Tenn.

Comedy Pictures at Orpheum.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Since opening the Orpheum in Nashville for musical comedy sketches during the summer months, moving pictures have been playing a strong part in the program. At first two shows were shown each night, with a short reel of pictures between, but this policy was soon discontinued and one show presented each night.

Open Nashville Suburban Houses.

With the coming of extremely warm weather a number of the suburban houses in Nashville have been opened. Owing to hard times and cold weather a number of these outlying houses were closed during the winter, but are now doing business on a substantial basis.

MORE MINNEAPOLIS NOTES.

A Daughter at Benjamin Blotcky's.

Benjamin Blotcky, of the Minneapolis Goldwyn exchange force, became the proud papa to a bouncing baby daughter one rainy day last week. Ben didn't stop for the door to open at the Goldwyn exchange the morning the baby arrived. He didn't see it.

Westcott Buys American Maid Films.

Manager J. Earle Kemp, of the Westcott Film Corp., has announced the purchase of films previously distributed throughout this territory by the American Maid Film Co., namely "Glory." "The Deemster," "I Believe" and "The Woman and the Beast." Mr. Wilson, former manager of the American Maid, it is expected will become an exhibitor in the Twin Cities.

Ruben & Finkelstein Make Denial.

Answering reports that have been circulated about to the effect that Ruben & Finkelstein, realizing that they had practically a monopoly on the local film presentation, had demanded from two months to six months' protection on all features presented by them, I. H. Ruben has denied the truth in such a statement.

Good Showmanship Made the Anchor Hold

Small Pittsburgh Theater in Out-of-the-Way Location Has Prospered and Now Changes Hands at a Good Figure.

By E. J. McCurty, 455 Union Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—A deal was closed Saturday, June 9, in Pittsburgh, for the sale of the Anchor theater on Diamond street, downtown, which revives interest in a theater unique as a moving picture proposition. The Anchor, though a small house, and in a comparatively out-of-the-way location on a side street, has for a number of years prospered greatly under the management of Professor Gerechter.

The "Professor," as he is familiarly known among film folk, has peculiar ideas about drawing patronage, which have proven tremendously successful. He has used an electric sign over the theater which would have sufficed for a much larger house and has placed a banner-wagon on the downtown streets almost daily for some time, advertising his productions. He has played the popular stars continually, and although but a square away from the Fifth avenue theaters, he has drawn exceptionally fine business on every picture.

He has endeavored to give an appearance of life and activity in front of his place, and in this he has been very successful. All of his means of advertising have brought him results, and it is because of his live-wire work and enthusiasm that he has a theater which is said to have brought an exceptionally high figure in the transfer.

The house has been taken over by Mr. Soltz, of the Majestic theater on upper Fifth avenue, in conjunction with two or three other film men. It is understood that the same policy will be pursued, and there is no reason to believe that the theater will not remain a very profitable investment, as Mr. Soltz and his associates are experienced successful exhibitors of a number of years standing in Pittsburgh.

It is said that a small theater on Fifth avenue which has been closed for a number of years, but which is in a fair downtown location, will be reopened by the same group of exhibitors. This theater was formerly known as the Quality. In so far as I can learn no deal has been closed for this proposition as yet.

Yeggs Break Another Theater.

The Rex theater in Wheeling, W. Va., owned by the Rex Amusement Company, of which George Zeppides is the president, was robbed recently. Yeggmen have been operating in the vicity for some time, and this is one of the many jobs which have been pulled off within the past few weeks. The safe of the theater was cracked early in the morning and about $500 in cash secured. The Rex is one of the finest theaters in the "Stogie City," and has enjoyed splendid patronage for the past three years.

Theaters Left Without Juice.

On Monday, June 11, considerable difficulty was experienced by a few of the downtown exhibitors who have no lighting plant of their own for regular or emergency use. The Duquesne Light Company, which supplies the current for Pittsburgh, had a gigantic breakdown in their power house, and the lights throughout the city were off for the entire day until about six-thirty P. M. Several of the theaters managed to connect up an emergency light for their machines and lobbies, with nearby stores, etc., but the Wonderland and several others were without light until well on in the afternoon. The downtown theaters commence operation at about nine-thirty A. M., and this unquestionably meant a loss to them.

Joseph Wagman Buys Plant.

A deal was closed last week, which effects the consolidation of the two largest program printers catering to the film trade in Pittsburgh. Joseph Wagman, of Wagman & Light, has purchased the plant and good will of the Exhibitors' Publishing Company at 938 Penn avenue, formerly controlled by Mr. Callahan of the Exhibitors' Service Company. Both concerns have had a good business, and as Mr. Wagman has been concentrating his entire effort on the program field, it is natural that he should avail himself of the opportunity to get a splendid plant and equipment. With this consolidation, the business of Mr. Wagman should be exceptionally good, and as he is one of the most energetic men in the field, there is no question that he will merit the patronage of exhibitors.

Buffalo Trade Brevities

A Billy West Rules a Regent.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Billy West, showman, but no relative of the film comedian of the same name, is now managing the Regent moving picture theater at Main and Utica streets, Buffalo. Mr. West's successful policy is to have an entire change of pictures seven times a week. He is one of the few exhibitors following this plan in Buffalo.

Interesting Theater Items.

Jules Michael, manager of the Academy theater, Buffalo, is having a vacation. In order to forget business cares entirely for a few days Mr. Michael wisely withheld from local exchange managers the name of the place where he has been seeking rest and recreation. He will be on the job again in a few days. He is playing stock and pictures for the summer.

A successful benefit for Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors was held at the Victoria moving picture theater, Buffalo, Saturday night, June 8. The event was in charge of Harry Greenman, manager of the house. Eight hundred young men in uniform were present. The benefit began after the last show at 11 P. M. and continued up to 2.30 A. M. Besides the pictures there was music and other entertainment, as well as refreshments. The pictures included a Kinemacolor educational film; George Walsh, in "The Yankee Way," a Fox production; and Charlie Chaplin in "A Dog's Life."

All Buffalo Theaters Comply.

Councilman Malone has filed with the city clerk a complete record of inspection of all moving picture and other theaters in Buffalo. The report sets forth that every one of these houses complies with the ordinances which existed at the time the theaters were constructed. Aisles, exits, and operating booths are constructed according to ordinance, Mr. Malone reported.

C. I. Sanford Sells One, Buys Two.

C. I. Sanford, of Newark, N. J., has purchased the Princess theater, Rochester. He also conducts the Opera House, Newark, and the Crescent theater, of that place. Mr. Sanford has sold the Wayne theater, Towanda, Pa., to Mr. Woodin, who also runs the Keystone theater there.

A Good Time to Get Busy Is Now.

The advent of warm weather has various effects on exhibitors in this territory. When the temperature rises some of the film men sink into a state of coma, so far as stirring up active business is concerned. Others bring every ounce of their energy and resourcefulness into play when the lure of the outside world draws many film fans away from the theaters in the hot weather. These wise ones have the foresight to realize that the going after business is easier now than it may be in face of "heatless Mondays" and other wartime handicaps next winter.

Many Cleveland Theaters Change Owners

Fairyland Goes to Dave Adler, the Homestead to Paul Gustanovic, the Moonlight to the Bell Film—Other Changes.

By M. A. Malaney, 607 Belmont Building, Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—The week ending June 8 saw a number of changes in the ownership of Cleveland photoplay houses.

The big Fairyland theater on West 25th street, a house that runs from 10 A. M. till 11 P. M., was bought from W. C. Kaspar by Dave Adler. Mr. Adler owns the Strand theater, located in the downtown section.

The Homestead theater in Lakewood, a suburb, seating nearly 1,000, was bought by Paul Gusdanovic, who, with James Surrell, operates the Orpheum, a downtown house.

The Moonlight, on Broadway, was sold by J. Leavey to the owners of the Bell Film Service. The Bell people announce that they will buy more houses in Cleveland. They own four in Pittsburgh.

The Alvin theater, one of the smaller downtown shows, which has a reputation as a consistent moneymaker, was sold by L. Zoffer to a saloon keeper, whose name Mr. Zoffer would not give out until the deal is absolutely complete.

The Strand theater, at East 89th street and Superior avenue, was bought by Weisonofsky and Co., who also operate the Grand theater, on Broadway.

For nearly two years the exhibitors of Cleveland have been buying up other theaters. Nearly every exhibitor in town has the fever to own one or two or more theaters in addition to the one that each usually operates. They figure they can operate two or three more economically and that they have enough of their own time to do so.

W. L. Sherry Opens Cleveland Office.

The William L. Sherry Service Co. has opened a Cleveland exchange at 410 Sloan building, to operate in Northern Ohio. The exchange is in charge of B. F. Lyon, a former Pittsburgh exchange man. Mr. Lyon states it is his company's plan to also have an exchange in Cincinnati for southern Ohio and Kentucky.

The William L. Sherry Service Co. will handle state rights pictures and do a general exchange business. The first releases will be the Catherine Calvert features.

The Sunbeam Loses Property.

Someone made a good haul in the booth of the Sunbeam theater, Cleveland, last week, and Manager Scovill is going around in disguise in an effort to locate the thief. The lens and condensers were stolen, and if the machines weren't so heavy, Scovill thinks the thief might have taken them, too.

"I am going to put a heavy lock on the booth door now," said Scovill as he purchased new lenses in the U. T. E. office.

The Windameer Changes Hands.

The Windameer theater, in East Cleveland, was sold to George Siebanoller, of Newark, Ohio, last week. This deal had been hanging fire for several weeks, Arnold Goodman, the manager and part owner, having announced it May 15.

Mr. Siebanoller is a well known Ohio exhibitor, having been in the film business for a long time. He operates the Alhambra theater in Newark.

"Unbeliever" at Mall and Alhambra.

One of the surprises in Cleveland film circles was the announcement by the Mall and Alhambra theaters, two first-run houses, that they would break their policy to run second on "The Unbeliever." The picture opened its engagement in the Priscilla, playing the week of June 2.

Manager Norwood, of the Kleine Service, put over this deal by sheer boldness and nerve. He showed the management of these theaters that they could make money with the picture, regardless of whether it was first or second run, and they certainly did.

"The Unbeliever" went over great and will no doubt prove a worthy success all over the city.

Tom North Visits Cleveland.

Tom North, Pathe home office official, was in Cleveland last week, in conference with Manager Holah. Several new ideas were incorporated into the exchange.

Cleveland Business Brevities.

"My Four Years in Germany" is setting a record in Cleveland, as it is in its third week at the Opera House, and business is keeping up.

M. E. Smith, general manager for Kleine System, was in Cleveland last week in conference with Manager Norwood of the local office.

L. D. Netter returned to Cleveland the week of June 4, after a flying trip to Chicago and Cincinnati in the interest of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, his company.

Dayton Trade Brevities

By P. J. G., Dayton Theater Building, Dayton, Ohio.

Business Good at Dayton Theaters.

ALTHOUGH some of the local picture houses are retrenching, most of them are enjoying a good business at the present time. Warm weather often brings poor business, but the exact opposite holds at present for most theaters hereabouts. The last three Sundays downtown houses played to a large attendance. The Dayton opened with "Ruggles of Red Gap" to big business. "The Son of Democracy," featuring Benjamin Chapin, was also on the program. The Strand opened Sunday with Pauline Frederick in "Resurrection." Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in a comedy and the Pathe weekly filled out the program.

The Columbia had Lina Cavalieri in "Love's Conquest," spoken of roughly by the several critics, and a Lonesome Luke comedy, as well as the Screen Telegram.

The Apollo theater, now under the management of Theodore Lindsey, owing to the absence of Teddy Chifos (Teddy is now in the army), played William Farnum, a local favorite, in "True Blue," and much that is good can be said of the Fox Film mentioned. The other houses, most of whom are second-run theaters, played to good business for the week.

Picked Up Dayton Brevities.

George Jacobs, manager of the Masterpiece Film exchange, Cincinnati; Felix Mendelsohn, manager of the Word Exchange, Cincinnati, and several others were visitors in Dayton last week.

E. R. Custer, manager of the Metro exchange at Cincinnati, visited in Dayton last week in order to get acquainted with local exhibitors. Mr. Custer seems a young man for the position he holds and is a jolly fellow. Mr. Custer included the "World" correspondent in his list of callers. The Ideal theater, this city, now plays the Metro program first run.

Leo Edry, salesman working from the Metro office, Cincinnati, was slightly injured when the automobile overturned in which he and his wife were riding. Mr. Udry is once more able to be out.

Mark Gates, managing director of the Dayton theater, spent a day in Cincinnati last week booking pictures. Mr. Gates signed up for several features and reviewed many more.

John Seifert, at the Ideal, announces that the month of May was one of the most prosperous that he has had for some time. Considering the warm weather that Dayton is now enjoying, John should be proud of his work.

Martin G. Chandler, of Chillicothe, Ohio, was planning to visit Dayton this week. Mr. Chandler reports that all's well in Chillicothe.

A representative half of the Meyers Bros., Inc., who operate the Royal and Majestic at Chillicothe, O., visited Dayton last week in company with none other than Elmer Rauh, who motored through from Chillicothe, O., where he is stationed with the U. S. Army at Camp Sherman. While in Dayton Mr. Rauh and Mr. Meyers talked with the World representative. Mr. Meyers also brings in the news that the Majestic, a legitimate theater which he and his brother own in Chillicothe, will be remodeled so that it will seat about 1,500 when opened. The Majestic formerly played pictures, but is now booking vaudeville.

Allens Have Two More Canadian Theaters

Are Building New House to Seat 1,600 at Edmonton, Alberta—At Lachine, Quebec, They Take Over the Royal Alexandria Theater.

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, Ontario.—The Temple Theater Corporation, consisting of Jule and J. J. Allen, with Ben. Allen, of Toronto, has decided to erect a theater in Edmonton, Alberta, to cost $150,000. A long term lease has been secured on a large site on Jasper avenue, Edmonton, and it is proposed to open the theater in September. The capacity of the new house is 1,600 seats aand the plans follow the style of Roman amphitheater. In other words, the theater will have no balcony. An order has been placed for an organ for the new house to cost $15,000.

H. L. Gage, construction engineer of the Allen interests, has arrived in Edmonton to supervise the work. The general details will follow closely the structural arrangement of the new Allen Theater at Toronto.

This will make the second theater in Edmonton for the Allens as they already own the Monarch Theater, which is managed by H. M. Allen. The Allens built their first theater in the Canadian West at Calgary about eight years ago. They now own or control upwards of twenty theaters from Calgary to Montreal, Quebec. They are building a fine suburban theater in Toronto which will seat about 1,000 people.

The Allens have also invaded moving picture theater circles of the Province of Quebec. R. S. Slesinger, part owner of the Royal Alexander Theater at Lachine, Quebec, has just announced that the Allens have purchased this theater and that the house will be reopened shortly under the new ownership. This theater was partially destroyed by fire some weeks ago and the builder of the theater also died while it was being rebuilt. The house is now nearing completion, however, and will be in operation shortly. Mr. Slesinger is now engaged in the publication business. A brother is general manager of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation of New York City while another brother is associated with William Fox in New York also.

It is also announced that the Allens have acquired the new Majestic theater in Westmount, which is a suburb of Montreal.

Allens Get Canadian Select Pictures.

J. J. Allen, executive of the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, Toronto, Montreal and other cities, has announced that the Canadian franchise of the Select Pictures Corporation of New York has been regained by his company. Phil Kauffman, who became Canadian general manager for the Select a few weeks ago, will still handle Select features in the Dominion and Select exchange offices will be continued in Montreal and Toronto, it is announced. The Select business in Canada will be under the final control of the Famous Players' Film Service, however.

Mr Kauffman recently appointed his brother, Ben Kauffman, manager of the Select branch in Montreal. He will continue to have charge of that office.

The Famous Players, constituting Jules and J. J. Allen, control Paramount, Artcraft and Select releases, and other pictures, throughout the Dominion.

Canadian Brevities of Interest.

The Manitoba Board of Censors has condemned in its entirety "Old Wives for New", one of the latest Paramount releases directed by Cecil B. DeMille. It is also reported that the Manitoba Censors made big cuts in the Fox special, "When a Man Sees Red." For this and other work there has been considerable comment in local newspapers and in Winnipeg moving picture circles.

Manager Roland Roberts of the Regent theater, Toronto, announces that 5,95 people paid admission at the theater on Monday, June 3, to see "Tarzan of the Apes." This means that this downtown house was filled more than three times during the day. The theater played to big business all week.

The Holman theater, Montreal, which is controlled by the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited, obtained first Canadian run of "Boy Scouts to the Rescue" which is being handled in the Dominion under the personal direction of Clair Hague, president of the Canadian Universal. The first chapter of the Boy Scout pictures was presented at the Holman during the week of June 3.

The Wonderland theater, a prominent moving picture theater of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been reopened under the management of Frank Hyde, who is also proprietor of the Crescent theater. The theater was closed for a month, during which time new seats, new screen, new decorations and new projection machines were installed. The theater, which is located at Sargent and Sherbrook streets, was reopened on June 3. The policy of the theater will be to present Goldwyn, Fox, Paralta and Chaplin pictures.

The St. Denis theater, Montreal, reputed to be the largest exclusive moving picture theater in Canada, closed for the season on Sunday, June 2, with the presentation of Goldwyn's "All Woman." The big house has had varied fortunes during the past ten months, owing chiefly to its size and location. It is proposed to reopen the theater in September. Roland Roberts, manager of the St. Denis during the past winter, has become manager of the Regent theater, Toronto, which is controlled by the same interests.

IN DETROIT.

Globe Theater Is Leased.

It is now definitely settled that Herman Warren and Ben Cohen get the Globe theater, Detroit. The stockholders at a meeting held last Friday ratified the recommendation of the board of directors. The lease is effective to Messrs. Cohen and Warren starting June 10, and is for a period of seven years.

Admit Soldiers and Sailors Free.

Frank Mellon, manager of the Norwood and Fine Arts theaters, Detroit, has posted signs in front of these houses that any soldier or sailor in uniform will be admitted to the theaters free at any time.

Boyne City Houses Merge.

The Opera House and the Princess theaters in Boyne City have merged. This means that C. I. Bellamy and Tom Tyrell are now co-partners. The Opera House will run pictures seven days, while the Princess will only show them on Saturdays and Sundays.

Detroit Exchanges Join Board of Commerce

Managers of the Local Distributing Companies Will Have Organization and Will Affiliate with the City Board of Trade.

By Jacob Smith, 119 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—It is now definitely decided that the Detroit film exchange managers will affiliate with the Board of Commerce and they will have their own organization. A meeting took place Tuesday, June 11, to perfect the organization and elect temporary officers.

Getting improved express shipments will be the first thing attempted by the film men in co-operation with the Board of Commerce.

Sidney Golden Producing in Detroit.

Sidney M. Golden, backed by local capital, is producing a six-reel feature in Detroit, having already started on the first scenes. Mr. Golden has been in the producing field for the past twelve years, coming here direct from New York studios. Among his stars are Walter Miller, who appeared in "The Slacker" and "Draft 258"; Jack Hopkins, who has played heavy parts with many famous stars; Corlis Beck, who played the boy in "The Lone Wolf," and Edna Mason, who has done some big work in pictures. The story involves society and underworld life and is said to be unusually interesting. He expects to complete his first Detroit feature by July 1.

Howard Pierce With Vitagraph.

Howard O. Pierce, for the past six months manager of the Butterfield theater interests in Flint, and previously with the State Film Co. and the Kunsky Enterprises, has joined the sales organization of Vitagraph out of Detroit, and, in addition, will look after publicity. Howard was for several years the editor of the Weekly Film News, the official organ of the Kunsky Enterprises.

C. C. Pippin With Madison Film.

C. C. Pippin, formerly salesman for Pathe, Kleine and Vitagraph, is now city salesman in Detroit for the Madison Film exchange.

Handling City Sales for U.

J. P. Souders, former booker for the Universal, is now handling city sales for the Universal in addition to a part of the state.

Bert Deiner in Charge of Bookings.

Bert Deiner, who came to Detroit recently from Cleveland, is again in charge of bookings at the Universal, succeeding J. P. Souders, who is in the sales department.

Many "Unbeliever" Contracts.

W. A. Kent, salesman for the George Kleine System, has been spending the past three weeks getting business on "The Unbeliever." He signed up this big feature in nineteen different towns. "Do you know that exhibitors are waiting for the salesman to book 'The Unbeliever'," said Bill. "Their mind is all made up to book it and it is simply a question of being able to agree on the price."

"The Kaiser" Still Breaking Records.

Remarkable how "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," still holds up. Wherever shown it is doing capacity business, and Manager Ward reports rebookings nearly everywhere it has played.

M. S. Bailey Makes Fine Record.

M. S. Bailey, manager of the General Film Co., Detroit, has positively increased the business 100 per cent. since taking hold five weeks ago. Bill not only has surprised the New York office, but has exceeded his own expectations.

C. W. Perry With United Theaters.

Do you remember C. W. Perry, former Detroit manager for Pathe who later went to Boston—well, he is now traveling representative for the United Picture Theaters, Inc., and is temporarily in charge of the Cincinnati office.

Secures "Carmen of the Klondike."

Arthur S. Hyman, general manager of the Dawn Masterplay Company, has secured "Carmen of the Klondike," a story of the great Northwest featuring Clara Williams. The Dawn Masterplay Company is not yet ready to make bookings as they are giving all their attention to bookings on "The Hearts of the World." This live-wire concern surely means business. They have leased two more rooms on the seventh floor and are planning their own projection room, so that we wouldn't be a bit surprised to see them occupy the entire floor.

Book "Hearts of the World."

It is announced that "Hearts of the World" has been booked for an indefinite run to John H. Kunsky, of Detroit, for his Washington theater. It will open there on Sunday, June 23, and the policy will be one show in the afternoon and one at night, with prices from 25 cents to $1.50 top. Manager Will M. Elliott, of the Washington, has conceived a number of unique ideas in connection with the showing.

Col. W. S. Butterfield has booked "Hearts of the World" over his entire circuit of Michigan theaters on a percentage arrangement. The contract calls for a showing of the production an entire week in each town, which includes Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Jackson, Lansing, Saginaw, Bay City, Flint and Ann Arbor. The starting date will be some time the last part of June.

A third print is to be devoted exclusively to engagements in the upper peninsular. Manager Arthur S. Hyman, of the Dawn Masterplay Co., will leave for that section immediately after the Detroit opening at the Washington.

Operated on for Appendicitis.

A. J. Gilligham, of the Empire theater, Detroit, was operated on for appendicitis ten days ago, but we are glad to report that he is out of all danger and is on the road to recovery. He will be back at his office before this is read in Detroit.

Regent Will Remain Open.

The Regent theater, Detroit, will not close, as we announced last week. According to C. H. Miles, the lessee, it will remain open the entire summer and there will be no change in policy. Vaudeville and pictures will continue, playing split week with the Orpheum downtown.

New Front for Virginia Park.

Manager Wadlow, of the Virginia Park, Detroit, has had the entire front painted and improved. He is also planning some extensive interior improvements and changes. Had it not been for the war, he planned to enlarge the house. Mr. Wadlow was formerly located in New York City, but came to Detroit to take the place of his brother, Floyd, who is now in the aviation department in France, and who originally operated the Virginia Park.

Will Be Called the Blackstone.

The new theater at 30 Michigan avenue, which A. D. Walstrom will open sometime in June, will be called The Blackstone.

W. S. McLaren in the East.

W. S. McLaren, of the Majestic-Colonial theaters, Jackson, will leave June 21 for Providence, R. I. and New York City, as well as other eastern cities. "Mac" has been elected a delegate from Jackson to the Kiwanis annual convention. After he gets through at Providence he will spend about a week in New York calling on the different producers and visiting some of the studios.

Many Texas Village Shows Wait on Harvest

Texas Wheat Fields Invite All Inhabitants Including the Theater Men—Farmers Are Aided and Harvest Goes Northward.

By Douglas Hawley, The Times Herald, Dallas, Tex.

DALLAS, Tex.—Texas moving pictures—at least those located in the towns in the grain growing district—sort of ran themselves during the first two weeks in June. The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker and his wife and mother-in-law, got out into the fields and helped the farmers gather in the sheaves. And there were a lot of picture show fellows in among 'em, according to reports. The thing by this time, has gone on up into Oklahoma and Kansas, with the progress of the harvest. The result in Texas, it is declared will be a full harvest of the wheat crop, which means many dollars this year. Everything's looking good, according to well known exhibitors who have come to town during the last week.

Charley Kimball, manager American theater, McKinney, says Collin county people helped the farmers right along. The only trouble he reported was that when the army aviators from Dallas and Fort Worth flying fields, put on shows above the wheat fields, it causes a slacking up in the work. "Honest," he said, "some of the farmers, they say, wrote letters to the commanding officers, asking 'em to keep the students out over the bald prairie somewhere—the hands just couldn't "rubber" and work at the same time."

H. C. Johnson of the Crystal theater, Stamford, says everybody in his district, is quitting the town at 6 o'clock each morning, and going out to help the farmers. Mr. Johnson's town is where the folks celebrated so some three months ago, when the drouth was broken. The rains that have come since, he says, have made the crop outlook a splendid one.

Pan Handle Gets Rain.

"Bill" Rowley of Robb and Rowley, who conduct theaters at Abilene, San Angelo and two or three other points in the Southwestern and Pan Handle sections, is feeling better. Rain has come. It meant for any number of towns, that a number of shows will not be closed. Out in the Pan Handle country, it was mighty dry at Clarendon and Amarillo; Vernon, Childress and Quanah. This district now is feeling a whole lot better, the manager said.

Fire at Caldwell's Isis Theater.

The Isis Theater, Caldwell, Tex., operated by W. W. Wright, burned during the second week in June, with a loss of some $2,000. No insurance was carried and no films were destroyed. It is not known, as yet, whether Mr. Wright will continue in the business.

"Spider" Kelly With General.

James B. "Spider" Kelly has been named as Dallas branch manager for the General Film Company. John McIlhern presented his resignation early in June, and the check over to Mr. Kelly was completed by Division Manager T. F. McTier. "Jimmy" Kelly is one of the best known film men in the southwest. They say he knows every pig track in the eleven southern states. He was formerly here with Universal. In addition to the General's regular business, Mr. Kelly will have charge of the Hodkinson releases, particularly the Paralta output. W. H. Hodkinson paid a recent visit to the Dallas branch and was high in praise of conditions as he found them in Texas.

F. E. Morrow New Mutual Manager.

F. E. Morrow has been appointed Dallas branch manager for the Mutual, succeeding Cliff Reid, resigned. Mr. Morrow is a brother of H. G. Morrow, formerly local F. N. E. A. manager and now with the United Theaters.

Hal Norfleet Back in Dallas.

Hal Norfleet is back in Dallas as manager for Hulsey's Old Mill theater, Mr. Norfleet was here in that capacity some months ago, but was transferred to a Hulsey assignment at San Antonio, temporarily.

Laurence Stuart, formerly Old Mill manager, it is believed, is on his way "over there" if he isn't already over. Laurence's command has left Camp Travis, San Antonio, and his friends are eagerly waiting some word.

T. P. Finnegan Seen Again.

T. P. Finnegan, formerly manager Hippodrome theater, but recently operating up in Oklahoma and Kansas, is in Dallas, but is reticent as to plans or intentions.

New Theater at Tulsa Opens.

The new Majestic theater, Tulsa, Okla., opened June 20, with the Goldwyn "Venus Model" and Mabel Normand. The new theater is one of the handsomest south.

Notes About Interesting Persons.

John Saig of Ennis, paid a visit to exchangemen recently, and declared he was going to keep on coming. "You see I ride the interurban," said Jonathan, "and interurban fares are about the only thing I've discovered, recently, that haven't been advanced."

C. W. Batsel of Sherman, was a caller on branch managers, recently, reporting business good and the outlook equally so.

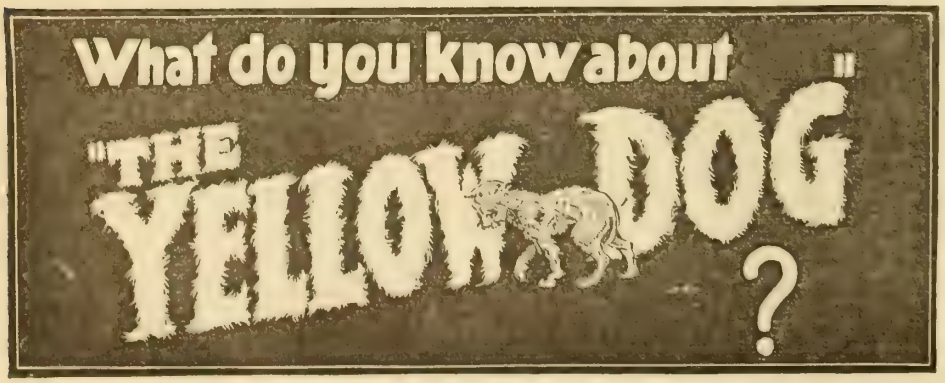
H. H. Starcke of the Palace theater, Seguin, Tex., booked some new Goldwyn releases recently, and reported conditions in his section of the southwest improved as a result of rains.

Joe C. Clemmons of the Tivoli and John Pittman of the Crystal, Beaumont, were in Dallas recently buying seats and other equipment for their new $50,000 Beaumont house which is to be opened by the middle of July. The new place will seat 1200.

J. A. Holton of the Port Arthur Amusement Company, Port Arthur, Tex., has returned from a California trip, and is superintending the work on his new Pierce theater, to open at Port Arthur about August 1.

Theodore Polmanakos of Houston, seen here not long ago, hinted at the possibility of opening a new theater at Tyler.

Texas film men have extended their sympathies to P. G. Cameron of the Crystal, Dallas, on the recent death of his father, a pioneer settler in the state.



Louisville Trade Brevities

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

Several Things Help Theaters.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Now that the spring races are over in Louisville it is expected that business will show some improvement. During the thirty days of racing thousands of people were at the track until nearly 7 o'clock in the evening and returned to their homes so late that the theaters were forgotten. Considering the hot weather experienced, business has been remarkably active during the past week. The fact that some of the parks have about been put out of business through being forced to go dry, being inside of the five-mile zone of Camp Taylor, has resulted in some parks losing a great deal of business this year, thereby improving things for the theaters.

"Cleopatra" Breaks Another Record.

The management of the Mary Anderson theater, Louisville, which is running pictures during the summer months, reported that on Monday, June 10, all attendance records of the house were broken. The event was the showing of Theda Bara in "Cleopatra," one of the most sumptuous and magnificent film spectacles shown for some time. The film was booked for a week's run.

Older Men Are Filling Booths.

The possibility of women entering the moving picture operator's booth in Louisville has been looming strong during the last few days, since talk arose concerning picture machine operators being classed as non-productive labor, which, if within the draft age, would have to enter the army or productive lines. However, there are quite a number of old men operating machines in Louisville, and it will possibly be some time before feminine operators take much of a hand. In many of the country towns women operators have been doing good work since the younger men were cleaned out by the draft.

Princes Theater Consumed.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—The Princess theater, of this city, one of the finest moving picture houses in southwestern Kentucky, was totally destroyed by fire on Monday evening, June 10, the blaze starting shortly before 5 o'clock, when a reel of film ignited while on a machine. Morton Reese, operator of the machine, stayed on the job until his clothing took fire, but escaped uninjured, while the crowd in the house left without anyone being hurt.

Due to the alarm being turned in late the fire department reached the scene late, the entire house being in flames, and resulting in the plant being entirely gutted and adjoining buildings damaged. This house, which was owned by L. H. Davis, of Hopkinsville, was valued at $10,000 and had $8,000 in insurance. The building was under lease to the Crescent Amusement Co., of Nashville, Tenn., which operates other theaters in Bowling Green, Ky., and other points in western Kentucky. This concern had about $7,000 worth of equipment in the building, which, it is said, was fully insured. From present indications it will be necessary to build from the foundations up, and it is doubtful whether the house will be rebuilt at this time.

The Ben Ali Has Been Cleaned.

Lexington, Ky.—The management of the Ben Ali theater has completely renovated and cleaned the theater. The floor has been recarpeted, the walls and ceilings redecorated and the seats repaired and placed in first-class shape. The company has secured white canvass covers which will be used on all of the seats during the summer months, and the house is now ready to open again with high-grade pictures.

Twin Cities Trade Letter

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

Hippodrome to Show "Unbeliever."

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Ruben & Finkelstein have leased the Hippodrome theater on Wabash street near Ninth, to the George Kleine exchange for a week's showing of the big Edison feature, "The Unbeliever." It played a seven-day engagement at the Minneapolis Strand to capacity, played a return engagement of three days to big crowds and has enjoyed big success in Duluth, Willmar and other first and second-class cities of the Northwest. It is expected that it will do a good business in St. Paul.

Boy Comes to Billy Mick's House.

Billy B. Mick, manager of the New Palace theater, St. Paul, is wearing a broader smile these days. Yep. 'Twas a boy. Eight-pounder. Doing nicely, thanks.

T. B. McCormick Will Manage Theater.

T. B. McCormick, who has traveled with a "Birth of a Nation" show for 27 months without a single "open" day, has been appointed manager of the Hippodrome theater, St. Paul, which recently was purchased by Ruben & Finkelstein. Mr. McCormick was assistant manager of the Grand, St. Paul, several years ago, working under Theodore L. Hays, now manager of the New Garrick.

Theater Puts Up a Good Front. Opens Soon

Kansas City's New Liberty Has a Splendid Sign Where Thousands Must See It—Exterior Also Attracts—Almost Ready.

Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Heralding the opening of the new theater at Petticoat lane and Main street during the last week in June is a striking electric sign which flashes "Liberty" across the sky, fifty-five feet in the air above the new structure. On a broad shield is the name, Liberty, in thirty-inch letters with a flaming torch on each side. This is surmounted by an unfurled American flag, nine by twelve feet in length. During the day the artistic front draws the attention of passersby and suggests that if the interior fulfils the promise of the entrance June 25 will witness the opening of Kansas City's "theater beautiful."

The exterior, which is of cast iron, is in polychrome terra cotta along the lines of the Italian Renaissance. On either side of the great arched doorway are mountings carrying the figure of Pan blowing his pipes. Over the entrance is a wide copper canopy illuminated with about one hundred and twenty-five lights.

The Liberty will open with "The Unbeliever," a Kleine-Edison production, under the direction of the Marine Corps. The theater will be managed by the Harding Bros., Dave H. and Samuel Harding, formerly of Omaha, Neb., and owners of the Princess theater there. D. H. Harding, secretary and treasurer of the company, came to Kansas City about two years ago and realized the field for first-class photoplay houses which it offered. When the opportunity came to secure this ideal location in the heart of the shopping district, Mr. Harding commenced plans for the present structure. S. Harding will move here from Omaha in time for the opening.

F. L. Newman Will Build Theater.

Moving picture houses are threatening to take possession of the shopping district in Kansas City. Another theater is to be erected by Frank L. Newman, owner of the Royal and the Regent, at 1114-1118 Main street. This house, which is to be the largest in the downtown district, and the most costly theater of any sort to be erected here, will be the third high-class house within a stretch of a bare block and a half. The Newman theater, as the new structure will be called, will have a seating capacity of a little more than two thousand, a stage which may be converted into use for vaudeville or other dramatic productions, and an orchestra pit that will accommodate a symphony orchestra. The cost is estimated at from $350,000 to $400,000. The exterior will be of terra cotta with a colonnade treatment across the entire front, along the lines of the Italian Renaissance. Mr. Newman plans to complete the theater for a Christmas week opening.

Adfilm Offices Moved.

The Adfilm Co. has moved its offices from 918 Oak street to the 5th floor of the Hayes building, 920-922 Grand ave. By the change in location the company will have more than three times as much floor space as before and will be equipped to do any sort of indoor production work along commercial lines.

O. A. Bandy Will Manage New Theater.

The Isis theater will open the latter part of June at Thirty-first and Troost avenue. It is in new building erected by J. W. Wirthman, a druggist of this city. O. A. Bandy, formerly connected with the Fox Film, will be the manager of the Isis.

Inspection Charge Ordinance Passes.

The ordinance providing for a fifty-cent charge per reel for inspection was passed by the city council June 10. Payment will be made by coupon from coupon books purchased at the comptroller's office. The coupon books issued will range in price from fifty cents to $25.

Changes at the Pathe Exchange.

J. E. Story, manager of the Pathe exchange in Kansas City, states that business, instead of slowing down, is coming in in fine shape. One or two changes have taken placed in the personnel of the Pathe exchange. F. B. Pickerel, formerly salesman in the southern Kansas territory, has been appointed branch manager of the Oklahoma City office. F. H. Cassil, who has been with the Fox Film as salesman, has been added to handle the southern Kansas territory made vacant by Mr. Pickerel's promotion. George Jenkins, formerly with Vitagraph and Select, is now acting as shipping clerk for Pathe.

Theater Notes.

Duncan, Okla.—Burns & McDaniels have announced that the Bungalow theater in this city will be dismantled and the entire fixtures and furniture moved to Comanche, Okla., where it will be reopened as soon as possible under the same name.

Beaumont, Tex.—The contract for the new Liberty theater has been let. A charter for a $75,000 stock company has been applied for. The theater will have a seating capacity of 900. It will probably be ready to open by October 1. James I. Pittman is president and general manager of the stock company.

Indianapolis Mutual Compelled to Vacate

Fire Prevention Bureau Forces Exchange to Leave Office Over Theater—Code Being Enforced by Deputy Inspectors.

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Jacob H. Hilkene, recently chosen director of the fire prevention bureau of Indianapolis, created in a new city ordinance passed a few weeks ago, has refused the Mutual Film Corporation a permit to operate its film exchange above the Keystone theater in North Illinois street.

Mr. Hilkene said he sent word to the company that under the provision of the ordinance creating the bureau, a motion picture film exchange can not be operated in the same building where there is a public assembly hall. He said he would give the film company thirty days in which to find a suitable location.

Edward G. Sourbier, county treasurer and owner of the Palms, Bijou and Keystone theaters, leases the rooms above the latter to the Mutual company. He took an active part in opposing the ordinance when it was considered by the council and asked to have the measure made retroactive, pointing out that the film exchange quarters could be made entirely safe. It is rumored that he is now contemplating bringing suit to attack that part of the ordinance.

Deputy fire inspectors, who were appointed with Mr. Hilkene, have been instructed to make a tour of the various motion picture film exchanges and theaters in the city and see that the regulations pertaining to such places are complied with.

Had Blue Devils as Guests.

S. Barrett McCormick, manager of the Circle theater, Indianapolis, was host to about fifty of the "Blue Devils" or Alpine Chasseurs of the French army who were quartered at Fort Benjamin Harrison for several days the first of the week. Monday night at the 9:30 o'clock performance at the picture playhouse. A number of special song features were given for them and at the conclusion of the extra entertainment the visiting soldiers were introduced from the stage by Col. Russell B. Harrison, secretary of the Marion county council of defense. In return for the applause the Chasseurs sang several battle songs and "The Marseillaise."

Theater to Make a Picture.

An opportunity is to be presented soon for some of the young women of Bartholomew county, Ind., to break into motion pictures. J. E. Rogers, manager of Crumps theater in Columbus, Ind., has contracted with a film firm of Indianapolis to produce about the latter part of the summer a film entitled "On the Banks of the Wabash." All of the scenes are to be laid in Indiana and a large part of them will be in Bartholomew county.

Indiana Trade Notes.

Evansville, Ind.—"The Unbeliever," the United States Marine Corps' film production which has broken attendance records at theaters all over the country, kept up its record breaking ability when shown at the Strand theater for the last five days of the week. During the showing of the picture, Sergeant W. G. Ellwanger, of the local Marine Corps recruiting office, established a recruiting office in the lobby, and succeeded in getting a large number of enlistments. A patriotic prelude was staged at the beginning of the exhibition of the picture in which a large chorus under the direction of Miss Ada Bicking, with Eugene Stinson as soloist, appeared.

Marion, Ind.—C. L. Branigan, owner of the Marion theater, last week purchased the Luna Lite theater, and has begun plans for remodeling and redecorating the place throughout. It will be one of the prettiest little theaters in the city.

Stephen C. Hurley is going to Woodstock to look after Mr. Spencer's theater at that place, and all his friends will wish him every success.

"A Dog's Life" made a decided hit at the Imperial theater, St. John, recently.

Joe Lieberman, the popular manager of the Fox local office, left Saturday, June 1, to attend the annual Fox convention in New York.

Trade News Letter From the Pacific Coast

The Hamblen, a New Theater at Alameda, Taken Over by Lurie and Sheehan—Sol Lesser Gets Big State Rights.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Louis R. Lurie and Howard J. Sheehan, who conduct the Rialto theater in San Francisco, have purchased and taken over the Hamblen theater in the suburban city of Alameda. This theater was opened on April 15 by James Hamblen, and represents an investment of about $100,000. It is in the heart of the business section of Alameda and is the largest theater there, having a seating capacity of 1,500. The new owners plan to conduct it along the lines that have brought them success at the Rialto theater and have selected Bert Donnellen as house manager. This is the second in the chain of theaters planned by them, and a third will be in operation within less than a month, a fine house at Eureka, Cal., now being given the finishing touches.

Sol L. Lesser Brings Back Big Rights.

Sol L. Lesser has returned from New York, where he consummated some of the greatest deals in his business career, and is now planning for the booking of the great features secured by him, including "Hearts of the World." He has purchased the rights for the eleven Western states for this production and also brought back with him "The Still Alarm," "Nine-Tenths of the Law," "Grain of Dust," "The Struggle Everlasting" and "Pershing's Crusaders."

The Alcazar theater has been enaged for a run on "Hearts of the World," and this production will be featured there commencing June 24. Mike Rosenberg, who always shares in Mr. Lesser's big purchases, came down from Seattle upon the return of the latter and made arrangements for handling the big feature in Oregon and Washington, leaving for the Northwest with a print in his possession. Irving Lesser, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the All Star Features Distributors, Inc., came up from the southern city to confer with his brother and left after a stay of a few days.

Patriotic Films Still Going Big.

Wonderful success is being met with in booking meritorious productions of a patriotic nature and receipts from these are in the nature of record-breakers, in spite of the fact that the amusement business as a whole is off.

"The Unbeliever" continues to attract wide attention and is regarded here as being the greatest recruiting agent of the United States Marine Corps. Manager M. J. Cohen, of the George Kleine System, is spending much of his time supervising the starting of engagements at various theaters, planning to be on hand at all houses where the Marine Corps band is used.

Five prints of "My Four Years in Germany" are working in the local territory and bookings have been made in almost every community that boasts a moving picture machine. A. M. Bowles recently returned from a trip through the interior in the interests of the Turner & Dahnken exchange, and J. L. Warner, who has been here for several weeks as special representative of Warner Bros., has returned to New York, well satisfied with the manner in which this production has been placed.

Wonderful success is still being met with in booking "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," and five prints of this are being used in the San Francisco field. Bookings have been made at such small places as Covelo, which has a population of but 350, the Owl theater there having booked it at the largest price it ever paid for a moving picture.

Start Red Cross Auxiliary.

Twenty-five women connected with local film exchanges, met a few days ago and organized a branch of the Stage Women's War Relief. Regular meetings will be held in the future, when sewing work will be taken up under the guidance of Red Cross instructors. The women also plan to tender dances and entertainments to soldiers and sailors and to otherwise take an active part in war work. Many who could not be present at the initial meeting are expected to join the organization.

Famous Players Managers Meet.

A convention of managers of the Pacific Coast branches of the Famous Players-Lasky Co., was held this week at the division headquarters in San Francisco, the gathering being presided over by Herman Wobber, who recently returned from a general conference in New York. Those who attended the gathering, in addition to district manager, were M. H. Lewis, manager of the San Francisco branch; J. J. Halsted, of the Los Angeles office, and his assistant, O. V. Traggardh; C. M. Hill, manager of the Portland branch, and his assistant, Harry Hunter, and H. G. Rosebaum, manager of the Seattle branch.

Army and Navy Notes.

Larry Selenger, long with the California Film exchange, is now in training at American Lake, and before his departure was tendered a party by his associates in the business. The girls in the office presented him with a handsome silver cigarette case, while a silver pocket knife was the gift of Morris L. Markowitz.

Ralph Smith, popular booker with the local Triangle exchange, has enlisted in the radio division of the navy.

Word has been received at the Triangle office of the safe arrival in France of M. F. Lowery, formerly salesman here.

New Oakland Theater Opens.

The new Oakland theater, which was been remodeled by George Pyros, has been formally opened to good business. Mr. Pyros has been very successful in the restaurant business, and has built up a splendid patronage, and if he is half so successful in his new venture he will have a splendid proposition.

San Francisco Newslets.

Frank L. Hudson, who opened the local Pathe branch several years ago, arrived in San Francisco recently. At present he is not actively engaged in the film business, but finds it hard to keep away from Film Row.

Recent visitors have included C. H. Douglass, of the Elite theater, Merced.

Frank Atkins, Marysville.

Nick Turner, of the Strand theater, Grass Valley.

N. L. Watton, Stockton and Sacramento.

L. C. Burga, of the Westwood opera house, Westwood.

H. E. Lotz, division manager for Triangle, has returned from a trip to New York.

Nye F. Dobbs, Mutual auditor, is paying the local branch a visit, having come here by way of the Northwest.

George Seach, booker for the Mutual exchange, has enlisted in the army of married men, the event being an affair of early June.

E. Barnett, assistant comptroller of the Famous Players-Lasky Co., is paying the West Coast branches a visit.

Northern California News.

Burlingame, Cal.—George Roy is planning to remodel and enlarge the Burlingame photoplay theater and will install a new heating and ventilating system, put in new chairs and thoroughly modernize this popular playhouse, making it one of the finest houses on the San Francisco peninsula. When the work is done the theater will have a seating capacity of 1,400.

Stockton, Cal.—E. V. Clover, for many years with the Turner & Dahnken circuit, but for a time manager of the new Hamblen theater at Alameda, is back with the old concern again and has been made manager of the local house.

Los Gatos, Cal.—L. H. Killingsworth, formerly of the Lincoln theater, San Francisco, has taken over the Strand theater of this place.

Marysville, Cal.—I. D. Stanford, formerly of Chico, has purchased the Liberty theater and has closed it for extensive alterations.

Chico, Cal.—J. J. Daly is preparing to open an airdome.

Taft, Cal.—F. W. Livingston has become interested with C. L. Langley in the Hippodrome theater.

Eureka, Cal.—The Rialto theater of Eureka has been granted a permit to issue stock to Roy Carruthers and Louis R. Lurie, who are transferring a lease to the corporation and financing a theater business.

Iowa Trade Letter

By J. L. Shipley, 615 Locust Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Floods in Iowa Cause Delays.

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Local film exchanges, and Omaha and Chicago exchanges as well, supplying service in Iowa, have experienced the utmost difficulty in making shipments during the past week, on account of transportation being at a standstill, owing to high water. The main trunk lines east and west, as well as the lines north and south, have been able to run through only a few miles at a stretch. Tracks have been washed out by the floods, and in several cases bridges have also gone out.

A good many dark houses have resulted from the railroad tie-up, but exhibitors have remained good natured in the face of a difficulty which they knew could not be helped and have made the best of a bad deal. Probably there have been fewer houses open during the last week than in any period of Iowa history since the motion pictures became a popular institution.

Ridick and Bennett Buy Theater.

Messrs. West and Jericho have disposed of the Orpheum theater in Fairfield, Iowa, to Ridick and Bennett. The latter firm now controls both theaters in the town, having the Fairfield as well. Mr. Bennett announces that the Orpheum will continue to show the highest grade of state rights features and is making several changes in the physical appearance of the theater.

Mt. Pleasant House Changes Hands.

E. H. Helmts has sold the Auditorium theater at Mt. Pleasant to Miss Pauline Beckwith, manager of the Pastime theater of that city, so that now Miss Beckwith controls both theaters in that city. Mr. Helmts is planning a long vacation and is going to motor to the Coast, where he will spend several months before returning to the theatrical business.

H. H. Kellogg Takes Ft. Dodge House.

H. H. Kellogg, one of the former owners of the Lyric theater at Fort Dodge, has purchased the Orpheum at Centerville from Ritter & Lane. Mr. Lane has been drafted, and Mr. Ritter has retired from theatricals.

Exhibitor Makes Good Councilman.

C. G. Behrens, manager of the Family theater in Davenport, who was recently elected councilman in that city, is combining both activities. Mr. Behrens is without question the most popular councilman in Davenport, and already is being touted as a candidate for mayor when the next election rolls around.

Big Des Moines Theater Sold.

The Palace theater of Des Moines has been sold by J. Miloslowsky to a number of local capitalists. It is one of the largest theaters in the city, with a seating capacity of 900. It is located in the heart of the theatrical district. Harry Watts, formerly picture editor of the Omaha Bee, and recently associated with H. M. Thomas in the management of the Strand and Rialto theaters in that city, has been appointed resident manager of the Palace. Mr. Watts has already made a number of changes in the appearance of the theater and its staff, and is lining up an attractive program of high-class features. With his former newspaper experience and his success along managerial lines, he is expected to do big things for the Palace.

Iowa Business Jottings.

Harry Wolfberg, well known in the east and south as an independent state rights exchange man, spent a day in Des Moines recently with A. H. Blank en route to New York. Mr. Wolfberg has disposed of his interests in Pittsburg, Kan., and announces that in the very near future he will open up an independent exchange in Kansas City.

Dan C. Burgum, resident manager of the Garden theater, Des Moines, is spending his two weeks' vacation in Pittsburgh, his former home, and J. C. Collins, who has been acting as road man for the Blank Enterprises, is looking after the theater during Mr. Burgum's absence.

Dora C. Middlesworth, cashier and office manager of the Garden theater, has returned from her two weeks' vacation in Chicago and other Illinois points.

Exhibitors Visiting Des Moines.

Visitors in Des Moines exchanges during the past week included:

S. E. Greenebaum, of the Garden, Davenport.

Pete Lemen, of the Rialto, Newton.

George Benteicher, of the Royal, Carroll.

Ed Awe, of the Strand, Fort Dodge.

O. H. Tuel, of Stuart, Iowa.

Spokane News Brevities

By S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

Notes From Local Theaters.

SPOKANE, Wash.—Charles Packeritz, manager of the Empress theater reports that "The Kaiser, The Beast Of Berlin," which he run for three days charging an admission price of 10 cents as compared to his regular admission price of five cents was the best picture, from a box office standpoint also in numbers in attendance, that he has run for months. He also showed "Mother O'Mine," at 10 cents admission to large audiences of a three-day run.

Mr. Packeritz is having good success with serials and is just running the last parts of "The Mystery Ship," which he runs on Sundays and Mondays. He will start "The Bull's Eye" June 13 running it three days a week until all the pictures have been shown.

Spokane Trade Jottings.

Spokane, Wash.—"My Four Years in Germany," from the book of Ambassador Gerard drew capacity audiences to the Clemmer theater where it run for four days. Edith Storey also drew capacity audiences to the Casino in "The Legion of Death."

The Liberty theater will begin the substitution of girl ushers for the 17 boy ushers on Sunday, June 9. Two girls will be put in the service now, and the other 15 will be put on as they are chosen and the costumes are finished.

C. H. Code, salesman for Goldwyn, arrived home a few days ago, after a 90 days' trip through the territory.

C. H. Feldman, salesman out of the Exhibitors' Film exchange, returned from a short trip through western Washington and Oregon. Mr. Feldman is concentrating his efforts on "My Four Years in Germany" and "Tarzan." The last Chaplin comedy, "A Dog's Life," is also giving the Exhibitors' exchange salesman cause for great satisfaction.

The Week's Filmdom Doings in Seattle

Theaters Doing a Patriotic Work—Interesting Changes Among Distributors and Exhibitors—Business Brevities and Personal Notes.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

Big Red Cross Benefit a Success.

SEATTLE, WASH.—The shows arranged for children by J. A. Koerpel, Seattle World manager, on Saturday, May 25, netted a big sum for the Red Cross War Fund, there being a total of over 15,000 children who attended the five theaters where the shows were held. As announced in last week's World no admission charge was made, but the members of the audience were asked for a silver donation to the Red Cross as they left the house.

Orpheum Makes Good With Films.

After two weeks of motion pictures the business of the Orpheum theater is proving the wisdom of Manager Levy's change from vaudeville to the screen drama. It is also proving the mistake of some prophesiers that there were enough motion picture theaters in Seattle, and that any new one entering the field would be one too many. Others said that with the general gravitation northward of the retail center the Orpheum was too far downtown. All these prophets of Seattle's amusement world are now finding out their mistake, however, for the Orpheum is becoming more and more popular with each performance. On the other hand, it can not be denied that Manager Levy selected the psychological moment to enter the motion picture field, for the business is better now in Seattle and other coast towns that it has ever been in the history of the industry.

F. C. Quimby Greeted in Seattle.

F. C. Quimby, business manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., arrived in Seattle on June 4. This was quite an event in motion picture circles of this vicinity, as it is the first time Mr. Quimby has visited the city where he is perhaps better known than in any other locality since he left here to take his important post at New York headquarters last autumn. He is so busy greeting those who come to see him that we are afraid he will have a hard time getting any business done while he is here. He will remain several weeks before proceeding on his tour of Pathe offices. He reports conditions all over the country as excellent, so far as Pathe is concerned, and, as usual, is most enthusiastic.

L. J. Schlaifer Joins Marines.

L. J. Schlaifer, manager of the L. J. Schlaifer Attractions, has joined the U. S. Maines and left this week for a training camp. During his absence, Melvin G. Winstock, his partner, will have entire charge of the business. The company has recently added to its list of features the Rex Beach Travelogue, featuring Rex Beach, Mary Roberts Rinehart and Edward Salisbury.

F. R. Durand Leaves Seattle.

F. R. Durand, for the last few months manager of the Greater Features Company, left this week to take charge of the San Francisco General exchange.

W. H. Rankin With Greater Features.

W. H. Rankin, for two years salesman out of the Seattle Pathe office, has several ties in connection with that organization and is now covering the Northwest territory for the Greater Features Company and W. S. Brewster's Attractions. The Greater Features Company is remodeling the interior of its offices and is enlarging its office force to take care of increased business.

Scates Opens Theater at Okanogan.

C. P. Scates opened the Paramount theater, at Okanogan, Washington, recently. There was quite a lot of delay and extra expense in building the house, owing to labor shortage and difficulty in getting material, but Mr. Scates says he is going to make up for lost time. He came down to Seattle and finished a line-up of bookings that will bring the people to his house whether they want to come or not. Among these were several Paramount and Artcraft series, some of Goldwyn's best, and the state rights features, "Romona" and "The Birth of a Nation."

Buys Interest in Yesler Theater.

Mike Rosenberg, manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, has bought out Mr. Hulm's interest in the Yesler theater. M. L. Brown, who was the latter's partner, will keep his interest in the house and will remain as manager.

H. H. Hurn Now in Charge.

W. F. Seymour, who came out from New York as a special representative for Triangle to straighten out the affairs of the Seattle office, left this week to take over the management of the Minneapolis office. During his sojourn of several months in this city Mr. Seymour made friends of all the exhibitors that he met, and both they and the exchange men of the Northwest were beginning to wish that he might be stationed here permanently. He left H. H. Hurn in charge of this office. Mr. Hurn is well known and liked through his previous experience as manager of the Triangle office and as Mr. Seymour's right-hand man for the past few months.

Business Brevities From Seattle.

A. L. Alylan, manager of the Seattle General office, announces that the first two of the Interstate features, "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L 21" and "The Mother and the Law," have arrived at the Seattle office and are ready for distribution.

Eugene Levy, manager of the Orpheum theater, has signed for Billy West comedies and World comedies.

W. A. Mead, who has charge of the Seattle Fox office during the absence of A. W. Eden at a conference in New York, announces that the "The Big Six" reissues are open for booking.

"THE SOAP GIRL."

Gladys Leslie Romps Prettily Through a Light Love Story.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature "The Soap Girl" is chiefly for patrons still in their teens and early twenties, and such will probably take pleasure in it. In the first place, it has Gladys Leslie, who is good to look at and makes a pleasing heroine for a love story; at least she provides a convincing possibility. Art cannot be conceded to her; but she is frisky and light hearted. Her special stunt is ducking kisses.

In the second place, the story starts off with a good idea and since the average youthful patron of pictures is imaginative, more imaginative sometimes than the author and director, he or she will be glad to supply deficiency and get more enjoyment than the art, in this case, of Director Martin Justice or Author L. A. Browns really warrants.

The heroine's daddy is a successful manufacturer of soap and the girl is in love with a nephew of a society woman whose ancestors had made a fortune selling rum to the Indians. This has now been forgotten and the fashionable woman's pride makes her look down on the daughter of the soap man. Daddy is told of the situation and rightly conjectures that the thing the girl needs is publicity, so he gives orders to his advertising man to get her picture before the public. Just here the author and director are confronted with a dilemma. They are going to put her picture in all the magazines and, of course, it is going to be a soap advertisement. If they make it poetic—it is bound to be pretty—they lose a chance, dear to the hearts of some directors, of getting something either sensational or near sensational, as in this case, where they fall for it and make her head and shoulders appear over the rim of a bathtub. That gained the touch they wanted and made Daddy and his advertising man fat wits—fat wits do not make successes in manufacturing these days. It also takes from Daddy a chance to show a human heart. It also spoils the plot by giving the society woman a real reason for her distaste at having the girl in any way connected with her. And what was gained was only a near-sensation after all.

The role of the society woman is taken by Julia Swayne Gordon, an able and accomplished actress; but she exemplifies at her director's will several of the false notes found in all but the better pictures. She tries to substitute facial expression for real action in places where the business has nothing interesting or dramatic to offer. In this case, she puts Media and Hecuba into a little parlor scrap with her nephew, and when her pride is pricked she dramatically rests her forehead on the marble balustrade, her black dress contrasting with its white, in a picture of dejection worthy of some grief-burdened Laodemia. Another thing she exemplifies and this is too common in picturos. When a leading character wants to call a servant he or she takes a step backward, looks to right or left, tilts the nose once or twice upward to an angle of about forty-five degrees and steps grandly back to position. This has grown ridiculous.

"HOW COULD YOU, JEAN?"

Mary Pickford Does Broad Comedy Stunts in Artcraft Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ELEANOR HOYT BRAINARD wrote the story of "How Could You, Jean?" and Frances Marion made the scenario from it for Mary Pickford's Artcraft screen production, directed by William D. Taylor. Charles Rosher was the cameraman. The result is a disjointed but for the most part highly amusing screen story, with the star doing bits of broad comedy at unexpected moments. One of the most unexpected of these moments is when a wicked he-goat advances rapidly from the south while Mary is gazing north and charges her so viciously that she does a complete summersault before losing her momentum.

Miss Pickford has other funny bits of a less strenuous sort and a brief touch of pathos when she puts on the old-fashioned clothes that were worn in the long ago by her employer's daughter and soothes the last moments of the dying man. There is also a slight sprinkling of melodrama as Mary dashes into a burning barn and drags out the family cow, stern first.

"How Could You, Jean?" has an original heroine. Born and reared to great wealth, when her income stops and she is forced to earn her own living she takes stock of herself and discovers that the only thing she knows anything about is cooking; so she goes to an employment office and gets a job as cook. Not at the first attempt, however. It is only after she has dressed herself to correspond with the other cook-ladies and claimed to come from Sweden that she succeeds in getting herself hired out.

The Bonners, a scientifically inclined old couple too busy with bugs and beetles to attend to their farm, engage Jean to get their meals and do other odd chores about the place. The job would have frightened off any other poverty-stricken heiress, but Jean is one of those fortunate mortals who can get fun out of anything or anybody, and two lovers, five small children, a dog, the cow and the all-too-familiar goat furnish her with plenty of amusing material. One of her admirers is the Swede hired man and the other is young Ted Burton, the son of a millionaire. Ted is so much in love with Jean that he bribes the Swede to let him take his place on the farm. Such devotion is entitled to its reward. He is shown embracing Jean as the picture ends.

The construction of the story could be vastly improved, but its spirit is good clean fun and the production reveals country scenes of quiet beauty that are refreshing to the soul. Mary Pickford's arch wink, radiant smile and deft comic methods are given full play in the character of Jean. Casson Ferguson, Herbert Standing, Spottiswoode Aitken, Fanny Midgley, Larry Peyton and Zazu Pitts are the leading members of the admirable support.

"WE SHOULD WORRY."

Those Fox Company Lees—Katherine is a Left Bower and the Other Is Some Jane.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE will be no worry for the exhibitor in the recent Fox picture with the Lee kids, "We Should Worry"—it is effective as a worry-killer both for theater management and theater audience. The story was plainly written for the Lee children and has not only novelty but is more human and understandable by the heart than most stories dealing with pranks of kids more full of pep than of desire to make grown-ups around them comfortable. It runs along the general line of former Lee pictures with not so good a melodrama hitched up to it as had "American Buds," but it more than makes up for this by the dandy part it gives to Jane. Katherine is a delightful little player, but Jane has exceptional facial expression as well as liveliness, and both have personality that carries along the spectator a willing captive.

The big thing in this picture is the longing of the two kids to be kidnapped, and their progress through the slum part of the city with this object in view yet with keen dramatic sense of all the requirements of the situation is a joy. Nothing was to be lost, not even their fright at being captured, and with Jane to arrange things the thugs were not to have an easy time in making the haul.

Well, there are a couple of real bad men who are willing to pull off a little job while resting before cracking the bank's crib. They get a handful when they bag the kids and take them to the dark, black cellar where one poor kidnapper is left to watch while his pal goes to collect the swag from the wealthy aunt. Jane is not satisfied to have things go smoothly and starts something that neither the watcher nor his partner when he returns want to finish. Not all of it gets over, but most of it does, and as a whole it is a mighty good laugh maker. It will be a fortunate exhibitor who shows it.

"PATRIOTISM."

Bessie Barriscale Star of Timely Paralta Picture Directed by Raymond B. West.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

AS the title indicates, "Patriotism" belongs to the class of photoplays that have been written to aid in creating the love of freedom and justice which is the foundation of the Allies cause. The authors of this six-part Paralta picture are R. B. Kidd and Jane Holly, the scenario being the work of Julian Louis Lamothe. The story serves its purpose excellently and Bessie Barriscale acts a patriotic Scotch lassie with her accustomed depth of feeling and artistic skill. Raymond B. West has directed the picture effectively and Cameraman Clyde De Vinna has taken advantage of a number of picturesque locations along the seashore.

The story is out of the usual channel. The scenes take place in Scotland. Robin Cameron, the heroine, has given her home on the Scottish seacoast as a hospital for convalescent soldiers. Doctor Hyde, of the hospital staff, is in love with Robin, and Sidney Carson, who owns the next estate, is also another of her suitors. An American is added to the number when a submarine sinks a ship near the Cameron coast line and John Hamilton is washed ashore and cared for by Robin.

Sir Angus Cameron, an army officer, is sent to learn if there is a German submarine base near his home. His life is attempted in a German air raid, and Sir Angus is confident that there is a spy in the neighborhood. Hamilton finds out that Carson is the man, but Carson accuses him of being in league with the enemy, and Doctor Hyde, from motives of jealousy, backs up Carson. A little Belgian girl, who has been adopted by Robin, is the means of finding out that Carson is the real spy and has an underground chamber in which supplies for the submarine are stored.

Robin's younger brother has just been killed in battle when Hamilton tells her that he is going to the front. The girl shrinks from giving him up at first, but ends by putting her duty before her love and bidding him a brave fairwell.

Charles Gunn is manly and capable as John Hamilton. Herschal Mayall, Arthur Allardt, Joseph J. Dowling, Clifford Alexander, Ida Lewis and Mary Jane Irving complete a well rounded cast.

"HIS ENEMY THE LAW."

Five-Part Triangle Picture Featuring Jack Richardson in Well Acted Dual Role.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

JACK RICHARDSON is called upon to act two parts in "His Enemy, the Law," a Triangle photoplay written by Lillian Ducey, scenario by George E. Jenks. The dual role consists of father and son, and the story is filled with incident. Starting in the days before the Civil War the many connecting links in the lives of Captain Jack and "Red," his son, constitute a theme that is always interesting, even when the spectator is not in sympathy with the conduct of either of the characters. Raymond Wells, who directed the production, has given it the benefit of skilled treatment, and G. C. Peterson's photographic work is also of the right grade.

A bitter disappointment in an affair of the heart turns Captain Jack Rogers, a young Confederate army officer, into a reckless man who finally becomes an outlaw. Learning that the woman he loves has married another Rogers offers himself to a widow living near his cabin in Texas and the couple start a union that ends in unhappiness and a separation. A son, called "Red," is the one thing Rogers loves and he takes the boy with him. Losing everything at the gambling table, he turns bandit and is shot and killed by the sheriff. The boy is adopted by the officer. Neglected and abused he grows up to hate the law and becomes a famous lawyer whose skill is continually aiding some criminal to escape his just punishment.

The daughter of his father's old sweetheart comes into his life when her lover is accused of murder, and young Rogers secures an acquittal. The man was guilty and is himself slain shortly after the trial. Rogers and the girl learn of the romance in the lives of their parents and fall in love with each other. The lawyer also undergoes a change of heart toward society.

Jack Richardson is ably cast as father and son, and is well supported by Irene Hunt, Jack Livingston, Graham Pette, Dorothy Hagar, Walt Whitman and May Giracl.

"STATION CONTENT."

Gloria Swanson Has Congenial Role in Pleasing Triangle Photoplay of Railroad Life.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

VERY real and convincing is the story of "Station Content," a five-part Triangle picture starring Gloria Swanson. Catherine Carr is credited with its authorship and Charles J. Wilson supplied the scenario. The production was directed by Arthur Hoyt and photographed by Elgin Leslie. Most of the scenes take place on or near a railroad and great care has been used in having the details correct. A reproduction of a burning trestle is the only effect that is not wholly successful. A furious rain and wind storm, during which the heroine fights her way along the track and stops the train that is speeding toward destruction, is remarkably impressive.

"Station Content" tells of two people whose happiness is almost wrecked because loneliness and fancied neglect causes the wife of a station agent to leave him after the death of her baby and join a comic opera company. The president of the road her husband works for is attracted by the young woman and tries to purchase her companionship with money and jewels. She is just about to yield when an accident to her train forces her to stay over night at a lonely station just like the one she deserted. The wife of the agent shows the runaway wife her duty and when the repentant woman stops the train, at the risk of her own life, she discovers that it is a special belonging to the president of the road and that her husband, who has been made a division superintendent, is also on board. The couple are reunited.

Gloria Swanson fits the character of Kitty Manning perfectly and acts with genuine appeal. Nothing is overdone or slighted. She makes the woman live on the screen. Lee Hill as Jim Manning, Arthur Millett as Stephen Morton, Nellie Allen as Mrs. Morton and Ward Caufield as a theatrical manager are the leading members of a capable supporting company.

TWO GOOD MUTT AND JEFFS.

Among the New Fox Releases are "Tonsorial Artists" and "Hospital Orderlies."

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

IN "The Tonsorial Artists" Jeff buys a barber shop in a place far off from everything except an old sailors' home and Mutt tells him he is a fool. They decide to get a pretty manicure artist, and then the old boys come in a long line; but they do not want to get shaved. Mutt sends out for some itch powder and has the artist apply a little to the beard of each of her customers. Soon they want to get shaved. There is so much business that Jeff rigs up a lawnmower to run along the edge of a table and clips off the hirsute growth, first on one side of the row of faces and then on the other.

"Hospital Orderlies."

Mutt and Jeff are left in charge of the ward by the doctor who is called away. There is a colored gentleman who is violent now and then and they are to give him an injection whenever he gets wild. He gets wild, they comply and he gets wilder till he eats the balls off the brass bedsteads thinking they are pills. There is a mule in the cartoon with something of a kick and by mistake he gets one of the injections. This gives quite a boost to Mutt and Jeff. Another hit in the picture is a big bed full of squalling babies whom Mutt directs Jeff to soothe.

"THE VOICE OF DESTINY."

Diando-Pathe Subject Features Baby Marie in Simple, Pleasing Tale.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THAT it is possible for a mystery story to have a quite obvious and simple plot and at the same time be very effective as entertainment is proved by this five-reel subject. The production, by Diando Film Corporation, was adapted to the screen by Clara S. Beranger and directed by William Bertram. It makes its chief appeal through the naturalness of its home settings and the fine atmosphere of home life. Baby Marie Osborne, always a favorite with family audiences, is cast in the role of Marie Lind, and her little colored playmate, Sambo, also appears in several scenes.

Marie has a very interesting uncle, named Charles, who has been stricken blind while still quite young. Charles Lind has considerable money and also possesses some valuable jewels, which he keeps in the box under his dictaphone. It is his custom to dictate letters into the dictaphone, which plays an important part in the story.

Marie's father is an honest, but visionary man. He loses part of her uncle's money and is later suspected of murdering Charles. The circumstances of the murder are so free from complications that guilt falls upon the butler almost by necessity, since it is unthinkable that the father would commit the crime. But the unraveling of the mystery brings out some dramatic moments and proves very interesting. The part played by the dictaphone is well-devised.

Jack Connolly, Morris Foster, Howard Crampton and Ellen Cossity also appear.

"MIDNIGHT MADNESS."

Five-Reel Bluebird Offering Presents Ruth Clifford and Kenneth Harlan in Mystery Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS surprising mystery yarn, written by Elliott J. Clawson and directed by Rupert Julian, is one of great technical excellence. It easily marks another milestone, and a much needed one, in the progress of this type of fiction on the screen, inasmuch as it gets clear away from obvious situations and keeps the observer alert with interest.

Ruth Clifford appears as the girl heroine, Gertrude Temple, a part which she fills very creditably. The bulk of the work falls upon the hero, Kenneth Harlan, who appears as Prentice Tiller, and his performance is one of gratifying skill. Much of the success of this swiftly-moving number is due to the careful avoidance of extraneous situations and the smooth direction of those necessary to the tale.

The first scenes launch the observer into a jewel theft in an art museum, following which a shot is fired which strikes a man in the left hand. Two men appear in the story shortly afterward, each wounded in the hand. One of them is the hero, Prentice Tiller, and the other a strange individual named Molitor. Both call at the hotel apartment of the heroine. No time is spent in outlining characters, for the rapid action of the piece will not permit of this. All the observer knows or cares about is that the girl has become interested in Prentice Tiller. She leads him quite unwittingly into peril in an old church building, and then helps him get out of it. The scenes at the masquerade ball are excellently staged.

Others in the cast are Harry Von Meter, Harry H. Holden, Louis Willoughby and Claire Du Brey.

"WHICH WOMAN?"

Bluebird Presents Ella Hall and Priscilla Dean in an Entertaining Subject.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

AN interrupted wedding has been made the leading feature of numerous stories, and the one here pictured loses nothing by the repetition. In fact a consistent and logical crook story has been built up around the wedding feature, and taken as a whole the offering presents first class entertainment.

Ella Hall appears as Doris Standish, a young girl about to be sacrificed on the altar of social pride to an old lover. Priscilla Dean plays the role of Mary Butler, the pretty member of a band of crooks, who have selected the scene of the forthcoming marriage as a base for operations.

Mary Butler, employed as maid, finds the doleful bride-elect and learns of her opposition to the match. She advises the girl to run away, and Doris, already attired in her wedding gown, suddenly decides to do so. She makes a dash for an automobile outside and is mistaken by the chauffeur, Jimmy Nevin, as Mary in the excitement of the moment. Jimmy is a new and quite green member of the crooks' organization, and has only agreed to go on the job in order to get revenge on the man Doris was to marry. In the end he gets a better revenge than he had anticipated by winning Doris himself.

The scenes at the crooks' headquarters are a good feature of this number, quite equal to those at the country house itself. Some pains have been taken to bring out the characteristics of individual members and considerable humor results from this.

The action is good and the number on the whole very successful.

"A DESERT WOOING."

Enid Bennett in Familiar but Finely Produced Paramount.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

NEW YORK social life and Western civilization are again contrasted in "A Desert Wooing," a five-part Paramount picture written by J. G. Hawks and directed by Jerome Storm. Enid Bennett, the little Australian actress who was married recently to Fred Niblo, is the star. Most of the material is familiar, but the love story is interesting, and scenically the production has many moments of beauty. Edwin Willat was the cameraman.

Avice Bereton, the character played by Enid Bennett, is a young society girl whose mother and brother have about run through all the family possessions when Barton Masters, a western millionaire, arrives in New York and is introduced to the Beretons. Masters is smitten with Avice and marries her after a short courtship. The girl accepts the westerner solely on account of his wealth. Doctor Van Fleet, a man of good social position, little money and less morals, is in love with Avice and determines not to give her up even after she is another man's wife. The newly made wife has always been attracted by the doctor and is relieved when she learns that he and her mother and a party of friends are to accompany the wedding party to the Masters' ranch.

The young westerner is a strong, dominant character, and soon wins the respect of his wife. This feeling is rapidly developing into something deeper when Van Fleet takes advantages of Masters supposed absence to force his attentions on Avice. Masters enters the room and gives the doctor a severe thrashing. He then drives him from the house. Thinking his wife is partly to blame, Masters sends all his guests away and makes her do the housework herself. The couple are fully reconciled after Van Fleet shoots Masters and Avice shows her devotion to her husband by stealing the doctor's revolver and compelling him to use his professional skill to save Masters' life.

Enid Bennett's part is much stronger than any she has yet played. Her youth and beauty are quite as valuable as ever and she is very much in earnest in everything she does. Her expression of emotion is limited at present, but the charm of her personality goes a long way toward making up for the defect. Jack Holt rides and acts Masters with dash and spirit. Donald Macdonald as Doctor Van Fleet, John P. Lockney as "Keno" Clark, Charles Spere as Billy Bereton and Elinor Hancock as Mrs. Bereton are all excellent.

"A WOMAN OF REDEMPTION."

World Picture Release Features June Elvidge in Mountain Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN this five-reel number June Elvidge appears as Gene Romaine, daughter of the fire warden of a great lumber company. The girl is sought in marriage by McDaniels, the camp "boss," who is a squaw man and whose Indian wife is intensely jealous of the white girl. Gene does not love McDaniels, but he has a business hold upon her father and sets about to force a marriage upon the girl.

It will be seen that the opening situations are of a familiar type. The chief novelty of the story comes later, when the president of the lumber company brings his son, Timothy, West in order to reform him. The youth immediately renews his fast life in the Western dance halls and the father takes him out into the great woods and abandons him to his fate. Tim will either come back a man, or not at all.

Gene Romaine, in the meantime, has left her father's cabin and taken to the wilds, in order to escape McDaniels. She finds Tim, suffering from a sprained ankle and takes him back to the cabin with her. They discover that McDaniels has just buried her father, whom he says died of heart disease. Suspicion is thrown upon Tim later for the sudden death of McDaniel, but it develops that the squaw wife committed the crime.

This number contains no great originality of plot, but is quite dramatic at times, in a conventional sort of way. The big woods settings are attractive.

The cast also includes John Bowers, Alec Shannon and Marie Pagano.

"HER SCREEN IDOL."

Paramount Releases a Sennett Farce of Original and Amusing Character.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

FORD STERLING will hardly be recognized as "Handsome Jack Darling" in a caricature of the screen idol who rides his horse through windows and up to the bar, the two-gun man of western melodrama, for the faces he makes are not those of the Ford Sterling we have been accustomed to see. Jack Darling goes to a show where he is to appear "in person" during an exhibition of a screen story written by Jack Darling, directed and supervised by Jack Darling, his name displayed in the introductory announcements almost as often as that of a prominent producer who neglects no such opportunity for screen publicity. The burlesque is shown on the screen while Jack, in person, sits in the audience and leads applause, but his popularity stirs the bile of more than one envious spectator, and his real bravery is put to the test after the show.

All this is done with a great deal of skill and some incidents well out of the ordinary, such as the puppy-mobile chase, in which a baby drives too little pups in an actual chase after a frightened cat. The subsequent exhibition of courage, the rescue of a man who has fallen from a high building and caught on a flag line stretched high above the street is ingenious enough, but it is carried to the verge of absurdity. The entire release has merit in getting away from the commonplace, in ridiculing it, and in affording that variety so essential to a screen program.

"UP ROMANCE ROAD."

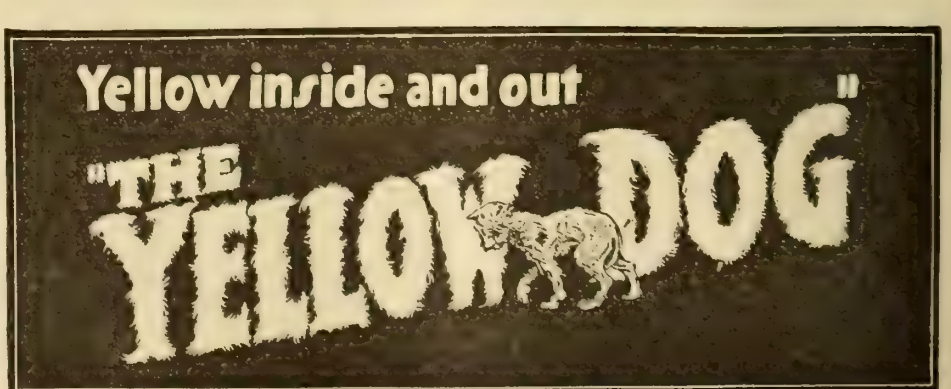
Second Russell Production for Mutual Program Comedy-Romance of Pleasing Character.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE second of the William Russell Productions for the Mutual program, June 24, is a comedy-romance of moderate merit. Its comedy moments do not always reach the top notch, nor is the story of the picture strongly entertaining. William Russell does good work with the opportunities afforded him, and Charlotte Burton, playing opposite him, brings considerable charm to the feminine element of an affianced pair. The supporting cast includes the names of John Burton, Carl Stockdale, Joseph Belmont, Emma Kluge and Claire Du Brey.

As the story runs the son of one shipowner and daughter of another becomes engaged, but owing to the fact that too much luxury provides few thrills and much monotony they seek some method of bringing to their period of courtship a few thrilling episodes. The first attempt being merely the driving over a flower bed in the grounds of the young woman's father's home in hopes of exciting his anger fails to produce the desired order for dismissal of his daughter's fiance.

Parallel with a scheme to kidnap her runs a conspiracy by some German sympathizers to blow up some explosives in the shipowner's storehouses in punishment of a refusal to obey a warning to stop shipment to the Allies. An exciting situation arises here when the girl is kidnapped by the wrong party along with her lover, both being held as hostages. Through the young man the plot is uncovered and the bomb located. The occurrence cures the pair of their wild ideas and the wedding proceeds with haste. The production was well directed by Henry King.



"GOOD NIGHT, PAUL."

Constance Talmadge as Sparkling as Ever in Select Version of Stage Farce.

Reviewed by Edward Weltzel.

WHEN Roland Oliver and Charles Dickson wrote the stage farce "Good Night, Paul," they took care to use plenty of well tried material. Turned into a screen attraction by Julia Crawford Ivers, the story still betrays its close relationship to the style of carpenter made but often amusing French farces that are always deprived of their broadest situations before being thought proper for American audiences. In its present shape "Good Night, Paul" is quite harmless and without moral shock.

Expert playing on the part of Constance Talmadge and her support are of great assistance to this Select picture, and the familiar complications take on a guise of newness under the clever direction of Walter Edwards. The play lacks the charm of many of the Constance Talmadge releases, but is full of laughs and has sufficient speed to prevent too close study of its component parts.

The plot is another angle of the "Lend Me Your Wife" motive. Paul Boudeaux and Richard Landers are partners and the firm is in need of fifty thousand dollars. Richard has a wife and Paul hasn't, although his uncle, who is a bachelor, is wealthy and anxious to have the family name perpetuated. The uncle arrives on a visit and, by sudden inspiration, Richard's wife claims that Paul is her husband, the partners occupying the same apartment.

Uncle is delighted and announces his determination to give Paul all the money he cares to ask for and to remain with them for a month. A nurse, with whom Paul is in love, and a French modiste add to the perplexities of the partners, but the quick wits of Mrs. Richard prevents discovery until matters are righted and uncle signs a check for the fifty thousand. The title comes from the situation when uncle finds out that his nephew has spent the night on a couch in the living room instead of sharing his supposed wife's apartment. This incident is handled without the slightest offense.

Constance Talmadge is as sparkling as ever and Norman Kerry, Harrison Ford, John Steppling, Beatrice Van and Rosita Marstini as the husband, the partner, the uncle, the nurse and the modiste respectively follow the star's lead faithfully. James C. Van Trees is a skilled knight of the camera.

"THE UNCHASTENED WOMAN."

Anspacher's Stage Success Given Elaborate Production by Rialto De Luxe.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE picture play fan has learned to choose the splendid hero of the drama or the double-dyed villain of the melodrama in preference to the unwholesome domestic type of either man or woman presented as the featured character of the cast. Therefore, it is hard to enthuse largely on the charms of the screen version of the Oliver Morosco stage success, "The Unchastened Woman," by Louis K. Anspacher.

The picture, which was made by Rialto De Luxe and appears on the Kleine program, features Grace Valentine in as clever an interpretation of that selfish type of society woman whose character seems to boast not one redeeming feature as could be desired. A splendid supporting cast includes Frank Mills, who plays a clever opposite to the star; Mildred Manning, Catherine Tower, Edna Hunter, Adelaide Barker, Mildred Rankin, Victor Sutherland, Paul Panzer, Mike Donlin and John Hopkins. The picture was skillfully directed by William Humphrey.

The story of the play, which is well and elaborately presented, concerns a group of characters which are no doubt perfectly human, and which, with the exception of one or two which belong to the more serious and conscientious walks of life, appear with frequency among the idle rich. The chief character is a wealthy woman whose joy in life depends on the number of flirtations which enter her life.

A complex situation arises when the woman, whose husband has grown weary under the yoke of his wife's selfishness, discovers by means of a detective that he is on intimate terms with another woman. There also enters the story of a woman of stable character whose fad is the encouragement of the building of model tenements. This woman, by means of her writings, supports her husband while he completes a course in art in Italy. The "unchastened" woman on a trip to Italy meets and flirts with this woman's husband, and finally, when all hands have again centered in New York City some time later, after a series of insults and rebukes mingled with regrets, a happy culmination of affairs ensues, in which husbands, wives and sweethearts at last come to a satisfactory understanding.

"THE HEART OF A GIRL."

Five-Reel World-Picture Presents Barbara Castleton and Irving Cummings in Leads.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel World Pictures subject adapted by George D. Proctor from a story by Maravene Thompson, deals with society life in Washington in the opening reels, and later dips into a state political campaign in an interesting manner. Barbara Castleton is quite charming in the role of the society girl, Betty Lansing, and receives good support from Irving Cummings as the hero, Brandon Kent.

The story is not particularly notable for dramatic strength, though some of the scenes at the state convention are exciting and enacted with a fair degree of suspense. The chief strength of the production is found in its smooth development and entertaining qualities, and the freedom from jarring notes of any sort.

Betty Lansing is a sweet girl with a charitable heart. She visits the poor of Washington on missions of mercy, and, while on one of these trips, renews her acquaintance with Congressman Kent, whom she had formerly met in an automobile clash. The Congressman becomes interested in her. He is being urged to run for governor of his native state, and the subsequent workings of the plot show how a card scandal at Betty's home almost upsets his political future. His enemies attack his character owing to this incident, which he will not explain because of the girl and her mother. But Betty, herself, rushes to the convention and clears Kent's name in a way that wins him the nomination by acclamation.

"A LITTLE SISTER OF EVERYBODY."

Pathe Play Features Bessie Love in Story of Love and Labor Troubles.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel Pathe offering adapted by Charles Sarver from a story by William Addison Lathrop and directed by Robert T. Thornby is not unlike previous numbers dealing with perplexed labor problems. For this reason the subject possesses no distinct novelty. It is, at the same time, an entertaining offering, and furnishes Bessie Love with a vehicle which is well-suited to her talents.

Miss Love plays the role of a young girl of the east side reared in the atmosphere of poverty and socialism. George Fisher plays the part of Hugh Travers, a young man whose wealthy father dies suddenly leaving upon his shoulders the burden of running a great factory.

The part of the girl heroine is well drawn, but the hero would have been more convincing if a few additional scenes from his early life had been shown. His sudden reform from the "butterfly" mode of existence is a little too much taken for granted as it stands. However, he gains favor in the later scenes, when he dons working clothes and enters his own factory under an assumed name.

The dramatic end of the story concerns the manner in which the girl saves the hero from being shot by a socialist who had been discharged. The offering, as a whole, is one of moderate strength.

The settings, both as regards the east side scenes and in the home of Hugh Travers and his mother, are quite effective. Hector Sarno appears to advantage in the role of Ivan, the socialist.

Comments

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

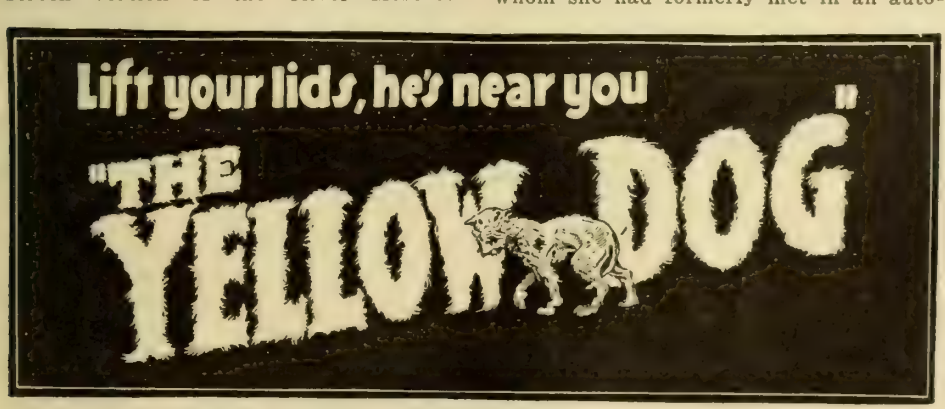
WHICH WOMAN? (Bluebird).—A five-reel number adapted and produced by Todd Browning, with Ella Hall and Priscilla Dean in the cast. An interrupted wedding in which the unwilling bride flees and afterward becomes entangled with a band of crooks are the chief features. The story is a good one, and contains both thrills and humor.

MIDNIGHT MADNESS (Bluebird).—An excellent five-reel mystery story, written by Elliott J. Clawson and produced by Rupert Julian. Ruth Clifford and Kenneth Harlan play the leading roles. The story is one of swift action, and has a well-contrived plot. It makes a desirable offering of the type.

Famous Players-Lasky.

HOW COULD YOU, JEAN? (Artcraft), June 23.—Mary Pickford's latest picture is taken from a story by Eleanor Hoyt Bainard, and was directed by William D. Taylor. It is strong on comedy, and is full of beautiful country scenes.

A DESERT WOOING (Thomas H. Ince), June 23.—J. G. Hawks is the author of this five-part photoplay starring Enid Bennett. It is a story of an Eastern society girl and a Western millionaire, and the little Australian actress makes a charming heroine. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.



Fox Film Corporation.

WE SHOULD WORRY (Fox), June 16.—A five-reel picture with the Lee children that seems sure to make a hit with all kinds of audiences, and can well be shown anywhere. For a longer notice see another page of this issue.

THE TONSORIAL ARTISTS (Mutt and Jeff Cartoon), May 26.—The adventures of the two pen made picture comedians in making a barbership near nothing but an old sailors' home have some very laughable situations. It is noticed more at length on another page of this issue.

HOSPITAL ORDERLIES (Mutt and Jeff Cartoon), June 9.—Mutt and Jeff are left in charge of a ward by the doctor, and their troubles begin. It has much good comic matter, and will make laughter. For longer notice see another page of this issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

THE SOAP GIRL (Blue Ribbon Vitagraph), June 17.—A five-reel picture with Gladys Leslie. It is a comedy love story that may be quite pleasing to the younger people of any average audience. It lacks substance in plot and direction, but has some pretty scenes. For a longer notice see another page of this issue.

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

PATRIOTISM (Paralta), June 10.—This picture treats of the war from a new angle, and is good propaganda. Bessie Barriscale is an earnest and capable heroine. Raymond B. West directed the performance. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 30 (Mutual).—This issue pictures a number of interesting events, among them the surviving crews of vessels recently sunk by U-boats, preparing sugar cane land at Masita, La.; athletes in competition at Washington, D. C.; U. S. troops on the hike near Los Angeles, Cal.; a tractor proving its fitness, and interesting scenes with Detroit's Boy Scouts.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 31 (Mutual).—Among the first scenes in this number are the midshipmen at Annapolis receiving naval honors. Other scenes of interest include women in England aiding in the "back to the farm" movement, an unsinkable lifeboat, scenes with the soldiers in Italy, and teaching the U. S. Indians all about trench warfare.

BEWARE OF BLONDS (Strand), June 18.—A Billie Rhodes comedy in which a fortune teller warns a couple of sweethearts of the interference of a blond lady in their love serenity. Some scenes at a bathing resort bring on a deluge of blonds. The feminine member of the affianced pair puts on a blond wig, and causes the young man to fall in love with her in disguise before she doffs her blond wig revealing her real identity.

UP ROMANCE ROAD (Russell), June 24.—The second of the William Russell productions proves to be a comedy-romance of fairly entertaining quality. The story concerns the search for something of the unusual to break the monotony in the lives of a couple of wealthy sweethearts. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE VOICE OF DESTINY (Pathe-Diando), June 23.—A pleasing five-reel subject featuring Baby Marie Osborne and a good supporting cast. The story concerns the murder of a blind man, the girl's uncle, and the subsequent rounding up of the murderer. The plot is simple, but effectively worked out. This has a good juvenile interest, and will please the average audience. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

BRITAIN'S BULWARKS NO. 7 (Pathe), June 23.—A good instalment, giving a further insight into the conditions about St. Quentin after the German retreat. British cavalry is seen advancing through flooded areas, and the ruins of many towns and villages are shown. This gives a clear idea of the districts in France over which great armies are fighting.

THE FURNITURE MOVERS (Rolin-Pathe), June 30.—A one-reel Toto comedy, with some good knockabout stunts in it. Toto appears as a furniture mover, and helps move away goods from the wrong room. The slapstick incidents are quite laughable.

Select Pictures Corporation.

GOOD NIGHT, PAUL (Select).—A screen version of a stage farce, this five-part picture is cleverly played by Constance Talmadge and her company. It was directed by Walter Edwards, and is full of laughs. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation.

STATION CONTENT, June 16.—Gloria Swanson does a fine piece of acting in this five-part photoplay, which has a real heart story and contains a fine storm effect. It deals with railroad life. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

HIS ENEMY THE LAW, June 16.—Jack Richardson plays a dual role in this five-part melodrama from a story by Lillian Ducey. There is plenty of interest all through, and Raymond Wells has directed the picture skillfully. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Company.

CURRENT EVENTS NO. 57 (Universal), June 7.—Draft registration of young men of 21 years, enrolling additional Red Cross nurses, Anzac troops en route to France, athletic meets in American army camps, spy activities in Los Angeles, and numerous other topics of interest are pictured in this number.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 28 (Universal), June 12.—This contains many subjects of current interest, including the graduation of "Middies" for fighting submarines, a naval athletic meet at Pelham Bay, hospital preparations in London, an outing for New York orphans, a California polo match, and various other features.

ROMANCE AND DYNAMITE (L-Ko), June 12.—A two-reel comic, which features Eddie Barry, Rube Miller, Eva Novak, and others. The small Chinaman and young alligator contribute a few laughs in the first reel, and there are some funny mechanical effects in the second. The number, on the whole, strikes a good average for this type of film, though there is little if any plot.

IN DUTCH (Century), June 26.—A two-reel comic, which features Alice Howell as a girl immigrant. She first appears on a boat coming from Holland, and afterward dances in wooden shoes in a cabaret. The scenes are of a knockabout type, and contain a moderate amount of amusement. The subject is not very strong.

MUM'S THE WORD (Nestor).—An entertaining little farce comedy picturing the troubles of two quarreling couples, the Blacks and Whites. They get divorces, and Mr. Black weds Mrs. White, and vice versa. Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Gertrude Astor, and Edith Roberts extract quite a lot of amusement out of this plot.

PASSING THE BOMB (Nestor).—A burlesque comedy by Tom Gibson featuring Ralph McComas, Eileen Sedgwick, and Milton Sims. The railroad president's daughter loves a young engineer, and despite her father's objections determines to wed him. They plan an elopement, and become mixed up with three desperate hobos. The action runs along quite entertainingly, and there is considerable quiet amusement in the offering.

WHO'S YOUR WIFE? (Nestor).—A comedy by Tom Gibson featuring Gale Henry as principal of a girls' school. She becomes enamoured of a young man who calls sub rosa on one of the students, and forces him to marry her. Not very new in plot, but quite entertaining.

THE GUILTY EGG (Star Comedy).—Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, and Gladys Tennyson appear in this amusing domestic comedy. The newlyweds buy a rooster and expect it to lay eggs. Food conservation also comes in for some quiet, humorous effects. The number is pleasing.

STEPPING SOME (Lyons & Moran Special).—A laughable comedy subject in which Eddie plays the young married man and Lee a country youth in the city, where he comes to buy millinery. The cabaret doings are put on in good style, and will get a number of laughs. A live number.

A RIPPING TIME (Lyons & Moran).—Lee Moran plays the part of a tailor's apprentice who follows his customer, Eddie, to a social affair. Lee measures up the guests for new clothes. Both he and Eddie lose their trousers and do some tall dodging about among the guests as a result. The knockabout situations are rather broad, but will bring laughter.

BATH HOUSE SCANDAL (Nestor).—A comedy number by Harry Wulze, which features Carter De Haven, Mina Cunard, Margaret Whistler, and Dan Daly. Two couples en route to Catalina Island on a steamer became entagled. The young man, engaged to an old maid, gets into a flirtation with a young girl. The father objects. He tries to have the girl kidnapped, but the old maid is carried off instead. This has a slight but amusing plot, and is attractive in a scenic way.

PLAY STRAIGHT OR FIGHT (Western).—A two-reel Western number by Leon De Mothe featuring Helen Gibson, G. Raymond Nye, Hoot Gibson, Millard K. Wilson, and Noble Johnson. The villain of the story frames up a stage coach robbery on the girl's brother, but the girl gets advance knowledge of the crime, and prevents same. This is conventional in plot, but is made exciting and generally successful by the graphic nature of the attempted holdup. Fast horseback riding and picturesque scenes are features of the production.

THE STOLEN KEYHOLE (Nestor).—A comedy number by Arthur F. Statler featuring Harry Mann as an intoxicated gentleman. The "jag" scenes are original and really laughable, something often attempted with far less success. The knight cannot get home, so he sleeps in a tree; later he falls into the lake, and finally winds up in a padded cell. This is handled without offense.

BUTTER AGAIN (Nestor).—A comedy number by Tom Gibson featuring Gale Henry, Wm. Franey, and others on a farm. Gale is a city girl with a passion for animal pets, so she goes to the farm. Here she meets with various experiences that make her decide to return. Among other things she is chased by a ram and thrown into a well. Typical and amusing.

HOME JAMES (Nestor).—A comedy number by Al Santell featuring Harry Mann, Kathleen O'Connor, and Mark Fenton. A young wife appeals to an astrologer to cure her husband of drink. The latter gives the husband a good scare. Trick photography is employed in this number to good effect. It contains a fair amount of amusement.

THERE GOES THE BRIDE (Star Comedy).—A comedy subject by King Vidor featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, and Beatrice Van. The young men live in a boarding house, and are rivals for the affections of the same girl. They agree that the one who loses the girl shall have complete ownership of their phonograph. Eddie gets the girl, and Lee gets the phonograph. Slight in theme, but good in characterizations and presentation.

World Pictures Corporation.

A WOMAN OF REDEMPTION (World Pictures), June 24.—A five-reel subject featuring Juné Elvidge and John Bowers. This is a mountain romance of a rather conventional type. It shows how a mountain girl and the wild son of an Eastern lumber king find happiness together. The story, while not very new in plot, has some quite dramatic moments.

"THE SHOOTING OF DAN McGREW"

Metro Presents a Revival of the Production Based Upon Robert W. Service's Most Famous Poem With Edmund Breese.

Cast.

Jim Maxwell.....Edmund Breese
Lou, his wife.....Katheryn Adams
Nell, their daughter.....Audrine Stark
Nell, grown up.....Evelyn Brent
Jack, Nell's husband.....Wallace Stopp
Dan McGrew.....William A. Morse

Directed by Herbert Blache.

The Story: After accepting the hospitality of Jim Maxwell and his wife, Lou, Dan McGrew proceeds to wreck their home by telling Lou that her husband is unfaithful and in inducing her to elope with him to the Yukon. McGrew reluctantly takes her child, Nell, along but makes no effort to save her when she falls off the horse. Lou discovers the despicable character of McGrew and, embittered, becomes a woman of the dance halls. Meanwhile Jim Maxwell, who has become a wanderer, arrives in the Yukon and is rescued from an avalanche by his daughter, Nell, who had been picked up by some kindly people when she fell from the horse years ago and who is now the wife of Jack, a sturdy young man. McGrew kills Sam Ward, a miner, and manages to fasten the crime on Jack, who is placed under arrest. In the saloon Maxwell and McGrew at last come face to face. There is a terrific fight in which Maxwell kills the man who ruined his home. Maxwell and Lou are reunited by Nell and Jack, who has been released from jail, and they start life anew.

Feature Edmund Breese as Jim Maxwell and Katheryn Adams as Lou, his wife.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Screen Realization of Robert W. Service's Greatest Poem.
"Kipling of the Yukon" Furnished Great Poem As Basis of Great Photoplay.
The Code of the Klondyke Reaps Vengeance in Full Atonement.
Great Tragedy of the Land of the Golden Romance and Adventure.
Avenging Hand Reaps Toll of Retribution in Far-Off Alaska.
Strong Hearts and Steadfast Love Find Happiness "Farthest North."

Stunt Suggestions: The bookseller can hook up his window display with your stills, getting up a run on Service's poems. If you can, borrow a few of the books and place them in other windows open at this poem with a card "You've read it, now SEE it at (house and date)." In the newspaper work dwell on the fact that this subject has been reissued in response to an insistent demand and that the leading role is played by one of the most virile actors on the American stage.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

"THE VOICE OF DESTINY"

Pathe Presents Baby Marie Osborne in an Unusual Play With Strong Emotional Appeal.

Cast.

Little Marie Lind.....Baby Marie Osborne
Charles Lind.....Jack Connolly
John Lind.....Morris Foster
Eleanor Lee.....Ellen Cossiety
Briggs, the Butler.....Howard Crompton

Directed by William Bertram.

The Story: When Little Marie Lind's uncle is stricken blind her father assumes control of the latter's business. Marie opens and reads the mail to her uncle so that he can dictate his replies on the dictaphone. Marie's father loses a lot of money in stock gambling and confesses to the uncle. A fight follows, and a little later Marie's uncle is shot as he is sitting by the dictaphone. The father is seen crouching near the prostrate body. The police arrive, but he escapes. The evidence points to his guilt, and he is later apprehended. The detectives guarding Marie's home recognize in Griggs, the butler, an old-time crook, and in trying to escape the vigilance of the officers he is shot. Meanwhile Marie, toying with the dictaphone, turns on the record into which her uncle had been dictating when he was shot. The record contains the last words of the uncle, and Marie's mother has the machine taken to Griggs, who is in the hospital. The record is put on—and the murder mystery is solved in a most dramatic climax.

Feature Baby Marie Osborne as Little Marie Lind.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Clever Child Heroine of Thrilling Story of Crime Frustrated and Guilt Punished.
Talented Child of the Screen in Skillful Play of Emotions.
Baby Marie Osborne Displays Remarkable Talents in Sensational Melodrama.
Murder Will Out—If There Is a Dictaphone Handy.
Cleverly Contrived Photoplot Sustains Interest to the Finish.
Detective Drama of Rare Interest Gives Child Star Ideal Role.

Stunt Suggestions: Borrow some dictaphones from the local agency, if there is one, and use them for window displays with a card: "The voice in the wax was 'The Voice of Destiny' in the Pathe production with Baby Marie Osborne. See how the dictaphone saved her father's life." You may be able to get the agency to take a joint advertisement with you on this film getting larger display for your house. Use a machine in the lobby for display and credit the agency with the loan. If there is no agency in town you may be able to borrow a machine from some lawyer or merchant with the same credit given.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color. Also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

Released June 23.

"THE FIREFLY OF FRANCE."

Jesse L. Lasky Presents Wallace Reid in Marion Polk Angelloti's Latest Novel of "Over There."

Cast.

Devereux Bayne.....Wallace Reid
Esme Falconer.....Ann Little
Von Blenheim (alias Jenkins).....Charles Ogle
The Firefly.....Raymond Hatton
Dunham.....Winter Hall
Von Blenheim's Aides.....Ernest Joy, Clarence Geldert, William Elder
Georges.....Henry Woodward
Marie-Jeanne.....Jane Wolff

Directed by Donald Crisp.

The Story: Devereux Bayne, a wealthy young American, joins the American Ambulance Corps in France. He becomes entangled with a German spy and a young girl, the latter going from New York to France in search of certain papers hidden by the "Firefly," an aviator who has disappeared under suspicious circumstances and who is her relative. With the aid of Bayne these papers are found in a chateau near the firing line, but they are not obtained without serious difficulties in which Bayne and Esme Falconer, the young woman, become involved. Bayne foists upon a number of German spies seeking the papers a faked set of documents, but he, himself, is made prisoner and is about to be taken into the German lines when a shell providentially ends the adventure, killing the spies and wounding Bayne. When Bayne regains consciousness he finds himself in a hospital with Esme nursing him. Bayne not only wins a cross of war but also the love of Esme.

Feature Wallace Reid as Devereux Bayne and Ann Little as Esme Falconer.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Saturday Evening Post Serial Brought to the Screen In Latest Paramount Production.

Unusual Photoplay Assures Thrilling Entertainment.

Stunt Suggestions: Use the aviation pictures to be found in all the magazines as decorations for window and lobby work with "The star of them all is The Firefly of France." See his exploits at the (house and date). You might be able to arrange a toy aeroplane race in front of your house. If you do, work in with the stores selling these toys to advertise your play and the race. Borrow a few planes and stage a flight in the lobby, using a concealed fan to give life to the little machines.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

Released June 23.

"A DESERT WOOING."

Thomas H. Ince Presents Enid Bennett in J. G. Hawkes' Story of a Girl Who Found Real Life and Real Love on the Western Plains.

Cast

Avice Bereton.....Enid Bennett
Barton Masters.....Jack Holt
Dr. Fortescue Van Fleet.....Donald Macdonald
"Keno" Clark.....John P. Lockney
Billy Bereton.....Charles Spere
Mrs. Bereton.....Elinor Hancock

Directed by Jerome Storm.

The Story: Mrs. Bereton, who is in sore financial straits, plans to marry her daughter, Avice, to some wealthy man in order to rehabilitate her fortunes. Barton Masters, a millionaire copper man and rancher, arrives from the West. He meets Avice and they are mutually attracted to each other. Their love develops and they marry, and Avice tells Dr. Fortescue Van Fleet, a social parasite who admires her greatly, that her marriage to Masters will mean nothing in their possible relations as marriage is only a convention in their set. The young couple leave for the Western ranch, and Masters brings along the doctor and Mrs. Bereton. Billy, the brother of Avice, who was somewhat of a waster in the East, has gone on ahead and is rapidly improving in the clean life in the open lands. The doctor tries to compel Avice to make good her assurance, but is caught by Masters, thrashed and thrown out to make his way home on the desert as best he can. Masters then sends his relative back to New York. Avice is rebellious, a slave to her husband's will, but she worships him secretly, nevertheless. The doctor returns and shoots Masters, but Avice, at the point of a revolver, forces him to give the necessary surgical attention to save her husband's life. Then the doctor is banished and a complete understanding between husband and wife is finally established.

Feature Enid Bennett as Avice Bereton and Jack Holt as Barton Masters.

Program and Advertising Phrases: With Her Own Consent Girl of Aristocratic Breeding Is Placed on the Marriage Market, for Sale to the Highest Bidder.

Married for Money Bride Finds Ideal in the Husband Who Bought Her in the Open Market of Avarice.

Prim and Proper East Mixes With Big and Burly West in Marriage Mart.

Girl Who Married for Wealth and Ease is Agreeably Disappointed.

Dan Cupid Tricks Languid Society Belle Into Marriage With Man Who Made a Woman of Her.

Money is not the Main Thing When True Love Finally Awakes.

Stunt Suggestions: It is rather late to work on the wife-for-sale idea, but you can make some advertising capital out of the fact that the hero had the nerve to throw his mother-in-law and his troubles out of the house at the same time. A throwaway might be used starting off "Do you want your wife to love you?" and explaining the way will be shown in this feature. Use Miss Bennett's pictures freely for window work. Put a sand box in the lobby with a sign inviting the patron to cross the desert to a desert wooing.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three colums on star and production. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

Released June 23.

"THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY."

The Randolph Film Corp. Presents a New Version of This Famous Serial Story Condensed Into Six Acts of Vivid Action, the Very Essence of the Longer Story.

Cast

Hargreave.....Sidney Bracey
Countess Olga.....Marguerite Snow
Florence.....Florence La Badie
Jim Norton.....James Cruze
Gang Leader.....Mitchell Lewis

The Story: When Hargreave severs his connection with a Russian secret organization with which he became associated in his youth the members plan to wreck vengeance upon him. The fact that he was drawn a million dollars from a number of banks comes to the attention of the crooks, and they contrive to secure the money. Through her acquaintance with Florence, the daughter of Hargreave, Countess Olga, in league with the crooks, is enabled to give them invaluable aid, and they eventually gain entrance to the Hargreave house. A search for the money begins, but Hargreaves outwits them and escapes in a balloon. The gangsters, unable to locate the money, try to get Florence in their power, intending to force her to reveal the hiding place. Again they are frustrated, but still persist in their determination to come into possession of the million. A rapid succession of thrilling and most exciting events follow, with the perplexing problem cleared up in the climax.

Feature Sidney Bracey as Hargreave and Florence La Badie as Florence.

Stunt Suggestions: Most of your patrons will probably recall this very successful Thanhouser serial. Lay emphasis upon the fact that the entire action has been condensed into six reels and call attention to the cast of favorites. For two of three days before other advertising send a man out late at night to chalk $1,000,000 on sidewalks and fences or use as teaser snipes. The chalk work will be best if you can fix it with the police. Get out a throwaway with "If you had a million dollars" in large type following with "would it bother you as much as it did Hargreave in 'The Million Dollar Mystery?'"

"UP ROMANCE ROAD"

William Russell Presents Himself in a Five-Part Feature in Which a Prosaic Young Man Who Longed for Romance Found More Than He Bargained For.

Cast.

Gregory Thorne .....William Russell
Marta Milbanke.....Charlotte Burton
Samuel Thorne.....John Burton
Thomas Milbanke .....Joseph Belmont
Mrs. Milbanke.....Emma Kluge
Count Hilgar Eckstrom....Carl Stockdale
Hilda.....Claire Du Brey

Directed by Henry King.

The Story: Gregory Thorne and Marta Milbanke are engaged. Their fathers are millionaire ship owners. Gregory's efforts to inject a little excitement into their engagement life are fruitless, but when Mr. Milbanke receives an anonymous letter which threatens disaster to his home and fortune if he permits a ship load of supplies for the Allies to leave the docks the young man sees an opportunity for creating what he longs for and tells Mr. Milbanke that he knows who has written the letter but that he will not divulge the man's identity. Gregory, who suspects Count Hilgar Eckstrom, is told that he must terminate his engagement with Marta. But this is what Gregory wants, so he plans to abduct his sweetheart. Gregory's men clash with Eckstrom's gang, who has also come to kidnap Marta, and the disturbance results in the arrival of the police. Marta, by mistake, allows herself to be carried off by Eckstrom's men and is taken a prisoner. Gregory, following, is also made a captive, and the young people are held as hostages. How Gregory outwits Eckstrom and places him and his gang in the hands of the law brings about a startling climax.

Feature William Russell as Gregory Thorne and Charlotte Burton as Marta Milbanke.

The Story: Standish, an artist, finishes a painting of the Madonna. His wife, Mary, acted as model, and when the Connoisseur and the Parishioner inspect the picture, the former tells Standish that he recognizes in the model a one-time paramour of his. The Connoisseur and the Parishioner buy the painting and after their departure Standish upbraids his wife, who tells him that she believed herself legally married to the Connoisseur. Stand-

Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.

The Management of this Theatre
desires the co-operation of its patrons in providing good
clean entertainment. : : : :
We want no "legalized" censorship of moving pictures

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

ish refuses to accept her explanation and ejects her and their baby son. Mary leaves her boy on the steps of a monastery, and seventeen years later, just before becoming a monk, he receives permission to see the world. He wanders into a gay cafe and succumbs to the charms of Beauty. The other inmates of the place, Lust, Rum, Avarice and Passion are dancing around him when the proprietor enters. It is Mary, his mother. She recognizes him from the crucifix which he wears and which she left with him when he was a baby. Without revealing her indentity she persuades him to go back and later when he has become a priest, a bedraggled old woman (his mother) enters his church. She recognizes him and just before she dies her son gives her absolution.

Feature Emily Stevens as Mary Gadman and George Le Guere as her son.

Program and Advertising Phrases: The Toll of Sin Collected by Suffering Victim of Gross Betrayal.

Frail Woman Masters the Strength of Her Evil Genius.
Appealing Drama of Life in the Parisian Latin Quarter.
The Strength of the Weak Revealed in Deep Atonement.
Long Arm of Coincidence Reaches Out to Apprehend Plotters.

Stunt Suggestions: Make it clear to your patrons that this is a reissued story. If you used it before mention the fact. If it is new to your people dwell upon the success the play achieved at its first showing as "The Soul of a Woman." If you can get a really good oil painting of the Madonna use for lobby display with "Back of this picture lay the soul of a woman. See the wonderful story in Destiny (Date). With Emily Stevens." In newspaper work explain that reissued stories are the cream of past productions when offered as reissues and not under misleading titles and ask how often they have seen East Lynne or some similar play.

Advertising Aids: Two each, one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

"A WOMAN OF REDEMPTION."

World-Pictures Presents June Elvidge in a Different Sort of Story of the Great Woods.

Cast.

Gene Romaine.....June Elvidge
Jacques Romaine.....Charles H. Martin
Tim Stanton.....John Bowers
Timothy Stanton, Sr.....Alec Shannon
Boss McDaniels.....Albert Hart
Squaw.....Marie Pagano

Directed by Travers Vale.

The Story: Gene Romaine lives in the solitude of Tall Pine Mountain with her father, fire warden for the Stanton Lumber Company. They live alone, but her mother's grave is in the little clearing and the father has promised never to leave it. To them comes McDaniels, the logging boss, who is attracted by Jean and offers her father to discard his Indian wife for the young girl. Romaine indignantly refuses and is threatened with dismissal. Gene, knowing he cannot bear to leave his wife's grave, assents to the marriage in spite of her father's protests. Stanton, chief owner of the lumber company, maroons his worthless son in the woods, in the hope of reforming him. Gene takes care of him when he sprains his ankle, and he protects her from McDaniels and is blamed for the murder of the boss when his vengeful Indian wife stabs him in the back. Gene saves him from a mob of lynchers and the confession of the squaw paves the way to their happiness.

Feature June Elvidge as Gene Romaine, and Charles H. Martin as Jacques Romaine.

Stunt Suggestions: Offer a free admission to anyone who has loved and lost that he may take heart from and profit by the lesson of this story. If any joker takes you up, put him through the door, but later introduce him to the audience as a heart-broken seeker for sympathy. For the lobby paint or cut out a huge heart with a crack through it and advertise "Broken hearts mended here. If yours is broken see The Girl in His House (date). See it anyway." Use "If your heart is broken" as the catchline for a throwaway or card if you use such material.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Window cards. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Heralds. Slides. Plan book. Press sheet.
Released June 24.

"CLOSIN' IN"

Triangle Presents William Desmond in the Story of a Man Who Ran Away in Order to Shoulder the Burden of Another's Crime.

Cast.

Jack Brandon.....William Desmond
Barbara Carlton .....Maud Wayne
Mr. Carlton.....George Pearce
Burt Carlton.....Darrell Foss
Mrs. Carlton.....Alberta Lee
Jules La Roche.....Louis Durham
Sergeant Barry.....Bob Thompson
"Sour Dough" Green.....Graham Pette

Directed by J. W. McLaughlin.

The Story: Jack Brandon, in love with Barbara Carlton, assumes the responsibility for the defalcations of Barbara's father, who is president of the bank in which Jack is employed. Branded as a thief, Jack flees and joins the Mounted Northwest Police. Chance brings Barbara across Jack's pathway, but she declines to recognize him. Later he saves her from a bigamous marriage into which she has been lured. Word is then received of her father's deathbed confession exonerating Jack, so all ends happily.

Feature William Desmond as Jack Brandon and Maud Wayne as Barbara Carlton.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Misguided Sacrifice for Girl He Loves Nearly Ends Disastrously for Reckless Hero.
Innocent Man Branded a Crook by His Own Foolish Confession.
Self-Accused Bank Robber Caught in Web of False Suspicion.
Deathbed Confession of Guilt Places Crime on Unsuspected Coward.
Odd Outcome of an Innocent Man's Self-Sacrifice.
Romance and Adventure Lead Through Adversity to Happy Ending.

Stunt Suggestions: Send a man on the street with a sign on his chest bearing the single word "Thief" and on his back a card reading: "Jack Brandon bore the burden of another's crime to shield the girl he loved. See the interesting complications that followed in 'Closin' In' at (house and date)." Use much the same idea for newspaper work and throwaways. Also tell that this is a story of the Canadian Northwest Police unless you have had too many such stories lately.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.
Released June 23.

"A MAN'S WORLD"

Metro Presents Emily Stevens in an Adaptation of Rachel Crothers' Highly Successful Play of the Same Title.

Cast.

Frankie Ware .....Emily Stevens
David Powell.....John Merkyl
Malcolm Gaskell, the publisher
Frederick Truesdell
Lione Brune .....Florence Short
Kiddie .....Baby Ivy Ward
Larry Hanlon.....Walter Hiers
Emile Grimeaux.....Sidney Bracy
Clara Oakes, artist.....Vera Royer
Alice Ellery.....Lucile Dorrington

Directed by Herbert Bloche.

The Story: Frankie Ware, a novelist in Paris in search of atmosphere for her novel, soothes the last moments of Alice Ellery by promising to care for the latter's child, born out of wedlock. Alice refuses to name the father. Frankie returns to America and writes a book protesting against the man-made social laws that seem to rule the world. She gives no explanation of the child and gradually a rival builds up the suggestion that the book is her own defense for the presence of the child. Gaskell, her publisher, who is madly in love with her, demands to know the history of the child, and Frankie, in an inspiration, asks if he knew Alice Ellery in Paris. His confusion betrays him and she retorts "You wouldn't marry me if Kiddie were my child. I shall not marry you because he is yours." Gaskell seeks to force marriage, but is defeated and happiness comes to Frankie from another source.

Feature Emily Stevens as Frankie Ware and John Merkyl as David Powell.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Surprising Outcome of Sociological Promlem Photoplay Brings Thrilling Climax.
Moot Question Skillfully Answered in Gripping Screen Drama.
Exploding the Fallacy That This Is a Man's World.
Exposing the Inner Workings of New York's Artist Colony.
Famous Washington Square Society Revealed in Its True Light.
Sociological Drama of Gripping Appeal Acted by Star Cast of Photoplayers.

Stunt Suggestions: Make capital of the success of this play and dwell upon the question of morals this interesting story raises. If you can work it with the editor, precipitate a newspaper discussion. Once get it started and it will run itself. Start at least two weeks in advance of the play. Do not try street stunts and use paper for window displays.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.
Released June 24.

"WHEN MEN BETRAY."

Graphic Film Corp. Presents Ivan Abramson's Realistic Drama of Human Frailties With Gail Kane and An All-Star Cast.

Cast.

Raymond Edwardes.....Robert Elliott
Marion Edwardes.....Gail Kane
Vivian Edwardes.....Juliet Moore
Lucille Stanton.....Sally Crute
Florence.....Gertrude Braum
Alice.....Tallulah Bankhead
Bob Gardner.....Jack McLean
Mrs. Gardner.....Dora Mills Adams
Dick.....Reed Hamilton
Frederick Barton.....Stuart Holmes

Directed by Ivan Abramson.

The Story: The charms and beauty of Lucille Stanton prove irresistible to Raymond Edwardes and he breaks his marriage vows. His ears are deaf to the pleadings of his wife, Marion, and their five-year-old daughter, Vivian. On the evening that Frederick Barton, a friend of Edwardes, takes Marion to a reception, Alice, the younger sister of Edwardes, is betrayed by Bob Gardner, the fiance of Florence, and elder sister of Edwardes. But Edwardes realizes the folly of his action when he sees Barton in Lucille's room, and pleads with his wife to be forgiven. Bob is killed in a fight with Barton. Dick Gardner, to atone for his transgression, marries Alice, and the end of the drama shows a happy reunion of the household.

Feature Robert Elliott as Raymond Edwardes and Gail Kane as Marion, his wife.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Stirring Drama of Human Frailties Tinged With Gripping Sensations.
Sensational Domestic Drama Gives Fair Warning to Faithless Husbands.
Carnivals of Worldly Pleasures Substituted for Marital Felicity.
Great Domestic Problem Solved in Sensational Photodrama.
Husband and Wife Chose the Way of the World and Find Happiness.
Solving the Problem of Life in Sensational Melodrama.

Stunt Suggestions: This picture should not be stunted. Use straight advertising and emphasize the problem of whether two wrongs make a right.

Advertising Aids: Two styles of one sheet. Two styles of three sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14, 22x28. Press book. Double and single-column cuts. Slides. Heralds.

"HOW COULD YOU, JEAN?"

Artcraft Presents Mary Pickford, "the Star Perpetual," in an Absorbing Adaptation from Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd's Well Known Novel of That Title.

Cast.

Jean Mackaye.....Mary Pickford
Ted Burton, Jr.....Casson Ferguson
Burton, Sr.....Herbert Standing
Rufus Bonner.....Spottiswoode Aitken
Mrs. Bonner.....Fanny Midgley
Oscar, the Bonners' hired man, Larry Peyton
His Sweetheart.....Zazu Pitts
Susan Trent.....Mabelle Harvey
Mrs. Kate Morley.....Lucille Ward

Directed by William D. Taylor.

The Story: Left penniless through the wreckage of her fortune, Jean Mackaye decides that since she must earn her own living she will be a cook. But she is too pretty to get a job, so she procures an outfit from the Salvation Army and learns a Swedish dialect. Thus fortified, she obtains a position with the Bonners, an elderly couple living in the country, and her only trial is that their hired man insists upon falling in love with her. But Oscar is bribed by Ted Burton to resign, for Ted has seen the attractive little cook and wants the job himself, even if his father is so rich that to work would be foolish. He wins Jean's love and all comes well in the end, though not until many stirring incidents happen that go to make a story of absorbing interest.

Feature Mary Pickford as Jean Mackaye and Casson Ferguson as Ted Burton, Jr.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Misfortune Sends Pretty Aristocrat Into the Kitchen Where Too Much Beauty Spoils the Cooking.
Mary Pickford's Latest Screen success Shows Her in Role of Cook Who Finds Beauty and Kitchen Work Won't Mix.
How One Little Cook Spoiled Dan Cupid's Broth.
"America's Sweetheart" Comes to the Screen in Guise of Kitchen Maid.
Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd's Popular Novel Forms Clever Screen Entertainment.
Honest Toil as Servant Girl Wins Husband and Happiness for Aristocratic Victim of Misfortune.

Stunt Suggestions: In most localities it will be sufficient to play up the announcement of the star. If you can get a cow send it through the streets with a banner announcing that this is the cow of which Mary Pickford made a confidante in "How Could You, Jean?" or use toy cows for window work, with pictures of the star. Use a picture display, with a banner for the lobby.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

Released June 23.

"YOU CAN'T BELIEVE EVERYTHING"

Triangle Presents Gloria Swanson and a Host of Favorites in the Story of a Girl That Even Women Liked.

Cast.

Patria Reynolds.....Gloria Swanson
Arthur Kirby.....Darrell Foss
Hastings Carson.....Jack Richardson
Jim Wheeler.....Edward Piel
Chuck Danforth.....James Cope
Ferdinand Thatcher.....Grover Franke
Henry Pettit.....George Hernandez
Mrs. Powellson.....Kitty Brandbury
Mrs. Morton Danforth.....Bliss Chevalier
Amy Powellson.....Iris Ashton
Grace Darling.....Claire McDowell

Directed by Jack Conway.

The Story: Pat Reynolds was the sort of a girl that even the other women liked—to say nothing of all the single men. She was the queen of the summer colony. Gradually her suitors dropped off, discouraged, until but two remained—Kirby and Carson. Kirby took her motoring and when she refused to marry him he lost his head and tried to kiss her. Frightened at the outburst she jumped from the car and Kirby took another girl—wrapped in the cloak Pat had left in the car. Meanwhile Jim Wheeler, given up by his physicians, had determined to end it all. Pat dragged him from the water and made him promise to see the leading specialist, promising in turn never to reveal his attempted suicide. This sealed her lips when the gossips told that she had gone to a road house with Kirby, being recognized by the missing cloak. She passed a very unhappy summer, but Jim came back—cured—and all ended as well planned stories should.

Feature Gloria Swanson as Patria Reynolds and Edward Piel as Jim Wheeler.

Program and Advertising Phrases: It's Easy to Suspect and Hard to Defend the Purpose of Innocent Actions.
The Finger of Scorn Is Too Often Carelessly Pointed.
An Ideal Romance Brought to Happy Ending Under Unusual Circumstances.
Trifling With Good Reputations Frustrates the Joy of Wagging Tongues.
See This Clever Play and Have Done With Dangerous Gossip.
Cleverest of Photoplays Carries Delight to "Surprise Ending."

Stunt Suggestions: In your press work dwell on the beauty of the swimming scenes and the exciting episode of the rescue. Make good use of the catchline value of the title, as "You can't believe everything, but take it from us that You Can't Believe Everything is a story you can't afford to miss. It's a wonder." Some of the stills should make good lobby display. Have your frame-maker cut mats to give the pictures greater prominence. Play up the local favorites in the unusually good cast.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.

"THE EAGLE"

Bluebird Presents Monroe Salisbury and Edna Earle in a Story of Unofficial Justice That Very Nearly Resulted in the Death of an Innocent Man.

Cast.

John Gregory.....Monroe Salisbury
Lucy.....Edna Earle
Bob.....Ward Wing

Directed by Elmer Clifton.

The Story: The mother of John Gregory is swindled of a large sum of money by a mining company. It causes her death and John, vowing to get back the money by stealing it, assumes the disguise of an Indian and becomes known as "The Eagle." Going to the office to take a shipment of money he finds Bob, the brother of Lucy, his sweetheart, attacking the guard. Bob is wounded, but Gregory helps him to escape. He is later captured, however, and is accused of not only killing the guard, but also of committing the robberies perpetrated by Gregory. Things are looking pretty black for Bob at the trial when Gregory and Lucy come in, she having discovered that Gregory committed the thefts and having forced him to court. He tells his story, and the mining company, realizing that it never could convict Gregory, withdraws its case against Bob. With their troubles ended, Gregory and Lucy are married.

Feature Monroe Salisbury as John Gregory and Edna Earle as Lucy.

Program and Advertising Phrasis: Thrilling Melodrama of Western Wilds With Gripping Love Plot to Excite Heart-Interest.
Carrying a Vengeful Vow to the Limit of Human Sacrifice.
Wild Riding and Straight Shooting Give Thrills to Melodrama.
Eloquent Thief Wins His Own Case Before Judge Lynch.
Sturdy Justice of the "Woolly West" Settles Claim of Vengeance.
Thrills and Surprises Sustain Interest in Gripping Photoplot.

Stunt Suggestions: If you can work it, a good stunt would be to have a man in Indian dress driven through the streets by a girl in western costume who holds a revolver on him. On her back place a sign "If you want to see why I am driving my sweetheart to jail, see 'The Eagle' at (house and date)." For a dodger use "Have you been robbed? If you have do not follow the course of John Gregory in 'The Eagle' and try to execute justice yourself. See the play at (house and date) and be warned.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts in three sizes. Scene cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.
Released June 22.

NATIONAL WAR SAVINGS DAY JUNE 28th

That's the day we sign up.

That's the day we tell Uncle Sam just how hard we want to win this war. That's the day our government has officially set for us to purchase War Savings Stamps.

On June 28th every man, woman and child in the United States will be called upon to pledge his or her full quota of War Savings Stamp purchases for 1918.

You will be expected to pledge the full amount that you can afford —no more—but by the same token, no less.

In every state, county, city, town and village the War Savings Committees are preparing for this big patriotic rally of June 28th. Unless you have already bought War Savings Stamps to the $1,000 limit, get busy with paper and pencil and figure out the utmost you can do.

Remember this. You take no chances when you go the limit on War Savings Stamps. They are the best and safest investment in the world.

They pay you 4% interest compounded quarterly. They can't go below par. You can get back every dollar you put into War Savings Stamps any time you need it. You can turn them in at the Post Office any time for their full value plus interest.

Uncle Sam is asking hundreds of thousands of men to give their lives to their country. He is asking you only to lend your money.

What are you lending?

Sure Fire Helps to Success

The CHALMERS PUBLISHING CO., publishers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and CINE MUNDIAL, the leading trade papers devoted to the Motion Picture Industry, are also publishers of the only library of practical text books dealing with the cinema art adapted to the every-day needs of those already engaged in the business or about to engage in it.

These text books, six in number, have been written by men carefully selected for their proven knowledge of the subjects to be covered, being almost without exception veteran members of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD'S editorial staff; entirely without exception these men are at present actively engaged in the motion picture business—they are not dreamers or theorists.

Each text book has been written to provide real help to the individual who reads it—consistent with the unswerving policy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD—a genuine "Dedication to Service."

Motion Picture Handbook

for Managers and Operators

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Third Edition

The most complete, exhaustive and instructive work ever published on the projection of moving pictures. Contains complete instruction with detail illustrations on all leading makes of American projection machines and practical information on wiring, lenses, carbon settings, screens, theatre equipment, etc., etc. 700 pages and over 300 illustrations, $4.00, postage paid.

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A real help and business builder for exhibitors, theatre managers and owners. It tells all about theatre advertising, type, printing and paper, house programs, lobby displays, newspaper advertising, posters, heralds, etc., etc. 300 pages. $2.00, postage paid. P. S.—Mr. Sargent conducts a weekly department in this same style in the Moving Picture World, which contains many up-to-date business-getting ideas.

Motion Picture Electricity

By J. H. HALLBERG

An up-to-date work on the electrical equipment of picture theatres by a practical electrical expert. Contains chapters on electricity, D.C. and A.C. current, resistance and resistance devices, electric service, wiring, lighting, etc. Also contains practical suggestions and all necessary reference tables on wire sizes and capacity, weights and measures, heat units, etc., etc. 260 pages, illustrated. $2.50, postage paid.

Modern Theatre Construction

By EDWARD BERNARD KINSILA

Our newest book is one that will fill a long-felt want to those contemplating the building of a theatre. This is a very complete and exhaustive work by an architect with many years of practical experience in theatre and studio construction. Fully illustrated, with considerable data as to requirements, construction cost, building laws, etc. $3.00, postage paid.

Technique of the Photoplay

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Third Edition

Complete instruction in photoplay writing, including study of plots, how to obtain and how to develop; writing the synopsis; studio requirements; script preparation and marketing; technical terms; examples of actual scripts in facsimile typewriting, etc. 400 pages. $3.00, postage paid.

Screencraft

or the Making of a Photoplay

By LOUIS REEVES HARRISON

A comprehensive and thought-provoking treatment of the subject in a series of chapters, similar to a university course of lectures, by a successful writer of photoplays. Also contains a complete working scenario and several sample pages of manuscript. 150 pages; illustrated. $2.00, postage paid.

MOTION PICTURE CARBONS

For Perfect Alternating Current Projection

White A. C. Special Carbons have been used in all parts of the country by critical projectionists and have met the requirements so exactly that they are considered the standard of alternating current carbons. These carbons give a pure white light of high intensity and an absolutely quiet arc.

To get perfect pictures on alternating current requires no change of equipment. Simply take out the old carbons and insert the White A. C. Specials.

SILVERTIPS FOR DIRECT CURRENT PROJECTION
Silvertips combine satisfactorily the features of steady arc and maximum brilliancy

NATIONAL CARBON COMPANY, INC., Cleveland, Ohio

Even the slightest investigation, will soon convince the interested observer that is the lusty offspring of the Moving Picture World

CINE-MUNDIAL

The only difference is that Cine-Mundial talks Spanish and Portuguese. Otherwise it's a case of the same efficiency, the same thoroughness of circulation, the same genuineness of representation and the same knowledge of how to serve the cinematographic trade.

Index to Reviews, Comments, and Advertising Aids on the Films

Appended is a list of subjects which have been released during the three months ending June 30, 1918, and upon the majority of which have been published reviews, comments, or advertising aids. This list is as accurate as it is possible to make it with the information that we have received from the companies whose productions are included. Should any of our readers detect errors, we shall be pleased to have our attention called to them so that we may correct our card index. The letter before the folio indicates the page where the review, comment, or advertising aids can be found. "R" stands for review; "C" for comment; and "A" for advertising aids. Where reference letter is omitted it signifies that none was published. Of the later releases where any or all reference letters are omitted it may be said that the missing information, or part of it, will probably be published in the next volume.

N. B.—Comments or reviews of episodes of serials or series are indexed in connection with general title of such serial or series and not under title of each episode. Date shown for Pathe subjects indicates the week during which they were released. "S" indicates synopsis, publication of which has been discontinued.
